BUT PAPAL ENCYCLICAL CAUTIOUS

Population Control Endorsed

By BENNETT BOLTON

VATICAN CITY (AP)—Pope Paul gave a carefully qualified endorsement today to government action to control population but did not indicate any relaxation in the Roman Catholic Church's opposition to artificial means of birth control.

In the fifth encyclical of his reign, the Pope made clear that the "rightful freedom" of married couples who are opposed to artificial means of contraception, for moral reasons or under the guidance of their bishops, must be respected.

Vatican sources said however, the new attitude was likely to clear the way for government laws to make birth control information available to the public in places where Catholic pressure has opposed this in the past.

Some sources said it might even end organized Catholic opposition to government laws permitting distribution of contraceptive pills in welfare and public aid programs.

CITES SOCIAL PROBLEMS

The encyclical deals with the world's social problems. In the section on population growth, the pontiff declared that "the temptation is great to check the demographic population increase by radical measures." He added:

"Public authorities can intervene, within the limit of their competence, by favoring the availability of appropriate information and by adopting suitable measures, provided that these be in conformity with the moral law and that they respect the rightful freedom of married couples."

The encyclical, which appealed for social and economic justice, also said that unlimited capitalism is a "woeful system." It endorsed the redistribution among the poor of large estates which are "unused or poorly 'used' and criticized wealthy tax dodgers who transfer income abroad to escape obligations to aid the welfare of their countries.

The encyclical was entitled Populorum Progresio — on the development of Peoples—from its first words. It dealt with material things of the world rather than with religious or spiritual themes. The document bore the date of last Sunday, Easter, March 26.

The section of demography conceded that "too frequently an accelerated demographic increase adds its own difficulties to the problems of development: The size of the population increases more rapidly than available resources, and things are found to have apparently reached an impasse."

But the pope returned to the church's traditional stand on birth control, stating:

"Finally, it is for the parents to decide, with full knowledge of the matter, on the number of their children, taking into account their responsibilities toward God, themselves, the chil-

Thant Truce Plan Accepted by U.S.

Wrecked Tanker Bombed

RN, RAF Attempts Futile Against Oil

LAND'S END, England (AP) British bombers set the shattered tanker Torrey Canyon and the sea around it ablaze today in an effort to destroy spreading oil, but within two hours the fire went out.

More Royal Navy and RAF planes were immediately prepared for a fresh attempt to prevent the spread of oil from the giant freighter's cargo, which had already polluted 120 miles of England's southwest coastline.

First Royal Navy planes blasted the tanker with 1,000-pound bombs. Then RAF planes moved in with napalm in an attempt to keep the oil which seeped out of the bomb-shattered tanker burning.

Little of the tanker remained above water after the navy planes dropped their loads.

The decision to bomb what was left of the Torrey Canyon came on the same day that the Dutch salvage company, which had tried for days to liberate the ship from the rocks, announced its four tugs had been withdrawn.

How the bombing would help stop the seepage of oil toward the southwestern English coast was not made clear.

EXPERIMENT FAILS

The bombing followed a fruitless experiment designed to set the giant oil slick afire by shooting incendiary "bricks" into the area from an electric gun aboard a helicopter 50 feet up. The devices functioned but didn't ignite the oil.

Twin-jets Buccaneer aircraft, normally equipped with missiles and rockets, reverted to conventional bombs and moved on to the wrecked tanker, stuck on the Seven Stones Reef for the last 11 days, to complete the job the jagged rocks, the seas and storms had started.

They were ordered to deliver the coup de grace by the defence ministry after earlier attempts to set alight the giant oil slick from the Torrey Canyon appeared ineffective.

Moments after the Buccaneers dumped their loads on the Seven Stones — graveyard of every ship that ever got stuck on this reef — results were clearly apparent.

FLAMES SHOOT UP

The tanker, broken by the seas in three parts, burst into a mass of flames. Smoke rose 2,000 feet in the air.

Maritime experts predicted that the disaster, which threatens to pollute south Britain's holiday beaches for years to come, will force a drastic revision of British maritime law.

The dark scum coated 120 miles off England's most prosperous vacation coast, and the government set up emergency oil-fighting committees as the ooze spread up the Channel. But Navy Minister Maurice Foley, directing operations from Plymouth, said:

"Given the extra oil now flowinto off Cornwall, all the extra men and equipment in the world could not deal with this problem."

On shore, 1,500 troops and 1,000 firemen tried to remove oil advancing over the sands. Fire trucks hosed down the beaches after troops attacked the scum with scrapers and detergents.

SOCIAL CREDIT

Gaglardi Says Leadership Not for Him

Highways Minister P. A. Gaglardi denied today that he had ever expressed an interest in the leadership of the National Social Credit party.

He made the statement in answer to comments passed by Walter Bowden, director of the Manitoba Social Credit League in Winnipeg.

Mr. Bowden is quoted as saying that Mr. Gaglardi had informed him some time ago that he would be interested in the party leadership but not if it involved running against Robert Thompson.

Mr. Thompson resigned from the leadership two weeks ago.

Mr. Bowden said he was surprised that it was taking so long for Mr. Gaglardi to state his views.

MISQUOTED?

"I have not knowledge of ever making such a statement," Mr. Gaglardi said this morning. "And I have no further comment."

Earlier Mr. Gaglardi had expressed surprise that the Manitoba Social Crediters had gone on record as fully supporting him in any campaign for party leadership.

"I have been hearing noises about this for the last couple of months," he said. "They have come from various directions. I have no further

Asked whether he would consider the party leadership the usually vociferous minister again declined comment.

The Manitoba group is calling for a leadership convention in Winnipeg in October and has pledged its full support to Mr. Gaglardi if he decides to seek the office

Geneva Talks Sought

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The United States disclosed today it has accepted U Thant's latest Vietnam peace proposals calling for a general truce. It said it is prepared to begin discussions immediately to work out details.

The U.S. reply to the proposals of the United Nations Secretary - General was made public shortly after Thant unveiled his plan at a press conference.

The Thant plan envisages a ceasefire to be followed by preliminary talks aimed at convening a new Geneva peace conference.

Thant said he had sent his proposals March 14 to all the parties directly concerned and that some had replied. He said he does not consider any of the answers as a categorical rejection.

WANTS NEGOTIATIONS

The U.S. reply said:

"The United States accepts the three-point proposal in the aide-memoire of the secretary-general of 14 March 1967. . . .

"The United States believes it would be desirable and contributory to serious negotiations if an effective cessation of hostilities, as the first element in the three-point proposal, could be promptly negotiated.

"It would, therefore, be essential that the details of such a general cessation of hostilities be discussed directly by both sides or through the secretary-general, the Geneva conference co-chairmen or otherwise as may be agreed.

"The United States is prepared to enter into such discussions immediately and constructively."

INVOLVES VIETNAM

The U.S. note said it was assumed that the government of South Vietnam would be "appropriately involved throughout the entire process."

The secretary - general expressed concern over what he called the recent escalation of the fighting and expressed fears that the Vietnam conflict might spread unless checked.

Thant disclosed that he had presented his proposals orally to a North Vietnamese delegation on his recent visit to Burma and that he had later sent the plan in a memorandum to other interested countries.

Teachers to Walk Out Of Oversize Classes

British Columbia teachers voted Monday to walk out of any classroom in September which has more than 40 students.

There are 28 classes of 40 or more students in Greater Victoria at present.

More than 1,000 delegates to the B.C. Teachers' Federation convention in Vancouver unanimously approved the walkout action to culminate their campaign for smaller classes.

But Joseph Chell, Greater Victoria school superintendent, said class size is, to some extent, a matter of school organization.

He said that in the area the ratio of teachers to students is approximately one to 35 in elementary schools and one to 24 in senior schools.

However, some principals group students into larger groups for certain kinds of instruction.

SITUATION IN DOUBT

Mr. Chell said there is no way of knowing now what the situation will be this fall. However, he added, "While it is up to principals to organize classes in their schools we will want to know the reason for any large classes."

Mr. Chell said he preferred not to comment on the teacher's decision to walk out of the larger classes.

The teachers' convention decided that responsibility for the walkout should rest with the federation or the local teachers' association, not the individual teacher.

They also voted in favor of "moral and financial support

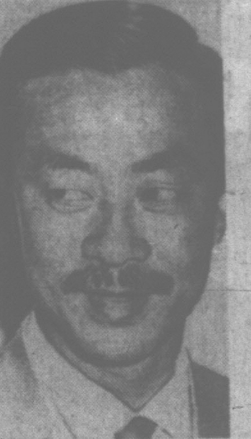
'Leave Talks to Us' Premier Ky Proposes



KY

GIO LINH, South Vietnam (AP)—Premier Nguyen Cao Ky today offered his own three-step plan for peace in Vietnam.

A complete ceasefire, two-way talks between Saigon and Hanoi and an international guarantee might achieve peace, Ky told reporters aboard his private plane on a flight to the northern sector.

In answer to questions about peace feelers, Ky said:

"We are always hearing that the United States is starting talks with Moscow or Hanoi or somebody. Why? Why don't they stay in the background and let us deal with Hanoi and negotiate when the time is right?

"Too many points of view and proposals are confusing things. South and North alone should talk on the thing they know best—Vietnam."

'All CCF Should Quit'

REGINA (CP)—Former CCF cabinet ministers and MLAs were accused in the legislature today of diverting $500,000 in public funds to their party through a party-owned publishing company.

In making the charge, A. R. Guy (L—Athabaska) called for resignation of the entire CCF opposition.

His statements and the following heated debate came after discussion of a motion for return by a Liberal member seeking value of contracts for printing, if any, let to Service Printing Co. of the CCF by the Queen's Printer during the last four years of CCF rule.

WIRE BRIEFS

Not Confirmed

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Pearson declined today to confirm a reported statement by Robert Thompson, who resigned recently as Social Credit leader, that an external affairs department job had been offered to him.

Quake Hits Chile

CHILE (UPI) — A strong earthquake rocked the area of La Ligua, about 100 miles north of Santiago, today. There was no immediate report of casualties or damages. The seismology institute at the University of Chile said the quake registered a force of 5 on the international scale.

13 Found Safe

OTTAWA (CP)—Thirteen persons feared missing on a journey over Arctic ice have been found and are safe in Igloolik, their destination, a northern development department official said today.

Land Mine Kills 13

DA DANG (AP) — Thirteen U.S. marines were killed and one was wounded today when a land mine accidentally exploded during a class in mine warfare in this South Vietnam centre, a marine spokesman said.

Laos Raid Kills 9

VIENTIANE, Laos (AP)—A young American volunteer worker and eight Laotians were killed when Communist Pathet Lao troops raided an isolated village before dawn Saturday, the U.S. embassy reported today.

Governor-General's Naming 'Next Week'

OTTAWA (CP)—Prime Minister Pearson indicated today that it will be next week at the earliest before the name of Canada's new governor - general is announced.

He told a news conference he expects simultaneous announcement; will be made in London and Ottawa of the successor to Gen. Georges P. Vanier who died three weeks ago.

Mr. Pearson sat reporters around the huge oval cabinet table following a cabinet executive meeting and said he will have announcements next week of significance. He declined to indicate their nature.

He was asked about possible cabinet changes and replied:

"I didn't mention cabinet changes."

He also said it would be "quite improper" at this time for him to discuss in public a successor to Governor - General Vanier.

The prime minister said he expects dates will be set soon for the visits of President Johnson and President de Gaulle to Expo 67. Normally they would first come to Ottawa before touring the world's fair site in Montreal.

With Parliament resuming April 3, he said, items that the government wants dealt with include the bill to unify the three armed forces into a single service, a report on Commons rules, and temporary spending authority for one month of the fiscal year which begins April 1.

Arrests Protested

NEW YORK (CP)—Twenty-five youthful artists demonstrated today in front of the building housing the Canadian consulate in protest of the arrest of three pantomimists in Calgary on marijuana charges.

Strike Threat

NEW YORK (UPI) — Local newsmen and staff announcers of radio and television stations in the U.S. have announced they may walk out after midnight tonight if bargaining in their pay dispute is not resumed.

Greece Expels Russ Diplomats in Spy Hunt

ATHENS (AP) — Two Soviet diplomats have been ordered to leave Greece by Wednesday night, apparently because they were involved with an alleged Soviet ring spying on North Atlantic Treaty Organization bases in the Mediterranean area.

The foreign ministry issued expulsion orders for Albert Zaharov, second secretary in the Soviet embassy, and Igor Ochurkov, a member of the Soviet commercial delegation. The foreign ministry said incriminating evidence had been compiled against them concerning activities incompatible with their status.

Unofficial sources believe the pair was part of the spy ring disclosed last week with the arrest of three Italians. Since then, one Soviet diplomat has hurriedly left Italy, two Russians have been expelled from Cyprus, several civilians have been arrested in Cyprus, and Swiss police said arrests may be made there.

The three Italians, charged Wednesday in Turin with espionage for the Soviet Union, are Giorgio Rinaldi, 39, an exhibition parachutist; his wife, Angela Maria, 52, and their chauffeur, Armando Girard, 40.

Reports circulated in Turin Monday that the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency wanted to talk to six American parachutists who knew Rinaldi and participated with him and an Italian group of chutists in a mass jump at Stuttgart, West Germany, in September, 1962.

The Americans were not identified, but the CIA was said to be interested in the contacts they had with Rinaldi.

NEW YORK—Barry Goldwater says he favors Richard Nixon as the Republican presidential candidate in 1968 but believes Sen. Charles Percy (R.-Ill.) is the only potential candidate acceptable to a majority of the GOP.

PERCY
. . . could be tough

"Everybody says Nixon is the best-trained man for the job," said Goldwater, the 1964 GOP presidential candidate. "And then everybody turns right around and says he can't be elected. I don't believe that's true, but I don't see how to tear that image down."

As for Percy, Goldwater said he "might be the most dangerous against (President) Johnson, provided he could show he was really knowledgeable about foreign policy."

Goldwater said former Vice-President Nixon would go to the 1968 Republican convention with the most delegate strength but not a majority.

As for Gov. George Romney of Michigan, Goldwater said he was "handsome and a nice guy, but he just hasn't caught on."

LOS ANGELES — Film actress Jayne Mansfield, claiming her estranged husband Matt Cimber struck and bit her, filed a $345,000 assault and battery suit against him Monday.

The entertainer said Cimber, whose real name is Thomas Vitale Ottaviano, assaulted her four times last April, using his "fists and mouth."

She said she was unable to work after Cimber allegedly "kicked and stomped" and hit her "about the face and body in a fit of rage."

12 Firemen Limit for '67 Council Told

An extra 12 fire-fighters should be hired by Saanich this year, fire committee chairman Coun. Alan Newberry said today.

This would bring the department's strength to 68 men.

"I still think in one year to bring 12 men on is sufficient," he said.

Last year, an official of the provincial fire marshal's office recommended, after a survey, that 78 new men be hired — more than doubling the present 56-man staff.

This ran into a cool reception from council. One councillor said the report should be consigned to the waste basket.

Last September, fire chief Joseph Sutherland recommended 24 men be added to the department.

COMPROMISE

"It is the old story of compromise between the ideal and the practical," said Coun. Newberry.

"I will recommend 12."

He said a fire committee recommendation for hiring a training officer will come before council Monday night.

The proposal ran into opposition from three councillors earlier and was tabled.

Coun. Newberry said once that is decided, it "leaves us clear" to discuss manpower at Tuesday night's fire committee meeting.

Council will go through the provisional budget some time next month.

Last year, the fire department cost $443,755.

This year's provisional budget estimated the cost of fire protection at $588,455.

This allowed for the hiring of 24 new men for a full year, but it was emphasized at the time that no decision had been made by council and the addition was based on Chief Sutherland's report.

SHIP FIXES ENGINES; CITY TUG TURNS BACK

The Island Tug & Barge rescue tug Sudbury II turned for home again Monday when her mission was reported a false alarm.

The deep-sea tug was on her way to rescue a 10,000-ton Formosan freighter, Hai Ping, out of operation 2,500 miles in the Pacific with boiler trouble.

The freighter radioed she was under way again and the Sudbury was recalled.

She was to have reached the freighter, which was bound for Houston, by Sunday next.

Guerrilla War Opens In Bolivia Badlands

LA PAZ, Bolivia (AP)—President Rene Barrientos decreed a state of emergency Monday in the Bolivian southeast and announced the governments determination to crush a guerrilla movement.

He announced the air force was using napalm in attacks on the guerrillas.

Barrientos told reporters the Bolivian territory has been invaded by insurgents of various nationalities, mostly of Castro-Communist inspiration.

Barrientos said the air force is using napalm bombs and carried out raids Monday and Sunday. He added that 39 persons were jailed during the weekend and then sent into the interior of the country.

Gen. Jorge Belmonte Ardiles, temporary commander in chief of the armed forces, said he has information that Ernesto Che Guevara, Cuban Communist who dropped out of sight two years ago, has some connection with the Bolivian guerrilla movement.

Mines Must Increase Efficiency

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada's mining industry must strive for greater efficiency to maintain and increase its world - wide markets, the Canadian Institute of Mining and Metallurgy was told today.

Pierre Camu, president of the St. Lawrence Seaway Authority, said transportation "at the lowest possible cost" is critical in efficiency, especially for producers of raw materials.

"The saving of a few cents per ton can open new markets, revitalize industries and strengthen competitive positions of consumers dependent on the raw material involved," he told a luncheon at the institute's annual meeting.

Developments of Labrador's iron ore was a prime example. If the seaway had not opened in 1959 to provide low-cost water transportation, "it is doubtful that these ore bodies could have been developed to their scale."

But there also is a need for greater participation of Canadians in "financing and management of this country's mining operations" and "a greater degree of secondary and tertiary processing in Canada, with a consequent need for new export markets."

FUTURE SHOPPERS

Computer Will Pay Your Bill

WASHINGTON (AP)—In the not too distant future, you'll walk into a supermarket, buy the week's groceries and order a computer to pay the bill without one penny or even a cheque changing hands.

That's the forecast of George W. Mitchell, a member of the U.S. Federal Reserve Board, in what he and the banking community term a "chequeless society."

"It's coming very, very hard," Mitchell said in an interview.

"By the early 1970s, the system might be set up. When people find out it's easier and more convenient to do business this way they'll take to the change."

Mitchell said computers will make the new system possible but won't eliminate coins, dollar bills or some cheques. But he and others foresee the "cash card" as the main money instrument of the future.

Mitchell said it will have one excellent side effect—eliminating cheques which might bounce.

Who's Who, What's What In New Orleans Line-Up

NEW ORLEANS (UPI)—District Attorney Jim Garrison's investigation of the Kennedy assassination has bloomed into a national jungle of leads, charges, counter-charges and rumors.

One significant development has occurred since Garrison announced last month he had solved the assassination and would arrest everyone connected with it.

Three district judges, after a four-day hearing, decided the New Orleans prosecutor had enough evidence to hold businessman Clay L. Shaw, whom Garrison accuses of plotting the assassination.

Since Shw-s March 14-17 preliminary hearing, most of the debate has centred around the testimony of Garrison's star witness, Perry R. Russo.

Russo, a 25-year-old Baton Rouge, La., insurance man, testified that Shaw, presidential assassin Lee Harvey Oswald and pilot David W. Ferrie conspired to kill the president in September, 1963.

Subsequently:

—Raymon Cummings, a Dallas taxi driver, said he took Oswald, Ferrie and an "older man" to Jack Ruby's Dallas night club in 1963.

—Dean Andrews, an attorney who once gave Oswald legal advice in New Orleans, was indicted for perjury by a grand jury. Andrews said a man named Clay Bertrand—the name Garrison charges Shaw used as an alias—tried to get him to defend Oswald the day after the assassination.

—Gordon Novel, a witness subpoenaed by Garrision sold his New Orleans lounge, left town, and has not returned, despite a court order to come back as a "material witness" or be arrested. Novel showed up in various locations, announced Garrison's probe was a "fraud" and challenged the district attorney to take a lie detector test.

—Sandra Moffit, the girl Russo said he accompanied to a September, 1963, party in Ferrie's apartment at which the assassination was discussed, said in Omaha, Neb., she did not attend. She also said she never heard of Ferrie until 1965. Garrison obtained a court order for her arrest as a material witness.

—Layton Martens, a former roommate of Ferrie's, said Ferrie did not know either Oswald or Shaw. Martens has been subpoenaed to appear before the grand jury Wednesday.

A Boston dishwasher, Arthur E. Strout, said he was flying to New Orleans with important evidence to Garrison, reportedly a picture of the conspirators in Ruby's nightclub. Not much has been heard from Strout since then.

—David R. Kroman, an attorney on trial in a $3 million insurance fraud case, told a judge in Bismark, N.D., he was forced off a highway as he drove to Bismarck with documents proving Oswald did not kill Kennedy after all. The judge ordered a mental examination for him.

The Pope said speed is necessary to bring balance between the world's rich and poor, although he warned against revolution. Instead he proposed:

1. "A great world fund, to be made up of part of the money spent on arms, to relieve the most destitute of this world."

2. A careful study of reorganization of various aid programs to keep them from being "scattered or isolated."

3. Higher taxes on the rich to meet the cost of aid, and higher prices on imported goods.

4 A revision of interest rates and systems of loan repayment "so as not to be too great a burden on either party."

5. Establishment of price regulations, production guarantees, support for new industries and controls upon world trade "without abolishing the competitive market."

Poster Contest Winners Named

Judging has been completed and winners named in the Bastion Theatre sponsored World Theatre Day Poster contest for children.

Group 1 (pre-school) first prize winner is Rosanne Farnden, 1064 Gosper Crescent, aged four; second, Erich Billung-Mayer, 2554 Arbutus Road, aged four; third, Jeremy Oldham, 511 Victoria Avenue, aged five.

Group 2 (Grades I to III), first, Christopher Sequeira, 3175 Alder Street (Grade II); second, Gary Farnden, 1064 Gosper Crescent (Grade III); third, Darlene Sagmoen, 3740 Carey Road (Grade II).

Group 3 (Grades IV to VII), first, Teresa Low, 2516 Blanshard (Grade VII); second, Jesse White, 784 Hillside (Grade VII); third, Adele Morris, Box 69, Sooke P.O. (Grade IV).

The prizes—$10 for the first, a book for second and a children's record for third, each with two passes to Bastion Theatre's holiday musical treat, The Enchanted Princess, are being presented on stage this week following performances which begin at 2 at McPherson Playhouse.

for any teacher who refused to teach a regular class of 40 or more pupils."

Les Isaacson, principal of Macaulay elementary school in Esquimalt and chairman of a federation committee on effective teaching and learning conditions, said 411 of the 8,032 B.C. classes—five per cent—now have 40 or more students.

Mr. Isaacson said this was an improvement from last year when seven per cent, or 509 classes, were overpopulated.

Meanwhile, he said, there were 5,222 classes of 35 or fewer students this year, compared with 4,211 in 1966.

"The class size is steadily dropping," he said. "Our campaign is evidently bearing some fruit."

A motion from the floor proposing a limit of 30 pupils in "split classrooms" containing more than one grade, was defeated.

'TOO TRADITIONAL'

Robald Brown, principal of a West Vancouver elementary school, said this limit couldn't be reconciled with the trend toward gradeless schools.

James Balderson, a teacher from Alberni, said large classrooms were turning teachers into highly paid baby sitters.

"I am a teacher," said Mr. Balderson. "I don't want to be a highly paid baby sitter. Are we going to be teachers or just tranquilizers for large classes of pupils in our care?"

Today's session of the three-day convention will debate resolutions from the Surrey and Abbotsford teachers' associations in support of strike action as "a means of implementing demands."

WEATHER SYNOPSIS

Skies over B.C. were generally cloudy early this morning with widely scattered showers along the coast and a few snow flurries in the Kootenay district. Minimum temperatures ranged from a chilly 13 at Smithers to 42 at Victoria.

Showers of rain or wet snow will persist in coastal areas today behind a Pacific disturbance which crossed the lower mainland early this morning. A clearing trend will develop along the coast this afternoon and evening, however, as a ridge of high pressure builds offshore. Mainly sunny weather is expected in most sections on Wednesday but temperatures will remain cool.

CHALLENGE RULED OUT

Kennedy Plans Campaign In Support of Johnson

By JACK BELL

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senator Robert F. Kennedy's announced intention to campaign for President Johnson in 1968 is beginning to shape up as a major test of political skill for the senator.

Kennedy confirmed Monday what he has been saying for a long time—he will not challenge Johnson for the Democratic presidential nomination next year.

The senator made it known through an aide that he would file the necessary sworn disclaimer of presidential intentions in Oregon, Nebraska or any other state wheer his name might be entered in a presidential primary.

KENNEDY
. . . little choice

This could change, of course, if something took Johnson out as a candidate for re-election.

But the action points Kennedy toward the necessity of campaigning vigorously to elect an individual with whom he has personal and political differences not likely to be reconciled in the months that lie ahead.

Kennedy obviously wants to carve out a position within the party that will set him apart from the Johnson administration—but not too far apart.

Some of his friends think Kennedy may have gone a little too far in this direction with his February White House spat with the president and his subsequent reiterated criticism of Johnson for not stopping the bombing of North Vietnam in the absence of any sign this would bring peace talks.

An embarrassment of publicity riches had put the senator from New York in a position where anti-Johnson Democrats, primarily the party's liberals and youthful Vietnam protesters, have embraced him as their leader.

To hold this following intact as a nucleus for a probable bid for the 1972 presidential nomination, Kennedy cannot afford to compromise with Johnson or even soften his war position materially.

He must be for Johnson as "an outstanding president," as Kennedy himself has classified him, but against some of his most important policies.

This will present a king-size dilemma for the senator if he campaigns side by side with Johnson through New York or undertakes individial speeches for the 1968 ticket in other states.

Politicians agree, however, that Kennedy will have to dig in vigorously for Johnson. Otherwise, if the president were defeated the senator would be blamed for the loss and if Johnson won without his help Kennedy's political standing would slump.

U.S. Put on 'Red Alert' When Kennedy Killed

By RELMAN MORIN

NEW YORK (AP)—Fears of an international plot to overthrow the United States government prompted Defence Secretary Robert S. McNamara to alert every American military base around the world the minute he heard that President Kennedy had been shot in Dallas, William Manchester says.

"By every readable signal the situation was very red," Manchester writes in his book, The Death of a President.

The much-disputed book contains 350,000 words of text, plus diagrams, appendices and a list of sources. The price is $10 a copy.

McNamara "kept his head and made all the right moves" even before he learned that Kennedy was dead, Manchester says. The world-wide warning told American military commanders: "This is the time to be especially alert."

Lyndon B. Johnson, who succeeded Kennedy as president, is quoted in the book as saying "there might be war" if Americans become aroused by suspicions that Soviet Premier Khrushchev and Cuban Premier Castro had conspired to kill Kennedy.

It was the "wild rumors" about a conspiracy that brought the Warren commission into existence, Manchester says. The commission, after a long investigation, concluded that Lee Harvey Oswald — and Oswald alone — assassinated President Kennedy.

Johnson, as president, had difficulty persuading Chief Justice Earl Warren to head the inquiry, Manchester says, because Warren opposed "extra-curricular activity" by Supreme Court justices.

Manchester quotes Warren as saying: "The president told me how serious the situation was. He said there had been wild rumors and there was the international situation to think of. He said he had just talked to State Secretary Dean Rusk, who was concerned. . . . He said that if the public became aroused against Castro and Khrushchev there might be war."

Harper and Row said the first printing of the book runs to 600,000 copies. There are indications that a second printing will appear almost immediately.

Six per cent of the net re- advance orders. ceipts on the first 100,000 sales will be retained by the publishers, they said.

An undisclosed part of the earnings accruing to both Manchester and the publishers has been earmarked for the Kennedy Library.

Literary agents estimate the book may earn around $3,000,000.

Troubled Ferry Gets Home

PORT AUX BASQUES, Nfld. (CP)—The CNR ferry William Carson docked here late Monday night after taking three days for the crossing from North Sydney, N.S., that normally takes six hours.

The ferry carrying 58 passengers and 400 tons of cargo left North Sydney Saturday night, but was trapped in ice in the harbor approaches to the Nova Scotia terminal.

She finally worked herself free Monday with the aid of the transport department icebreaker John A. Macdonald.

Captain Paul Fournier of the John A. Macdonald said in a ship-to-shore telephone interview earlier Monday that ice was piled around the vessel 20 feet thick.

Money Pours In To Redeem Girl

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP)—A Nashville mother, who sent her young daughter to a loan company which had garnisheed her wages, says she has received enough financial help since then to allow her to manage her debts.

Right now, Wanda Lee Thompson said, her chief concern is regaining custody of her daughter, Teresa Lynn, 5, who was turned over to juvenile authorities when Mrs. Thompson, 27, took her unusual action.

The little blonde girl arrived by taxi alone last Thursday at the downtown office of Century Finance Co., with this note pinned to her dress:

"Here is my baby. Since you took my cheque, you can take care of her 'till I'm able to."

Bill McMaster, manager of the loan office, called police, who turned the little girl over to juvenile authorities. They, in turn, let the girl live with Mrs. Thompson's aunt pending an April 11 hearing on a neglect charge filed against the mother.

RECEIVED HELP

Mrs. Thompson, who said "things just seemed to be mounting up," received financial help from as far away as Oregon with encouraging telephone calls from all parts of the U.S.

The result, she said, will be that her next two pay cheques from Werthan Bag Co., where she works, will be garnisheed—but she hopes to pay off the balance of her loan at the rate of $11 a month. She said she owed the finance company $108 at the time the cheque was garnisheed.

State law exempts $17.50 a week, plus $2.50 for each dependent—$20 in Mrs. Thompson's case—from garnishment.

Mrs. Thompson said she feels now that sending the girl to the loan company was a mistake, and said she will "do everything in my power to get my baby back."

MAN RETURNS $1,000 LEFT IN PHONE BOOTH

VANCOUVER (CP)—Rita Doak was in tears Monday as she told police she had left her wallet containing $1,000 in a phone booth.

The elderly man walked up to the counter beside her and was about to wait his turn to report his find to the clerk, when he heard the nature of the woman's complaint.

"I think I've got something here, I found it in a phone booth," said 72-year-old Phillip Schweitzer, a retired truck farmer from Saskatchewan.

Mrs. Doak shouted her joy and threw her arms around him, giving him $20 of her $1,000 as a reward.

IMMIGRANTS

Africa Wants Whites

By DENIS LEE ROYLE

JOHANNESBURG (AP) — The South African government believes a steady flow of white immigrants is essential if white domination is to survive in the republic where blacks outnumber whites four to one.

But some Afrikaners warn that the white immigrants themselves threaten the Afrikaans language, the culture, the way of life and the rigid policy of racial segregation.

Last year, South Africa opened its doors to about 48,000 immigrants — whites urgently needed to keep the country's booming economy humming at top speed.

Official statistics show Britain supplied 17,406 immigrants, Portugal 5,524, West Germany 3,596, Greece 2,075, Italy 1,545, Holland 1,404 and more than 8,000 came from neighboring Rhodesia and Zambia.

Afrikaners, who say the whites are needed, nevertheless urge the government to be more selective in its choice of white immigrants. And they want the government to give money to white families as an inducement to have children.

The country's largest Afrikaner cultural organization has told Prime Minister Vorster that a number of English-speaking immigrants tend to snub Afrikaner society.

FEW BECOME CITIZENS

Only one of every 10 newcomers has applied for South African citizenship since 1949.

A former school teacher and supporter of the ruling Nationalist party, S. van Geldenbuys, wants immigrant children indoctrinated. "We want to indoctrinate them to become good Afrikaner citizens," he said.

The Johannesburg Afrikaans language newspaper Die Transvaler, which supports the Nationalist government, says white immigrants are a must if white civilization is to survive in South Africa.

But it warns that too many of the newcomers are from Mediterranean countries with little or no technical skills.

OIL DEPOT, MISSILE SITE BLASTED

U.S. Steps Up Bomb Strikes

SAIGON (AP) — American pilots bombed the outskirts of Haiphong Monday and pounded other targets in Noorth Vietnam with the heaviest raids in two weeks.

A slight break in the weather over the North enabled U.S. planes to fly 107 missions, a spokesman said. This was the largest number since March 14 when American pilots flew 116.

The targets included an oil storage depot six miles northwest of Haiphong and a surface-to-air missile site five miles from the port. It was the closest penetration to North Vietnam's major port since the same fuel depot was attacked March 6.

The stepped-up strikes indicated the U.S. was prepared to seize any break in the weather to increase pressure on North Vietnam. The seasonal monsoon winds are due to change any day providing good bombing weather for the next few months.

The spokesman also announced the loss of an air force F-4C Phantom jet over the North Sunday, with the two crew members listed as missing in action. The plane was the second downed by enemy ground fire Sunday, but the announcement of the second loss was delayed while search planes looked for the crew.

The United States now has announced 498 planes lost over the North.

Though the tempo of the air was increased, ground action was generally light, with only scattered action reported. Viet Cong activity included terrorist bombing of three civilian buses north of Da Nang in which five civilians were killed and eight injured.

Then she really started something.

Shirley hasn't had a decent holiday since her honeymoon. So this morning she sprinted into Canada Trust and started something with one of our tellers. A Canada Trust Target Savings Plan.

Our teller showed Shirley just how simple and straightforward Target Saving can be. With the help of Canada Trust. Told her about Canada Trust higher interest. One third more than Shirley and her husband have been getting. (And interest is calculated every month on Target Savings so they'll grow fast.) Then our teller gave Shirley a Target Savings Plan book that holds her savings record and deposit reminder, and tells her when she's reached her goal.

The Edwards are on target for a great vacation right now.

If you're aiming for a holiday, a house or extra retirement income, an emergency nest egg or the money to educate your children, come to Canada Trust. We'll help you get on target.

The Jousters

THE RIVALRY BETWEEN President Johnson and Senator Robert Kennedy—and perhaps feud would be a more descriptive term for their current relationship—continues on an unofficial basis. Both men, according to the polls, have felt the attrition of winter on their popularity, and the fate of both is, in large measure, dependent on the outcome in Vietnam.

It is Vietnam that could restore or destroy President Johnson; it is the same phenomenon that could put the late president's brother in line for the Democratic nomination, or so disqualify the Democratic Party in the American public's mind as to wreck any presidential hopes that Mr. Kennedy might entertain.

In any case, the prospect is that a Kennedy bid, if any, for the presidential nomination would not be made before 1972. Failure to nominate Mr. Johnson in 1968 would indicate so great a split among the Democrats that their eventual candidate would have great difficulty in beating the Republican choice. And if a successful completion of the war can be achieved before the 1968 political action begins in earnest, Mr. Johnson obviously will be the beneficiary of the public's relief.

Another consideration, however, is noted by some foreign observers such as the Economist of London. Mr. Kennedy's youth—he is 41—will count with the 23 million Americans who will reach voting age within the next five years, and he already has staked a claim to their allegiance by his call for negotiation to end the widely unpopular war.

If Mr. Kennedy does indeed aspire to his country's highest office he has a difficult task ahead of him. He must remain prominently before the public without permitting his acclaim to wear thin; he must pick his issues carefully, not opposing Mr. Johnson to the point of alienating too many Democrats, but becoming associated with stands which will serve, during the five-year wait, to establish him as a man of judgment and dependability. He would do this from the vantage point of a seat in the Senate, a powerful machine in New York state, a still young appearance, and a name that arouses affection and loyalty among millions of American voters.

These are assets that would be hard to beat in any political situation. But an incumbent president who could offer early peace with the prestige of a military victory to boot, and then swing with massive resources into a domestic social program, would have an appeal for voters that would probably prove irresistible.

The Kennedy-Johnson drama should prove one of the most fascinating contests in modern United States history—and one which Canadians should watch closely for they cannot fail to be vitally affected by the outcome.

Time To Draw the Lines

CONVICTION OF TWO RUSsian skippers this month for intruding within the fisheries limits set by the United States off Alaska draws attention to the absence of similar incidents within Canadian waters. It also recalls frequent efforts in the House of Commons to establish the baselines from which Canada's limits will be measured.

There have been occasions since Canada proclaimed its 12-mile fisheries limits when foreign fishing vessels have crossed into waters claimed by this country. In certain instances last year, their skippers were notified of their intrusions and asked to withdraw. They complied with the request.

But at this date the outer limits of Canadian fisheries jurisdiction still appear nebulous. The government should act now to set the geographic co-ordinates on which the baselines would be drawn, and to give formal notice that they must be respected.

The delay, as the minister of fisheries and the minister of external affairs have pointed out in Commons debate, is due to discussions being conducted with the United States. It would be preferable, of course, to have agreement between the two nations on the lines setting the limits. But there should be a deadline for such talks.

Failing such action the government will be subjected to repetitions of the question from opposition sources asking who is fixing Canadian fisheries limits, Canada or the United States.

In the most recent case involving the intrusion of a Russian ship into waters over which the United States claims fisheries jurisdiction, the convicted captain declared Russian respect for the offshore sovereignty of the United States. It seems reasonable to expect similar respect for final lines drawn by Canada off our coast.

There should be no further delay in drawing the official limits, particularly in view of Canada's acceptance of the theory of historic rights which permits foreign fishermen to continue fishing on grounds where they customarily fished before the Canadian limits were extended 12 miles from shore.

The Ugly Despoiler

THE THICK, STICKY OOZE that was the cargo of the giant United States oil tanker Torrey Canyon, which broke in two on the rocks off Cornwall, has been spreading inexorably to England's south coast beaches — a tragic tide that will spoil the recreational value of the areas and inflict a disheartening toll on bird and marine life.

This is pollution in concentrated, ugly form. Its costs in money are high, in despoliation perhaps higher. And it is sudden and obvious.

Less spectacular has been the pollution that inflicts many parts of this continent. Here discharges of waste have seeped, a relatively little at a time, into water courses. Air has been fouled by fumes from industrial and other sources. Once fair countryside has been destroyed by the refuse of civilization, the marks of man on the land he is supposed to cherish.

The example in the English Channel is dramatic. The influence of pollution in this country is frequently gradual—a little bit today, a little bit tomorrow and the next day. The results, however, can become equally harmful.

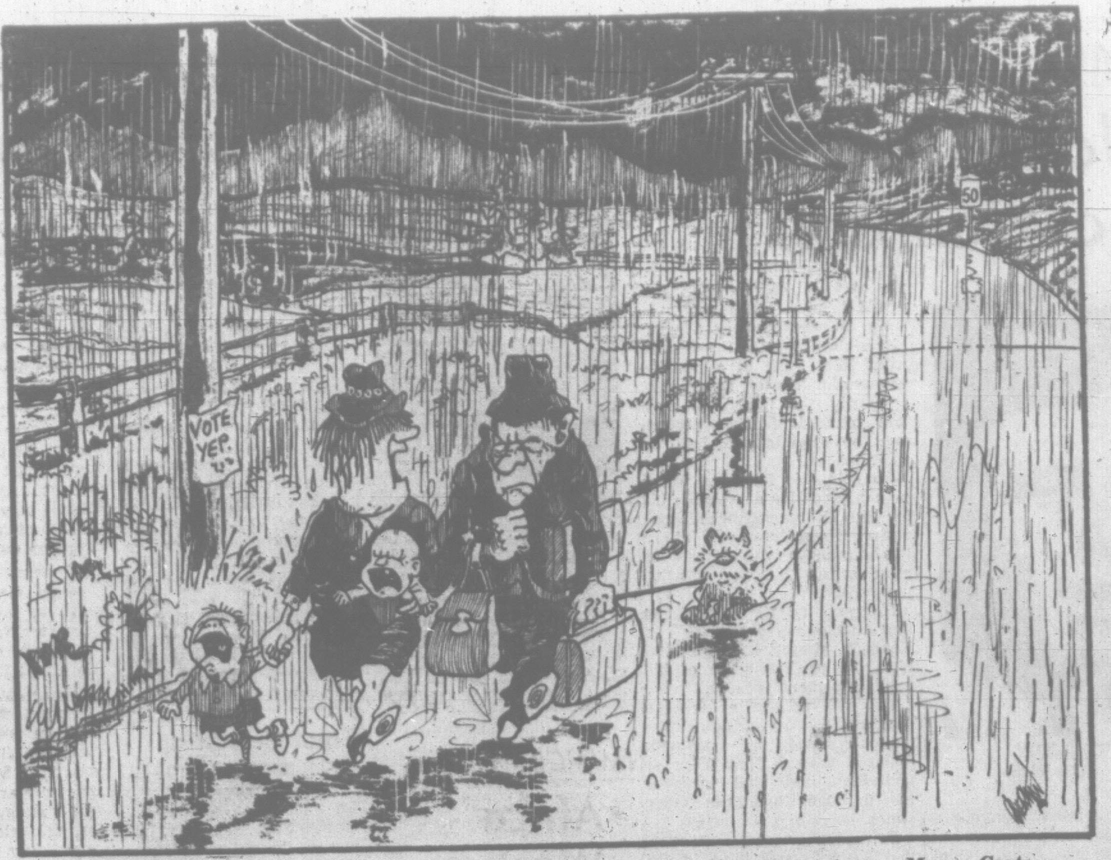
The sympathy of Canadians for Britain's afflicted seaside is abundant. Later perhaps we may look homeward with a little greater concern to see what we are doing to our own country.

A Modest Trail Proposal

THE PROVINCIAL GOVERNment has received the constructive suggestion that it augment with a little money its moral support of the senior Boy Scouts plan to rehabilitate the West Coast trail between Bamfield and Port Renfrew.

The request, advanced by Mr. Alan Macfarlane, MLA, is modest; the funds involved would be small. But the encouragement their contribution would be to those contemplating this project—impressive as a centennial gesture from a group of young men—would be substantial.

Here, surely, is an opportunity for the department of highways to show its concern for a highly commendable effort by a group of young citizens to re-establish a trail of outstanding beauty, and attraction to hikers, as well as a route invaluable in case of shipwreck in the area.



"As much as I appreciate your stand on civil rights . . . freedom . . . police states . . . Magna Carta . . . I still wish you had blown inot that silly breathalyzer . . .!"

FROM WASHINGTON

By WALTER LIPPMANN

Evidence of the 'Credibility Gap'

IN order to avoid the embarrassment of calling a spade a spade, newspapermen have tacitly agreed to talk about "the credibility gap." This is a polite euphemism for deception, rather like the habit of our Victoria grandparents who spoke of limbs when they were too shy to speak of legs. The phrase has been invented during the Johnson administration and it is quite significant that nothing like it seems to have been needed before. In its exact meaning the "gap" is as Mr. Henry L. Trewhitt of the Baltimore Sun has put it: "The degree of refusal by the public to accept at face value what the government says and does."

Lippmann

It goes without saying that if this gap is wide, the country is in the perilous position of not believing that it can trust its government.

Every experienced newspaperman knows quite well — as James Reston points out in his penetrating book "The Artillery of Peace" — that there is an inherent conflict between public officials and reporters. But, so far as I know, there has never been a time when the president and the working press distrusted each other so much as they do today. The current conflict has become abnormally acute, and the relations between the Johnson administration and the press are unique, differing not only in degree but in kind from the normal tensions between responsible officials and free journalists.

Manipulated News

The conflict today has degenerated to the point where there is no longer much pretence that the news is not being manipulated in order to make the congress, the newspapers, the networks, and the public at large support the president. The only question is supposed to be whether the manipulation works, how successfully the president and his officials and his press officers can operate.

The credibility gap today is not the result of honest misunderstanding between the president and the press in this complicated world. It is the result of a deliberate policy of artificial manipulation of official news. The purpose of this manipulation is to create a consensus for the president, to stifle debate about his aims and his policies, to thwart deep probing into what has already happened, what is actually happening, what is going to happen.

In its press relations the administration does not hold with the fundamental American principle that true opinion arises from honest inquiry and open debate and that true opinion is necessary to free government. For this administration, the right opinions are those which lead to consensus with the leader, and to create such true opinion it is legitimate to wipe out the distinction between patriotism and patrioteering and to act on the assumption that the end justifies the means.

First Fissure

The credibility gap opened in the first weeks of President Johnson's tenure. It was early December, 1963, and the first big official business before him was the completion of next year's budget, which had been begun by President Kennedy. At his first press conference on December 7, 1963, "reporters came away with the impression" says Mr. James Deakin of the St. Louis Post Dispatch that "the new budget would be between 102 billion and 103 billion."

But at Mr. Johnson's second press conference, eleven days later, the president said that the expenditures would be "substantially 99 billions" which was the amount of the Kennedy budget. A few days later, says Mr. Deakin, "the news spread that the new budget would be 100 billion dollars, give or take 2 per cent either way." But when the 1965 budget was actually submitted to congress, it was down to 97.7 billion — which was under the Kennedy budget. By this technique, which used to be known in psychological warfare as razzle-dazzle, the President projected an image of himself as a thrifty man, who turned out lights in the White House and who spent less than President Kennedy.

Thus the credibility gap opened before the President (in February, 1965) announced the first publicly visible actions reversing his campaign pledges and making the war in Vietnam an American war. This reversal has greatly widened the credibility gap. Being unwilling to admit that he had changed his policy, Mr. Johnson has persistently manipulated the official news of war and peace. When he was escalating the war he has covered it with gestures about peace. In the process there has been deep damage to the credibility of the Pentagon about the size of the American commitment, the size of the military and civilian casualties, and about the costs of the war.

There has been damaged also the credibility of the state department on the conduct of the war. Thus in August, 1964, Hanoi sent word to the United Nations that their representatives would meet with the Americans in Rangoon. The administration ignored the offer. In September, Secretary Rusk replied to a question about whether it was possible to have a negotiated settlement of the war. He said, "let me first say that I don't know of any negotiations now going on anywhere, overt or covert, about a settlement in South Vietnam." He made no reference to the North Vietnamese offer. Until U Thant, in the following February, revealed what had happened, the state department kept up the fiction that no offer to talk had been made by Hanoi.

Dr. Tarlton's Views

I would like to respond to your editorial "The Real Job," which appeared in the Times on March 23. The length and the tone of the editorial strongly suggest that the Times has now assumed a "position" with respect to the current situation at the University. In the light of this consideration and in the interests of truly presenting both sides, I hope that you will print this letter.

The editorial is partly correct, I think, in its assessment of the phase of development through which the University is now proceeding. The University has, indeed, got off to a commendable start. The editorial is dead wrong, however, when it argues that at this juncture what is needed is stability and co-operation. The policies and the habits of academic life that are developed now are the ones which will characterize the University in the future. If these are to be complacency, submission to whatever the administration decides is to be policy, and the acceptance of efforts to forge a faculty within which there are none but the co-operative, then this is surely a tragedy.

With respect to the question of tenure (a problem not really involved in the current discussion at the university), the editorial is right in its general description of what tenure means. It is, again, wrong in its implied assessment of the importance of tenure. The crux of the error is reflected in the statement: "The reasons need not be made public."

* * *

Essential to the definition of tyranny is the idea of authority exercised in an irresponsible way. What could be less responsible that a process whereby decisions are made affecting the lives and careers of professional scholars on the basis of other than professional criteria none of which need ever be disclosed? The question of "publicity" regarding these reasons is not really pertinent. The administration has not disclosed the reasons even to the people directly involved. This is in clear violation of the stated principles of the Canadian Association of University Teachers.

Consider the results of this policy and the circumstances in which, as a consequence, those of us whose contracts have not been renewed are now living.

A decision has been made which crucially affects my professional career; that decision was made, as President Taylor admitted publicly, on grounds other than teaching or scholarship; these grounds have never been divulged; instead, President Taylor made the public statement that they might, if divulged, prove "damaging."

So long as the reasons are not disclosed, the impression is left that some hideous problems are involved, a suggestion that I am not even allowed, then, to counter. Personal knowledge of what my own behavior has been leads me to conclude that the motive in not disclosing reasons must be lack of confidence on the part of the University administration in the adequacy of those reasons and their ability to withstand the scrutiny of the academic world. — Charles D. Tarlton, University of Victoria.

Nobody wishes to restrict legitimate self-expression by any member of a university, whether faculty, staff or student. But the public does not establish and maintain its institutions of higher learning as forums for the inflation of individual egos. Nor does the public sympathize in the slightest degree with the notion that these expensive enterprises can be shut down to gratify the artificially-induced indignation of some of the beneficiaries.

Citizens who pay the bills are gaining an impression that too much of their money is being wasted on persons for whom the pursuit of knowledge is secondary to the joys of troublemaking for its own sake. This is most unfortunate in any society. It is doubly so in British Columbia, where the true friends of universities are struggling so hard to overcome the latent hostility toward higher education of those in command of the essential financing. The affair at SFU plays directly into the hands of political groups with an anti-intellectual bias.

It is a great pity that those responsible for organizing these picayune revolts are too stupid or immature to understand the consequences of their own folly.

FROM PARIS

A Blow to de Gaulle From Djibouti

PRESIDENT DE GAULLE, of all people, is tussling with a neo-colonial problem in Africa which could shatter overnight his image as father-protector of the Third World.

For the second time since the Algerian war ended in 1962, paratroops of France's special "force of intervention" on permanent standby for use in Africa were despatched last week to Djibouti, in French Somaliland, to put down riots and restore order after the preceding Sunday's independence referendum.

The referendum was called after violent independence demonstrations during General de Gaulle's visit to Djibouti last summer. According to the Ministry of Overseas Territories, 22,253—about 60 per cent—voted for continuing ties with France while 14,734 or about 40 per cent voted against it.

The Somalis, who are in the majority in the capital and principal port of Djibouti itself, came out solidly in favor of independence. But the up-country tribesmen, mainly Afars, voted in favor of continued relations with France. Hence the rift between the port and the bush was further aggravated by racial strife.

The nationalists claimed that the French authorities rigged the elections. They threatened to turn the Djibouti situation into another Algeria. They claimed that Somalis were denied votes and many eligible voters were expelled to Somalia while voting rolls were padded with Afar tribesmen who predictably voted against independence.

Tension in French Somaliland has divided French opinion at home, which is politically sensitive after the recent shock election results. The opposition are bound to make capital out of the Djibouti affair and the Gaullists, with only a small majority in the National Assembly, have little room for manoeuvre.

Figaro, in a leader on March 21, said thst it was regrettable that the referendum had not been a victory for independence, because France knows from recent experience how military operations to maintain law and order can be misinterpreted. The situation would now be widely criticized and exploited in Africa.

L'Humanite, the Communist daily, called the referendum a "monstrous falsification." Only 39,000 out of a total population of 125,000 were eligible to vote. Only voters already registered on the electoral roll and with a backlog of three years' residence were allowed to vote.

Valuable Port

Djibouti, sandwiched between Somalia and Ethiopia, is a valuable and increasingly prosperous Red Sea port. It is the principal port for Ethiopia.

France's investment in port and service facilities for the year ended 1966 was some £4 million. France established and runs the vital rail link between Addis Ababa and Djibouti. It is therefore in French interests to protect these investments, although it is by no means clear as to whether the profitable commerce of Djibouti offsets the high costs and dubious honor of administering and protecting the territory. Few doubt that there would be an inevitable clash between Ethiopia and Somalia, which would both lay claim to Djibouti in the event of a French pull-out.

It now seems likely that President de Gaulle, forming a new government, will play for time. In spite of referendum results, rigged or not, he is hardly likely to risk ridicule and further jeopardize his hard-won reputation in the Third World by pursuing a strong-arm policy with dissident nationalist elements.

Although French officials here refuse to comment, it seems unlikely that the General will be prepared to negotiate a compromise solution with the Somali nationalists, as was suggested last summer.

Looking Back

From The Times of March 28, 1907.

BUCHAREST — The measures proposed by the government to meet the demands of the revolted peasantry and end the cruel war, which is devastating Moldavia and Wallachia, were announced today in a proclamation issued by King Charles. It appeals for the patriotic co-operation of the people to procure the establishment of tranquility and agrees to the immediate suppression of some of the heavier taxes.

McLuhanism And Architects

Buildings Must Conform To Reconditioned Psyche

By WOLF VON ECKARDT
The Washington Post

If yesterday's glass boxes and-or today's cubic concrete piles bother you, forget 'em, man. They are way out of date, square, gone. They are just not with it. "Williamsburg." Archeological exhibits.

The architecture of tomorrow, of the age of McLuhanism of the electronic age, of the age "of the future, of the future that is present . . ." why, that architecture is "cool". Yes, sir, man. It's cool. It deals with slang rather than eloquence, facades, structures, forms, soffits, imagery and history revivals. Only slang is the outgrowth of firsthand experience, not edited or refined but real.

The medium is no longer op or pop. It is the message. So architecture, too, will no longer be op or pop. It ain't going to package you, like. That cool, new architecture "will give over to a nonclassified accretion of elements in continuous uninterrupted flow without any particular sequence." It will be conceived "more as a computer, of components rigged on armatures or chassis connected by circulation harnesses."

Not Kidding

At least that is what John M. Johansen says and he isn't kidding. He is a very serious architect who has designed a number of perfectly square buildings and one round one — the U.S. embassy in Dublin. He has also taught at Yale, Harvard, M.I.T. and Penn and is now teaching at Columbia. And he wrote about that cool, new architecture in a recent issue of "The American Scholar," which makes it just about as scholarly as you can get.

I found the piece a bit blurred when I first glanced at it, particularly since Johansen said his new architecture was going to be consistent or sympathetic with "our reconditioned psyche" and appeal to "our reconditioned minds and senses." I felt pretty good the day "The American Scholar" arrived and our TV was on the blink. I therefore saw no need for psychic, mental or sensory reconditioning or even a new architecture, for that matter.

Drastic Change

But this, like everything else these days, has changed. It changed drastically when the latest copy of "Architectural Record" arrived to inform me "that almost every architect who came into the (editor's) office had the paperback edition of McLuhan's "Understanding Media" tucked in an overcoat pocket, or nestling among the model photos in his briefcase." McLuhan architecture, is "in," the "record" implies.

That frightened me into tuning in on that "American Scholar" medium again to see if I could perceive the message on a second go-around. This time, more adequately reconditioned by McLuhanism, which has become as ubiquitously talked about as the Beatles were when the present was the past, and as William Manchester was when the future was the present, I found Johansen's logic really quite simple. Let me just give you some excerpts:

First of all, there is, of course, this computer thing. Architects are already using it. But when they get really hip, "the design process will be the instantaneous assembly, organization analysis and conclusion of controlling conditions or determining design factors which can relieve us of endless calculation, research and comparative study. The effect will be to make the building in process of design as malleable as clay, which can be manipulated and recomposed or reorganized before our eyes."

Just think of it. Suppose the architect and his faithful computer have forgotten to design a bathroom into the house—and it is said to have happened! Why, he can just plug one in anywhere to jut out of the non-facade.

Second, says Johansen, you apply "cyborg" which means attaching mechanical or electronic devices on the human body "to enlarge the performance of its physical or mental faculties." We see this already in self-opening doors, he explains. And he predicts the day when "the building itself will eventually develop into a sensory organism with feedback and consciousness of its own performance."

Bath Appears

In other words, as I visualize it, when you are sitting in the living room and your body-attached electronic device tells you that the dirt on your skin has exceeded a certain tolerance level, that malleable, forgotten bathroom automatically appears inside the fireplace so you won't have to go looking for it. And if it's raining and the building gets conscious of a leak in the ceiling coming on, a drain automatically opens in the floor.

But that is not all. "Occupants will not be lost from view when in the building," says Johansen. "But their infusion through space will be seen from the outside as well as in." This explains, of course, why Johansen thinks that the cool McLuhan architecture, "as an instrument of service has greater effect upon our lives than the functional service itself".

The boss, in fact, might just as well write off the functional service of his office building if that pretty blonde secretary down the hall, infused through space, never gets lost from view. Or if everyone sees what the vice-president is doing in his office all day.

Johansen doesn't stop with the individual building. As it becomes a loose assemblage, he says, less finite and static, it becomes volatile. It "will reach out and fuse with adjoining buildings and lose their identity in a continual froth of space-form." The city becomes one continuous building.

"Buildings of the world unite!" he challenges. "You have nothing to lose but the space in between." We might also lose a few trees and lawns but that isn't really important. They could be projected in glorious color on multiple screens inside the megastructure. It will give an "all-inclusive image" of the whole world all at once.

How is all this to be planned? Don't be ridiculous. "The theatre of the absurd," Johansen notes, "dramatizes the dilemma of Western man who appears not to be involved with the consequences of his actions." Neither are most city planners, nothing new here.

The "Architectural Record" man, it seems, suffered some static or something and still couldn't quite see it. So he went straight to the horses' mouth and called on Professor Marshall McLuhan at the University of Toronto's Centre for Culture and Technology. He got his explanation.

Non-Visual Space

It is all a matter of "non-visual space," the professor pointed out. Electronic communication is so close to instantaneous that several ideas can be received simultaneously. The trouble with architecture is that it still deals with visual space which, McLuhan explained, is "uniform, continuous, and connected; and associated with traditional concepts of reason, order and civilization." That's square. "In a space capsule, there is no right-side-up," the "Record" man records McLuhan as saying.

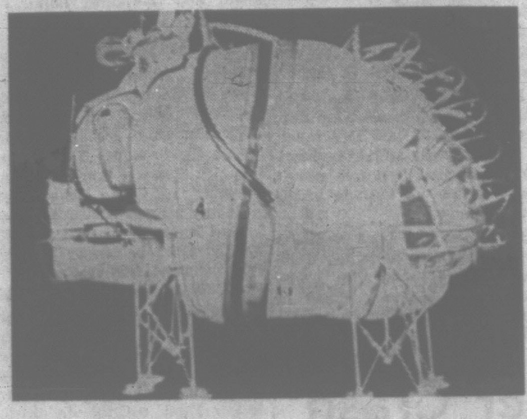
"The slum is the most avant garde space in our society; it includes all the senses; and avant garde creates spaces which are exactly like a slum," the professor added.

To be with it, then, McLuhan maintains, architects and other creative people must leave "the ivory tower for the control tower and abandon the shaping of art in order to program the environment itself as a work of art."

No wonder most architects contacted by "architectural Record" seemed to feel that McLuhan's attempt to assess the future impact of communications technology deserved to be taken seriously. Think what fun it will be to climb on that control tower and program invisible spaces.

Nor is McLuhan as way out as he thinks he is. Why, we have slums and upside-down buildings already.

No More Cubes or Circles



Considered a bold departure in design when it was conceived a few years ago, Toronto's new City Hall complex (above) is an anachronism according to the new school of architects who are tuned in on the computer process and the "cyborg" theory of construction. Shown right is a model of a "living pod" for two or three people designed by two British architects of the Archigram Group. The pod provides a total environment for a temperate climate and is a forerunner of the "sensory organism" type of building.

Militant Buddhists Test Saigon Regime Strength

By KENNETH L. WHITING

SAIGON — A parade of 3,000 militant Buddhists here Sunday, the first mass demonstration of its kind in eight months, was regarded as a test — the Buddhists wanted to see the South Vietnamese government's reaction.

Demonstrations without official sanction are outlawed in South Vietnam. The procession moved into the capital from suburban Phu Lam only after permission was obtained from Premier Nguyen Cao Ky.

Government sources said Saigon Mayor Van Van Cua and his brother-in-law, Police Director Nguyen Loan, passed to Ky the question of whether to admit the marchers.

While ostensibly religious in purpose, the procession had definite political overtones. It was the first mass Buddhist march in South Vietnam since the military regime crushed the "struggle movement" by radical elements last June and July. Since then the Buddhist leadership has been fragmented and the militant wing mostly underground.

Cease-Fire Call

The only thing Buddhists have agreed on lately is a call for a ceasefire between Communist and anti-Communist forces to honor Buddha's birthday May 23.

Sunday's procession of saffron-robed monks and their followers was seen by observers here as the latest attempt by militant monks to regroup their forces.

Ten months ago, Thich Tri Quang's estimated 1,000,000 followers — a minority among the country's 13,000,000 Buddhists — were the best organized non-Communist bloc in South Vietnam.

The political power of the monks ebbed swiftly after Ky put down their threat with military force, and they exert no real political influence now.

Radical Buddhist elements appear to lack a vital issue with which to revive their fortunes. They attracted frenzied followers a year ago with their demands for immediate civilian rule.

Civil Rule

South Vietnam now has a new constitution and is moving toward elected civilian government under a modified presidential system. Elections for president are scheduled Sept. 3.

Militant Buddhists are left with a vague anti-government campaign which shows little sign of attracting a mass following.

Sunday's orderly procession moved to the An Quang pagoda with the ashes of a Buddhist monk. The monk, Thich Kranh Anh, died six years ago and his preserved remains were burned Sunday in Phu Lam, according to Buddhist practice.

An Quang pagodá, in western Saigon, is headquarters of Tri Quang, leader of the struggle movement which tried to topple the Ky government.

A stream of anti-government, anti-American and anti-war propaganda has poured out of An Quang pagoda recently. One communique, dated Feb. 26, complained "of the government's continued persecution and terrorism directed against the Buddhists."

A Buddhist information bulletin issued March 1 said: "The U.S. army shot up and destroyed a number of pagodas outside the city of Hue claiming that the Viet Cong guerrillas had taken sanctuary in these pagodas whereas buildings of other religions were left alone. In the face of these actions on the part of the American army a number of Vietnamese soldiers said that one must fight the Americans to stop this."

Another communique this month called on Buddhist followers to be "calm and clear-sighted." Experts said these were the same words used in communiques just prior to Buddhist uprisings last year and the year before.

Militant Buddhists plan a series of prayer sessions, seminars and meetings during the next two months.

Racial elements have been especially active lately in the central coastal cities of Hue and Da Nang, scenes of riotous street demonstrations a year ago. Informants say militant monks expect University of Hue students to assist their movement as soon as vacations start next month.

Sources say the government will crack down if unrest fomented by extremist Buddhists gives any indication of interfering with village and hamlet elections scheduled to start next Sunday. Such rural voting will take place in stages over the next two months.

U.S. Prestige Declining Most Canadians Believe

By The Canadian Institute of Public Opinion

Considerable fluctuation is noted in the way people feel about United States prestige in the world—probably because of the Vietnam war. Canadians feel that respect for the United States is at its lowest ebb in some years.

In 1963 a majority of Canadians (54%) felt that United States prestige had increased and only 21% said it had decreased. Today the thinking on this subject is practically reversed. Sixteen per cent say United States prestige has increased and 47% feel it has decreased.

Most disillusioned citizens, in regard to their respect for the United States, are found in the Canadian west. Only 13% say United States prestige has increased and 56% say it has decreased.

The question: "In the last year would you say the prestige (and respect for) the United States has increased, or decreased?"

U.S. UNION-BUSTING RESENTED IN BRITAIN

LONDON — Many British trade union leaders are becoming increasingly agitated about the so-called "Yank invasion" into British industry.

At first their hostility seems a poor thing — out-of-date, crudely expressed, a real throw-back prejudice of the type that was common on the Continent just after the Second World War. But it would be wrong to allow the vituperation of a few undoubtedly Communist militants to blur the issue of a reasonable complaint.

American investment in science-based industries in Britain is increasing all the time. Some 75 per cent of accounting machine production in Britain is American-owned; 20 per cent of the machine tool industry is American; 35 per cent of tractors and agricultural equipment; 42 per cent of telegraphic equipment . . . the list and figures are formidable. But it is not this that really worries the trades unionists.

The trouble is that when American firms settle in Britain, often in regions where there is high unemployment, many are not prepared to play industrial relations according to local rules.

No one can deny that there is much in Britain to try the patience of American employers: restrictive practices, a militancy born of inferiority feelings, inadequate wage structures, and a multiplicity of unions each requiring separate consultation.

●

Equally, many American employers settling in Britain have tended to take advantage of the British set-up. Worst of all is a refusal to recognize trade unions. This is unforgivable, though trade union leaders use a much ruder word for it. Certainly in their book, this is the worst offence an employer can commit.

A particularly vivid example of the sort of dispute this can cause has now reached its fourth angry month in Stockport, Lancashire, the town where Engels studied British factory life in the 1840s.

A small American textile machinery manufacturer, Roberts-Arundel, tiring last year of what it regarded as union indiscipline, sacked 140 workers. To do so it had to leave the Engineering Employers' Federation, which did not approve of its action. Thus it declared war on the unions.

●

The unions were not slow to take up the challenge, and on February 22 the protracted and bitter deadlock erupted into street riots. Seventeen men were arrested and fined, police were injured, a lot of valuable property was damaged. The dour, urban sprawl of Stockport had not seen anything like it since the General Strike of 1926.

Not all American companies in Britain behave in this way: the larger ones cannot afford to, and have broader definitions of good management.

The matter is not to be taken lightly. Already one in every 17 British workers is employed by an American-owned firm; more than 1,600 companies are controlled from the United States. Rank-and-file trade union prejudice about "American methods" in management is becoming increasingly fierce. As at Roberts-Arundel, the workers accuse the American managements of "bullying," failing to observe disputes procedures, and calling the workers "lazy". Whatever else such practices may be called in Britain they are not representative of management behavior in the United States, and could never be described as "methods".

The basic problem remains: American managers in this country are desperate for modernization and increased productivity. Neither can be achieved easily. Many Americans in Britain, however, have still to learn that in the long term, neither can be achieved at all in the face of trade union opposition.

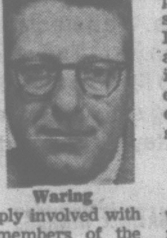
Mercantile Amendment Added Insult to Injury

By GERALD WARING

OTTAWA — When Parliament disposed of the Mercantile Bank affair the other day, my mind recalled a family conversation a few days earlier, when my daughter was taking her Easter exams.



Waring

She had just written a math paper, and with fatherly interest I inquired, what comes after math?

"The aftermath," she replied, drolly suggesting that her effort in math had been no howling success.

So late last week I put essentially the same question to MPs who had been deeply involved with the Mercantile matter, as members of the Commons finance committee. Their replies weren't as witty as my daughter's, but they meant the same thing.

* * *

You will recall that the First National City Bank of New York (Citibank), which wholly owns Mercantile, was faced with legislation that would freeze Mercantile's growth unless Citibank sold 75 per cent of its Mercantile shares to Canadians by the end of this year.

In the finance committee an accommodation was worked out that Finance Minister Sharp thought "reasonable": that Citibank would be given five years in which to market these shares. Meanwhile Citibank agreed to dispose of the shares on this five-year basis, and thus conform to government policy opposed to foreign ownership of Canadian banks.

But when the committee's recommendation reached Cabinet, Walter Gordon raised a ruckus against any concession to Citibank. Indeed, he wanted to be tougher, and force Citibank to reduce its holdings in Mercantile to 10 per cent by Dec. 31.

To appease Gordon, Prime Minister Pearson and Sharp worked out a compromise that would permit Citibank 25 per cent, permit five years for marketing the other 75 per cent, but keep Citibank under the gun for all of that period. This is to be done by government surveillance. Cabinet has been authorized by Parliament to slap a freeze on Mercantile at any time in the five years, although obviously it would not do so without cause, such as evidence that Citibank was making no genuine effort to dispose of 75 per cent of Mercantile shares.

* * *

MPs on the finance committee, Liberals as well as opposition, regard this gun-at-head rider to their recommendation as a breach of the understanding reached with Citibank when the five year period of grace was proposed by the committee.

They regard it as adding needless insult to an injury that, however regrettable, most MPs agreed had to be done to Citibank in Canada's national interest.

"It will have no great practical effect except to exacerbate relations with the United States," commented Colin Cameron, the NDP financial critic who was one of the sponsors of the original five-year accommodation. "We're going to have to bargain with the Americans in the years ahead over water and many other things, and we shouldn't allow any extra irritations of the U.S.," he explained.

Cameron's comment is both responsible and significant in light of the old accusation that the NDP is basically anti-American.

On the other hand, what has happened does not mean that the Liberals are now the anti-Americans. Only, as one Liberal MP put it, that Gordon is so obsessed with concern about U.S. capital as to appear anti-American.

New Datsun has Automatic Transmission

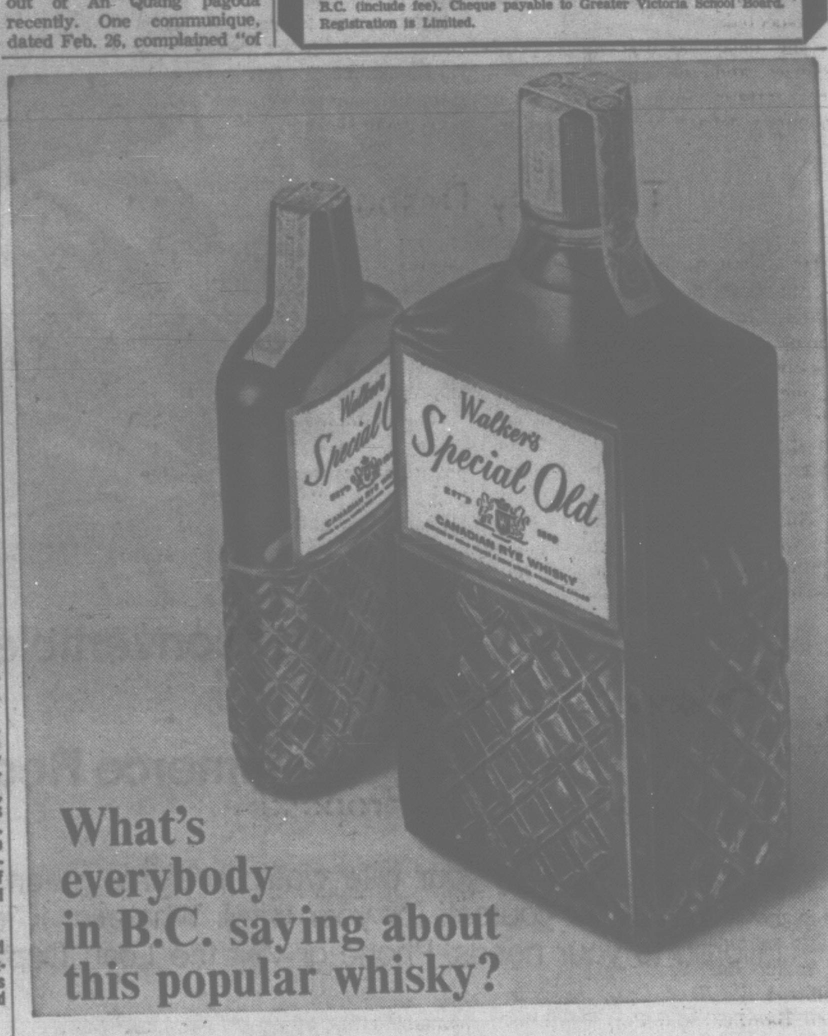
In keeping with the trend to better performance and automatic transmissions, Datsun has announced a new Sport Sedan model.

With styling similar to the popular Datsun 1300 4-door sedan, the 1600 Sport Sedan adds extra go-power, extra stopping power, and extra driving convenience. The fully automatic Borg-Warner 3-speed transmission is teamed with the same 96 horsepower engine which has earned a fine reputation in the race winning Datsun Sports Car. Fade-free front disc brakes add a corresponding margin of stopping safety.

Clocked at 0 to 60 mph in 14 seconds, the Datsun Sport Sedan's performance is far above that of other economy class cars. Despite the sports car capabilities, it offers full scale comfort, convenience and the many luxuries seldom seen on lower priced imports. Women, in particular, are expected to take to the new automatic. Undoubtedly, the Datsun Sport Sedan is one of the easiest-to-drive cars to be found anywhere.

All fittings are standard, and parts and service are available through a network of dealers and parts warehouses throughout the American continent and around the world.

Datsun dealers now have initial stocks on hand, and the Sport Sedan is expected to be available in quantity in a matter of weeks.



Cheers. And you'll cheer too once you've tried Walker's Special Old. You'll like the mellow smoothness and the look of luxury. No wonder it's one of Canada's favourites.

PEACE RALLY

Negro Leader Heads March

CHICAGO (UPI) — Dr. Martin Luther King and Dr. Benjamin Spock led more than 2,000 peace marchers Saturday to an anti-Vietnam war rally at which King said, "This war is a blasphemy against all that America stands for."

In a 15-page speech to be read to the more than 5,000 who paid to enter the Chicago Coliseum, King said:

"In truth, the hopes of the Great Society have been overcome by the fears and frustrations of Vietnam.

"We often arrogantly feel we have some divine messianic mission to police the whole world. We are arrogant in not allowing young nations to go through the same growing pains of turbulence and revolution that characterized our history.

"I oppose the war in Vietnam because I love America. I speak out against it not in anger but with anxiety and sorrow in my heart, and above all with a passionate desire to see our beloved country stand as a moral example to the world.

"We must combine the fervor of the civil rights movement with the peace movement. We must demonstrate, teach and preach until the very foundations of our nation are shaken."

Spock called for an alliance of religious, civil rights and peace groups to "persuade Lyndon Johnson to give up his cruel pursuit of victory or we must find a way to replace him in 1968."

Marchers carried signs reading Bloodfinger Johnson, Make Love, Not War, Self Determination for Vietnam and Make War on Poverty, Not People.

One group of marchers, many wearing old military uniforms, said they represented "Vets for Peace in Vietnam."

TV Programs Under Fire By P-T Group

TORONTO (CP) — Television and magazine reporting of the so-called new morality came under fire Monday from the president of the Federation of Catholic Parent-Teachers Associations of Ontario.

Gregory Armstrong, a Kitchener teacher, said:

"Why should a parent say 'I

Mr. Armstrong's group was meeting as part of the three-day convention of the Ontario Educational Association which began Monday. The association has 15,000 members.

Mr. Armstrong also attacked programs and stories condoning use of LSD or claiming that marijuana is no worse than alcohol or tobacco.

Eugene Hallman, CBC vice-president in charge of programming, told another part of the convention that the current prime-time evening TV schedule with its heavy reliance on U.S. programming "reflects a crisis in Canadian broadcasting and Canadian self-determination."

"Unless we Canadians are prepared in the future to spend more to see ourselves, our writers and our performers on our own screens, we endanger our future.

Smallpox Epidemic

CALCUTTA (AP) — Officials have reported an average of five deaths daily in a smallpox epidemic sweeping the Gaya and Muzaffarpur areas of India's Bihar state where a severe drought persists. In Gaya town alone, the official death toll this year has reached 333. Unofficial estimates place this figure at more than 500. Officials said the epidemic was caused by a combination of malnutrition and the drought.

NEWS HALL OF FAME

Newspaper Men Honored

TORONTO (CP) — Senator Grattan O'Leary, the late Ralph Allen of Toronto and the Hon. Joseph Howe, a pioneer Nova Scotia newspaper man, were named today to the Canadian News Hall of Fame.

The announcement was made by a committee of the Toronto Men's Press Club as a feature of National Press Week, which ends April 2.

Senator O'Leary, editor emeritus of the Ottawa Journal, served the newspaper for 55 years before retiring in 1966. He was chairman of the royal commission on publications named by the former Diefenbaker government, and still contributes to the editorial page of The Journal. He was named to the Senate in 1962.

Ralph Allen was managing editor of the Toronto Star until his death at 53 last December. A distinguished author and editor, he had written five novels and a history of Canada in the 20th century.

Mr. Allen had been a sports writer with the Winnipeg Tribune a writer with The Globe ad Mail of Toronto, editor of Maclean's magazine, a sports columnist for the Toronto Telegram and managing editor of The Star.

FOUNDED NEWSPAPER

Joseph Howe founded The Nova Scotia newspaper in Halfax and used it to fight the Tory Compact which was in power there before Confederation. He opposed Confederation. However, he joined the cabinet of Prime Minister John A. Macdonald in 1869 and died in 1873 shortly after becoming lieutenant governor of Nova Scotia.

The three join these previously-named members of the News Hall of Fame: Gregory Clark of Weekend magazine; John W. Dafoe, famed editor of the Winnipeg Free Press; Arthur Ford, retired vice-president and editor-in-chief of the London Free Press; and Gerard Filion, former editor of Le Devoir of Montreal.

The News Hall of Fame is national in scope and members are chosen in recognition of outstanding achievements in the Canadian communications field. Recipients must be or have been Canadians or associated with Canadian news media.

RCAF Fighter Crash Kills B.C. Officer

BAGOTVILLE, Que. (CP)—An investigation is scheduled to continue today into the crash Monday of a twin-engined CF-101 Voodoo RCAF fighter which claimed the lives of its crew of two.

Cause of the crash, as the aircraft approached for a landing, was not immediately known.

The victims were Flt. Lt. Robert M. Grant, 25, the pilot, of Martintown, Ont. and FO Douglas R. Clark, 22, of North Vancouver.

They were approaching to land at the RCAF station in this community 100 miles north of Quebec City.

The Voodoo, on a routine training flight from the Canadian forces installation at Chatham, N.B., was reported to have bounced across a road near the end of the runway and crashed to a stop in snow 10 feet from the road and 500 feet from the station's living quarters.

A huge ball of flames mushroomed from the doomed plane after impact. Parts of the aircraft were scattered over a wide area.

There was no damage to station facilities and no one on the ground was reported injured.

Double Trouble

VANCOUVER (CP)—A safecracker who stole $10 from a Vancouver firm early Sunday started a fire that caused extensive damage to the company's office. Police said the safecracker apparently left a blowtorch burning after using it to open the safe.

Busy Two Days For Pearson At Vancouver

VANCOUVER (CP) — Prime Minister Pearson flies to the West Coast late this week for two hectic days of touring, speech-making and discussions with provincial party officials.

The prime minister and Mrs. Pearson will arrive Thursday from Ottawa. Mr. Pearson is scheduled to tour Vancouver harbor by boat Friday, following a news conference.

Local Liberals say he is interested in the need for expanding bulk loading facilities to handle expected increases in grain, sulphur, potash and coal shipments from the Prairies and eastern B.C.

The federally-controlled National Harbors Board, the provincial government and municipal officials are currently trying to iron out expansion plans.

Friday night, Mr. Pearson will be guest speaker at a dinner sponsored by the B.C. Liberal Association.

He and Mrs. Pearson will attend a coffee party at noon Saturday, prior to leaving for Santa Barbara, Calif., where the prime minister will receive an honorary degree from the University of California.

During his stay, Mr. Pearson is expected to hold informal talks with provincial party officials about the state of the Liberal organization in B.C.

JET LANDS ON ROAD, FLIPS

HAUGAN, Mont. (AP)—A single-engine Pioneer J-3 airplane made an emergency landing Monday night in the middle of a highway 25 miles west of Superior, Mont.

S. F. Cronk of Battleford, Saskatchewan, the pilot, was not injured in the landing.

Cronk said he made the landing because of snow and a shortage of fuel.

"When the plane hit the highway, it flipped onto its back and over to the side of the road," he said.

The plane was not badly damaged.

Cronk was on a flight to Spokane, Wash., from Missoula, Mont.

LOSES BAIL, JAILED

Drug Case Suspect's Difficulties Mount

OTTAWA (CP)—A San Francisco man trying to get to Calgary for a court appearance on a criminal charge was delayed by immigration officers, lost $1,000 bail as a result, and now is in jail on a deportation order.

The troubles of Orlin Vaughn, 27, of San Francisco, emerged today as federal officials denied his lawyer's charges that Vaughn was victimized by the "deliberate" and "carefully timed actions" of the immigration and justice departments.

Vaughn, charged March 15, is to appear Tuesday in Calgary court on a marijuana charge.

He had been in Calgary with the San Francisco Mimers, a touring group of pantomimists and folk singers.

IMMIGRATION DELAY

He was flying to Calgary from San Francisco last Wednesday for the court appearance when he was held up at Vancouver International Airport by immigration officers.

Calgary lawyer Milt Harradence said in an interview that he called Ottawa and asked Justice Minister Cardin's office to intercede.

Mr. Harradence said the justice department didn't intercede and Vaughn arrived in Calgary late for the court appearance.

His bail was ordered forefeited Thursday. Though an Alberta Supreme Court justice later reset it at $1,000, Vaughn was by then in jail on a deportation order.

J. R. G. Geoffrion, executive assistant to Justice Minister Cardin, said today he was called by Mr. Harrandence and passed the information on to Fernand Sauve, an assistant in Immigration Minister Marchand's office.

ACTION TAKEN

Mr. Sauve could not be reached today for comment but an immigration spokesman said action was taken as a result of the Harradence call.

The spokesman said Vancouver immigration officers didn't know about the Calgary charge and were thinking of turning Vaughn out of Canada.

"He was of a type they felt wasn't fit to come to Canada," the spokesman said.

Once the situation became clear, Vaughn was allowed to go on to Calgary but he had missed his flight by then and was late in court as a result.

The immigration spokesman said he understands that although the reason for the delay was explained, the magistrate still ordered forefeiture of Vaughn's bail.

Cholera Spreads

GENEVA (UPI)—A wave of cholera has spread throughout 20 Asian countries and threatens to move around the world unless urgent measures are taken to halt it, the World Health Organization hahs warned. W.H.O. said that since 1962, there have been 270,428 reported cases with 72,925 deaths.

TODAY'S GRAIN PRICES

CHICAGO (AP)—Slim indications that rain might fall in the near future in the southwest, and profit-taking, sent wheat futures prices lower on the Board of Trade today.

Other futures prices also fell for the most part.

WINNIPEG (CP)—Most prices held to a narrow range and showed underlying firmness in light trade today on the Winnipeg Grain Exchange.

The Winnipeg market got some stimulation from the steady appearance in the Chicago market which is still being influenced by the dry conditions in U.S. winter wheat areas.

Oilseeds disclosed a modest overseas support but no immdeiate reports were received of export business. Flax reflected relative steady linseed oil prices on the continent.

Modest trade proceeded in feed grains with oats being taken for domestic uses. About 500 tons of barley was reported sold to Britain.

Lakehead prices for Class Two, IWA and Domestic wheat were all up ⅛.

MARKET SUMMARIES

Bank Issues Hold Gains

Bank stocks continued to hold gains on the Toronto stock market today, resulting from news that the Bank of Montreal will cut its prime lending rate and increase its interest on savings accounts.

However, most of the other major banks said they are not going to follow the move because it was "not justified at this time."

Imperial Commerce was up 1 to 72, Montreal and Royal ½ each to 67¼ and 81½ and Toronto-Dominion ¼ to 68¼.

AT TORONTO among other industrials Moore Corp. rose 2 to a high of 103 and Trans-Canada Pipe Lines ⅜ to 28. Quebec Natural Gas was off ¼ to 10⅞.

Western oils continued to rise after being stalled in profit taking Monday.

Canadian superior added 1½ at 35½; Dome ¾ at 55¾ and Provo 20 cents at 5.85.

PCE Explorations gained 5 to 81 cents in speculative mines.

AT NEW YORK the market remained mostly higher in active trading.

Eastern Air Lines held a gain of three points or so while Pan American was the most heavily traded of the airlines, keeping a fractional gain.

Up a point or so were Outboard Marine, Federal Pacific Electric, Jones and Laughlin, International Nickel, Du Pont, Eastman Kodak and Xerox.

Down a point or so were Ford Motor, United Aircraft and General Foods.

AT MONTREAL the banking section, paced by the Bank of Montreal, posted its best gain in several weks.

Bank of Montreal rose one point to a new 1967 high of 67¾ as 1,788 shares changed hands.

Imperial Commerce was up 1¾ points at 72½ but only 584 shares were traded. Toronto-Dominion rose ⅞ to 68½, and Royal ¾ to 81½.

AT LONDON interest in equities was selective today. The over-all tone was steady, helped by sterling's firmness and cuts in U.S. prime rates.

Trans-Canada Pipe Lines was soft. Hudson's Bay Oil and Gas was a strong features. Others with useful gains included International Nickel, Consolidated Mining and Noranda. New York Central was 10 points lower, reflecting the fall in the shares in New York.

AT VANCOUVER Arctic gained .17 to 1.17 on the mining section shortly before noon today.

Brenda put on .15 to 7.00 and Buttle Lake was up .04 to .48.

Consolidated Skeena lost .07 to .60 and Silver Titan went down the same amount to 1.38.

In the oils, Bata increased .01 to 2.75.

U.K. Holdings Reshuffled By Weston

LONDON (CP)—Canadian industrialist Garfield Weston appears to be engaged in a major reshuffle of his British holdings, giving his Canadian subsidiaries a bigger stake in his vast British investments.

In the latest move, Associated British Foods, of which the Toronto-born multi-millionaire is chairman, announced Monday night it would sell its northwestern grocery chain operated by Thomas Scott and Sons, bakers, to another Weston company, Fine Fare Holdings Ltd., for at least $9,000,000.

A spokesman said this operation will continue the process of separating Weston retailing companies from his manufacturing companies.

Fine Fare is controlled by Dicola Ltd., of Toronto.

Two other grocery chains, Cooper Stores and Hudson Brothers, also were recently transferred from Associated British Foods to Fine Fare for some $5,000,000.

The Scott company controls about 250 food branches, with 53 supermarkets, concentrated around Manchester, Liverpool and northwest Wales.

BUSINESS VIEWS

Town of Anyox To Live Again?

By AB KENT
Business Editor

KENT

Thirty-two years ago up to 3,000 people lived or were employed at an isolated coastal community with the strange name Anyox, a model company town that has vanished like a wraith.

That was when Granby Consolidated Mining, Smelting and Power Co. Ltd. operated the largest copper smelter in the British Empire near tidewater on Granby Bay, Observatory Inlet.

Today the forsaken site is more readily indentifiable as being 16 miles west of Alice Arm, at around the 55th parallel. But even a former resident would have trouble making sure of the spot, so thorough was the demolition job, in which the local firm of Capital Iron and Metals played a role.

For just over 20 years Granby mined and smelted copper ore valued at better than 2 per cent, and latterly by changing the refining process it eked out copper from less than 2 per cent ore.

But by the middle thirties to try to extract commercial copper from that kind of ore must have seemed a losing proposition, and Anyox shut down.

* * *

The presence of other ore bodies in the general area was known all along, but apparently the values were no better than what Granby finally rejected.

Today there is a fair chance the name Anyox will again be commonplace in the world of metal mining, as one of the largest producers develops its interest in the Redwing copper claims a stone's throw away from Anyox Creek.

Anaconda American Brass Lrd. is sufficiently intrigued with the Redwing prospect that it has spent money 12 months ahead of its commitment to explore and delineate the ore bodies.

Canusa Mines Ltd. is owner of the property and has an agreement with Anaconda for development.

John Dunsmuir, president of Canusa, said Anaconda spent $210,000 last year on the property near Anyox, when it was required by agreement to spend only $70,000.

The terms were to put $140,000 into the work this year, money which now has been spent.

* * *

But Anaconda apparently has faith in pretty Redwing, agreeing to spend another $100,000 on exploratory work including diamond drilling during 1967.

Ore reserves of at least 200,000 tons averaging about 2 per cent copper are outlined now. There are lead and silver values as well.

Surface, tunnel, and drill work has been done and future work is expected to be on two other anomalies.

With favorable results, Anyox (quiet waters) may not be quiet for long.

* * *

By contrast, let's turn to another mining town in B.C., one that should have disappeared decades ago, but whose grimy, dilapidated, depressed shanties have defied time and progress at Michel, home of the richest coal mines in the province.

Anyox, although a company town, had attractive, two-storey homes, indoor plumbing, street lighting and other amenities of the 20th century.

Michel, and its "suburb", Middletown, has some liveable homes, but there are many ground-level shacks under the shadow of the slack piles. They have no streets, other than the southern trans-provincial highway, and the atmosphere in the bottom of a defile between two mountains is perpetual smoke and dust from the mining and byproducts operations around which the houses cluster.

But at last—this spring—Michel, Middletown and neighboring Natal are doomed.

In a joint federal-provincial project, the properties are being acquired for relocation of the west.

Ottawa is giving more than $1 million to the project, which included demolition and relocation if desired, of residential, commercial and publicly-owned facilities.

Cleared land will be available in 1968 and 1969 for purchase by Crow's Nest Pass Coal Co. for expansion of its works.

Fish Remains In Holds Of Trawlers

VANCOUVER (CP)—Greater Vancouver locals of the United Fishermen and Allied Workers' Union will vote today and Wednesday on whether to authorize unloading of 300,000 pounds of fish still in the holds of five trawlers tied up in Prince Rupert.

The trawler crews are on strike for better catch-sharing agreements and shoreworkers refused to cross picket lines to unload the fish.

Vessel owners obtained a B.C. Supreme Court injunction ordering union officials to authorize the unloading, but the officials said their union constitution did not give them authority to comply with the order, unless the membership agrees.

Agreements were reached with 22 trawler owners on a catch-sharing basis of 40 per cent to the owner in five-men boats. Other owners are holding out for larger shares in boats with special equipment.

Victoria fishermen and shoreworkers met Monday night but the results of the vote were not disclosed.

Union spokesmen said all local votes will be tabulated in Vancouver and the result should be known in a day or two.

Oil Workers Turn Down Wage Offer

VANCOUVER (CP)—The Oil Workers' Union Monday rejected a 4.6 per cent wage increase offered by three oil companies, moving national contract negotiations into another bargaining session.

British-American Oil Ltd. Shell Canada Ltd. and Imperial Oil Ltd. made the offer which, said a spokesman for the union, "doesn't even warrant going before our national co-ordinating committee for recommendation."

R. J. Philp, west coast representative and the union's national bargaining co-ordinator, said the industry "has failed to make any offer on other matters in our proposals."

The union has asked for a two-year agreement with a 20 per cent raise. The skilled journeyman's present rate is $3.10 per hour.

The proposed agreement also includes full union shops, national wage standards and improved vacation of four weeks after 10 years service and five after 20.

U.S. Must Improve Gold Mining Methods

WASHINGTON (AP) — Only two per cent of the gold known to be in the ground in the U.S. is considered economically minable, Interior Secretary Stewart L. Udall says.

Udall drew on appraisals of 1,300 active and inactive gold mines made by the bureau of mines, which estimates the known gold resources at 400,000,000 ounces.

The gold is there, but the means of extracting it must be improved, Udall said.

CANADIAN BANKS

Fancy Financial Footwork

TORONTO (CP) — Canada's chartered banks, expecting a change in the rules of their game May 1, have started doing a little fancy financial footwork to get ready.

The Bank of Montreal Monday pulled the latest switch in tactics, announcing that it would reduce its prime lending rate to 5¾ from six per cent and pay four per cent interest on savings account deposits instead of three.

The revised Bank Act, the code under which the banks operate, has won parliamentary approval and is expected to take effect in its new form May 1. There were published forecasts that changes will mean more competition among the banks.

G. Arnold Hart, chairman and president of the Bank of Montreal, said the reduction in the prime interest rate — the rate charged big borrowers who are the best credit risks—resulted from a "new flexibility permitted under the revised Bank Act."

Competing bank officials had this to say:

F. W. Nicks, chairman and president of the Bank of Nova Scotia—In regard to general conditions, any reduction is premature.

S. T. Paton, vice-president of Toronto-Dominion — the reduction is not justified in view of general conditions.

L. G. Greenwood, chief general manager of the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce in Toronto — Demand for loans does not indicate a justification for reduction of the prime rate.

A spokesman for the Banque Provincial du Canada said the rate cut is a good policy and his bank will eventually follow suit, but a spokesman for the Royal Bank of Canada said: "We're studying it."

The other banks had no comment on the plan for a higher interest rate on straight savings accounts—those with no chequing privileges.

Earlier this year, the much-publicized Mercantile Bank of Canada began offering 4½ per cent interest on similar accounts.

The prevailing interest rate on savings accounts is three per cent.

U.S., Canadian Purchases Soar

WASHINGTON (CP) — United States exports to Canada last year reached a record $6,700,000,000, up 18 per cent.

But U.S. imports from Canada also rose by 27 per cent, expanding over the full year in contrast to dips elsewhere in the final quarter.

"The 18-per-cent advance in sales to Canada accounted for well over one-third of the $2,700,000,000 increase in U.S. exports last year and surpassed our combined gains in exports to Western Europe and Japan," says International Commerce, published by the U.S. commerce department.

The record value is credited largely to "expanding industrial production and greater capital spending there and the duty-free automotive products trade agreement."

The U.S. share of all Canadian imports rose to 72 per cent —the "highest level reached in recent years."

Imports from Canada were $6,125,000,000, says the publication. Both U.S. exports to and imports from Canada showed increases in each quarter. Canada supplied about 24 per cent of all U.S. purchases.

Total U.S. exports rose 10 per cent to $29,400,000,000 and imports from all areas shot up by 20 per cent to $25,600,000,000 for a reduced trade surplus of $3,800,000,000.

DELIVERIES JUMPED

Says the survey of Canada's impact:

"An upsurge in deliveries of motor vehicles, aircraft and related parts and industrial and agricultural machinery was responsible for most of the increase. Sales of chemicals, textiles, metal manufactures and scientific and controlling instruments also showed good gains.

"Over half the steep increase in imports from Canada was in greatly expanded arrivals of motor vehicles, engines and parts, agricultural and electrical machinery and aircraft. Also contributing to the higher import bill from Canada were larger purchases of crude petroleum, lumber, wood pulp, newsprint, ores and aluminum.

"Copper metal and scrap rose sharply both in value and quantity as supplies from other areas failed to meet rising U.S. demand."

The Vietnamese war was a prime reason for heavier U.S. demand for such items, as well as the general range of imports. The interior department has just announced record crude-oil imports, with the Canadian share in 1966 rising to a record daily rate of 384,000 barrels against about 322,000 barrels in 1965. Canada supplied 15.7 per cent of all U.S. crude oil imports last year.

Atlantic Probe Postponed Until Early in April

TORONTO (CP)—Hearings of the royal commission investigating the collapse in June, 1965, of Atlantic Acceptance Corp. Ltd. have been postponed to April 5. They had been scheduled to resume today.

Commission officials said the postponement was called to permit the gathering of more information.

The commission, already sitting for a year, in effect has completed its investigation of the $150,000,000 collapse of Atlantic. The next stage of its hearings, expected to last six weeks, is to look into the involvement of British Mortgage and Trust Co. Ltd. with Atlantic.

British Mortgage was absorbed by Victoria and Grey Trust Co. after it suffered heavy losses following its tieup with Atlantic.

Kent Cooke To Sell Television Systems

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Entrepreneur-sportsman Jack Kent Cooke says he plans to sell 21 of his community antenna television systems in 14 states.

Cooke said Friday that the systems for sale are those serving smaller cities and that his firm — American Cablevision — will concentrate on metropolitan markets.

Discussing the sale, the Canadian-born Cooke said:

"I expect they'll go for about $35,000,000."

$46 MILLION PROGRAM

Pipeline Will Expand

OTTAWA (CP)—A $46,000,000 program to expand Canadian sections of the Alberta-Ontario oil pipeline has been recommended by the national energy board for cabinet approval.

The Interprovincial Pipe Line Co. hopes to begin work in May and finish in December to serve increased refinery requirements along the line by 1968.

A matching increase in capacity of the American section, between points near Gretna, Man., and Sarnia, will be carried out by Interprovincial's U.S. subsidiary, Lakehead Pipe Line Co. Inc.

The program represents another stage in a long-range expansion program begun in 1963 and automatic cabinet approval is expected. The energy board's recommendation was announced today.

Interprovincial will make 13 separate "loop" sections of 34-inch diameter pipe totalling 312 miles in Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba. It will also lay 58 miles of 20-inch pipe in four loops in Ontario.

PLAN PUMPING STATIONS

It will build new pumping stations at Strome, Alta., Craik, Sask., and Pelham, Ont., and expand and modify stations at Edmonton, Hardisty and Metiskow in Alberta; Kerrobert, Milden, Regina and Glenavon in Saskatchewan; Cromer and Glenboro in Manitoba; and Sarnia, Bryanston and Westover in Ontario.

Deliveries of oil from the line east of Edmonton totalled 595,000 barrels a day in 1966 and Interprovincial forecasts an increase to 652,000 barrels a day this year.

The new facilities will provide for a minimum over-all through output of 704,000 barrels daily in 1968, and Interprovincial testified in its application that potential deliveries may reach 725,000.

SUPPLY MANY REFINERIES

The pipeline system begins at Redwater, Alta., and supplies refineries in the Prairie provinces and Ontario in Canada, and in Minnesota, Wisconsin, Michigan, Ohio and New York in the U.S. The Ontario section between Sarnia and Port Credit is tapped by a branch line that stretches south to Buffalo, N.Y.

Interprovincial's American subsidiary plans to build 101 miles of 34-inch loop plus 10 new pumping stations and additions to nine existing stations.

A $35,000,000 debenture issue made last Nov. 1 by Interprovincial will finance most of the expansion in Canada. The company told the energy board it had no firm plan about raising the rest, but would weigh conditions in the money market as the funds are required.

Financing for Lakehead will probably be arranged in the U.S.

Loans Set Record

VANCOUVER (CP) — B.C. Teachers' Credit Union loans soared 20 per cent to a record $4,867,933, it has been announced. Credit Union president L. Grant told the annual meeting savings increased to $4,260,671 and the credit union's assets stood at $6,111,082.

Interest Rate Cut Due GM Car Dealers

TORONTO (CP)—General Motors Acceptance Corp. of Canada says it is reducing its interest rates to dealers on new car transactions to 6½ per cent from 6¾ per cent, effective April 1. The new rates will also apply on all outstanding accounts.

The move follows a similar reduction in lending rates by GMAC to 6¾ per cent from seven per cent March 21.

22 Safety Standards In Volvo

ROCKLEIGH, N.J. (UPI) —Volvo of Sweden introduced today a new sedan model that incorporates nearly all the new U.S. federal safety standards which become mandatory with 1968 models. The major U.S. auto-makers insist they cannot adopt the same standards by the deadline.

The four-door sedan, called the 144s, meets 17 of the 20 standards created by the National Traffic Agency and five other safety features not required by the regulations.

The five extra features, according to Volvo Inc., president Stig Jansson, are energy absorbing front and rear body sections, rear brake pressure relief valves, rear window defrosters, safety wheel rims and an anti-whiplash device on the front seat.

Jansson said all the safety features were engineered into the 144's, Volvo's first new sedan in a decade, more than a year before the start of the safety controversy that led to the new government standards.

Offside Goal Enables Russia to Down Canada

VIENNA (CP) — Bowed heads, tears and bitter disappointment told the story Monday night of another vain effort by Canada to regain the world hockey championship, an effort that ended with a 2-1 loss to the defending champion Russians.

The victory wrapped up this year's title for the Russians.

Neither team displayed clear superiority in an exciting game that produced the first real opposition the Russians have met in the tournament. As one Viennese writer put it: "Canada fought like hell against the Russians but was put down by two goals—one a fluke and the other disputed."

Canada still has hopes of finishing second for the first time since 1962. It hasn't won the title since 1961.

The defeat, Canada's first in the round - robin tournament after four victories and a 1-1 tie with Czechoslovakia, left the Canadian national team in second place, three points behind the Russians and one ahead of the Czechs.

Strong forechecking gave the Canadians an edge in the first period, when they took a 1-0 lead on a goal by Fran Huck of Regina, and the Russians were thrown off stride for the first time in the tournament.

First a Fluke

But the Russians tied the score on a freak goal by Anatoly Firsov in the middle of the second period and from then on played with more confidence and hustle, frequently putting veteran goalie Seth Martin of Trail, B.C., to a severe test.

Firsov's goal looked more like a tennis lob or a baseball popfly than a hockey shot. He lofted a high shot from the Canadian blue line and it came down past the outstretched hand of defenceman Jack Bownass of Winnipeg and bounced off the glove of Toronto defenceman Barry MacKenzie into Martin's nets.

Everybody admitted it was a fluke, including Firsov, the tournament's top scorer with 21 points on 10 goals and 11 assists. "I was damn lucky to get that in," he said in the Russian dressing room.

"It was a fluke," Canadian coach Jackie McLeod said bluntly.

Vyacheslav Starshinov got the winning goal in the third period, on a play on which the Canadians claimed Russia's Boris Majorov was offside.

Majorov broke loose with Starshinov down the middle and Starshinov drove in Majorov's rebound. McLeod said Majorov was about four feet inside the Canadian blue line when he took a pass from the other side of centre ice that started the play.

"I saw it, we all saw it, even referee Ted Daily saw it," McLeod said. "But nobody called it back."

Fran Fought On

Daily, an American, "told me afterwards he was not in position to call it," McLeod said.

Huck, leading Canadian scorer, played with a strained stomach muscle. He was, nevertheless, one of the stars for Canada, along with Martin and defenceman Carl Brewer, a former National Hockey League all - star with Toronto Maple Leafs.

Brewer had to sit out some of the game in the second period and early in the third after catching a stick near his left eye. The swelling made it almost impossible for him to keep the eye open.

Brewer set up Huck's goal in the first period, while the Russians were serving a penalty for having too many men on the ice.

The only games scheduled in the eight-country championship group today pitted East Germany against Finland and West Germany against the United States.

Canada plays Sweden and Russia plays Czechoslovakia in the tournament windup Wednesday.

Behind Russia, the race for second and third places was thrown wide open by the Russian defeat of Canada and a 5-5 tie between Sweden and Czechoslovakia Monday.

Canada has nine points, the Czechs eight and the Swedes seven.

Can Make Second

Canada will clinch second place if it beats or ties Sweden in the first game Wednesday.

If Canada loses to Sweden, however, it may finish second, third or fourth, depending upon the outcome of the Russian-Czech encounter later in the day.

If Russia beats the Czechs, Canada and Sweden will be left in a two-way tie for second place and the verdict will be given to Sweden because of its victory over Canada, which will be relegated to third.

Canada would salvage second place in the event of a Russian-Czech tie. Canada, Czechoslovakia and Sweden would end up in a three-way tie for second place and the standings would have to be settled on the basis of the goal spread, or difference between goals for the goals against. On this basis, the Canadians are well ahead.

A Czech victory over Russia would put the Czechs alone in second place, leaving Canada and Sweden tied for third on points but with Canada relegated to fourth because of its loss to Sweden.

Hal Malone
LOOKS AT SPORTS

After listening to the Canada-Czechoslovakia and Canada-Russia games I am disposed to suggesting that the world hockey championship deserves a new name.

Would you believe the world handicap hockey championship?

BUNNY AHEARNE
. . . cosy administration

Not because Canada was tied by the Czechs. Nor bumped by the Russians. Any time you lose a hockey game it is hardly the twilight of civilization.

But under Bunny Ahearne's cosy International Ice Hockey Federation administration handicap is the name of the game for Canada.

In two games, Canada had two legal goals disallowed and two illegal against her allowed.

Psychologically, Canada was put through the wringer four times. In what amounts to a sudden-death schedule, what greater morale-destroyer is there?

Ahearne's position seems to be that if the refereeing is incompetent — an admission I have not heard him make — it affects every team.

Quite so. In theory.

But the same thing happened to Canada last year in Lublanja.

And now Vienna.

At one time it might have sounded like pure parochialism for Canadians or North Americans to holler for the cops whenever they felt their teams had been jobbed.

But now video tape provides irrefutable evidence that cries of foul are real and not emotional.

The camera proved in the Canada-Czechoslovakia game that the referees were in need of seeing eye partners when they ruled (a) Gary Dineen had his stick above his waist in the play leading to Canada's first disallowed goal; and (b) that Jean Cusson was not in the crease on Billy McMillan's no-count goal.

Scotty Bowman, the general manager of the expansionist St. Louis Blues, was in Vienna. He commented on McMillan's effort: "If Cusson was in the crease — and I don't think he was — he was there because a Czech defenceman was sitting on him. Cusson couldn't move."

Why Did Referee Ted Daily Dally?

Pileups are part of hockey, Bowman agreed, "but in this case the Czech goalie had a clear view of the play."

If Cusson's violation was so obvious, why, one wonders, was the glaring offside on the second and winning Russian goal not equally apparent?

The CBC announcing team of Don Chevrier and Phil Reimer pointedly claimed that the Russian player was four feet offside, "body, stick and puck."

The Russian offside was, in the view of Chevrier and Reimer, within the myopic range of the U.S. referee Ted Daily. This is the same soul who felt moved to pull the string on Cusson.

The coincidence did not escape Canada's foremost scorer, Fran Huck.

He skated to Daily after the Russian game and said, "Thanks a lot, fella. I didn't know you had moved."

If history repeats itself, an army of flag-wavers will decry Canada's effort at the world championships. They will say we are not sending our best, that we shouldn't go, that any world championships without Chicago or Montreal or Toronto are a joke.

Winning an Objective, Not Necessity

The first two propositions are solely predicated on the necessity of winning, rather on the desire of having victory as an objective. You don't win all your battles in life — why must we do so in hockey?

Canada can't send her pros into international arenas until the Russians — especially the Russians — stop playing semantic roulette and admit that the Russian amateur went out with the five-cent cigar.

The circumstances at Vienna which mitigated against the Canadian nationals are distressing, but hardly fatal. Rather than deplore the effort, Canadians should be grateful to those who made it.

World hockey had the stage on the weekend. But down in Colorado, at a place quaintly named Jackson Hole, Nancy Greene demonstrated that a Canadian can climb the highest peak.

After missing several world competition meets (to compete in her home country) she showed the Germans, the French and the Austrians that the best girl in the world can come out of a little place like Rossland, B.C.

Early Monday the phone rang here. The caller wanted to know if Nancy could be reached in Colorado. Asked why, Gar Dixon, secretary to B.C.'s No. 1 citizen, said: "The Lieutenant-Governor (George Pearkes) would like to send her his congratulations."

Smith Takes Cup Contest

Exciting action was served up for about 700 spectators at Goldstream Sunday as the Victoria Motorcycle Club staged the 27th annual running of the club's 250 cc Challenge Cup championship event.

Running over a rough, half-mile course of four straightaways and five corners, Bill Smith took the 250 cc over-all crown with Al Barclay second and Martin Spriggs third.

Smith also took a one-race, "grand prix" event with Barclay again in the runner-up position.

Over-all winner in races or machines of any size was Dan McLaren. He was followed by Paddy Smith and Ian Batey.

Next VMC race will be a cross-country event at Goldstream on April 9 at 1:30 p.m.

AGAINST CANUCKS

Millie Shoots For 40 Goals

Vancouver Canucks may wish to make a favorable impression on Victoria fans Wednesday night at Memorial Arena, but don't expect them to be too friendly.

Rumors from Vancouver insist that no ice will be available at Vancouver Forum after April 30 and if the Canucks survive that long in Western Hockey League playoffs they may play some games in Victoria.

Currently battling Seattle Totems for second place, the Canucks have a big date tonight at the ancient Forum. They clash head-on with the Totems, who hold a three-point edge over the third-place Canucks. Seattle, however, has played one more game.

Canucks will continue their bid for the runner-up spot Wednesday when they tackle Victoria Maple Leafs at Memorial Arena at 8:15.

DIFFERENT ROLE

Leafs, who reached the playoff final in both of their first two seasons in Victoria and captured the Patrick Cup last year, are cast in a different role this time.

Bounced out of playoff contention Sunday at Oakland, when they lost their third straight game of a California road trip, the Leafs can only be spoilers in their final three games—two against Vancouver and one against leading Portland here Saturday night.

There will still be something at stake for some of the Leafs.

MILLIE AIMS FOR 40

Milan Marcetta, running sixth in the league scoring race with 71 points, needs just two more goals to make it his first 40-goal season.

Bob Barlow, who was mired in a frustrating slump and managed only two goals in Victoria's first 36 games, has been the club's scoring leader down the homestretch. He now has boosted his total to 20 goals and will be trying to add to the total.

Bruce Carmichael has 29 goals and will be shooting for a place on the 30-goal plateau and defenceman Aut Erickson, winding up his best scoring season, hopes to finish with 40 points. Aut now has eight goals and 27 assists.

In addition to Marcetta and Carmichael, two other Leafs have topped 20 goals. Andy Hebenton has 23 and Lou Jankowski has 21 despite missing all four games last week because of a combination of food poisoning and 'flu.

JANKOWSKI AILING

All the Leafs are thinking about next year's contracts and will be hoping to finish with a flourish to impress their employers and coach Frank Mario is expected to give his younger players plenty of ice time in the final games.

Here are the league's top 10 scorers:

SENIOR CURLING

New Brunswick Upsets Alberta on Extra End

MONTREAL (CP) — New Brunswick, Saskatchewan and Manitoba remained the only unbeaten rinks today after Monday's first two rounds of the national senior men's curling championship.

The New Brunswick entry, under the direction of skip Jim Murphy of the Saint John Curling Club, pulled an extra-end, 9-8 win over favored Alberta in the second round to keep its record intact at 2-0.

Calgary's Jack Bury held a 7-4 edge at the end of six rounds, but Murphy chipped sway for a total of four during the seventh, eighth and ninth ends before Bury replied with a single rock to send the game into overtime. in the 10th

Saskatchewan, represented by Hazen Pond's Prince Albert rink, whipped Quebec's Montreal West entry 11-5 to keep their winning intact. Stan Ferry had drawn a bye for the host province in the morning round.

The strong Frank Avery rink from Vancouver, posted a 7-5 win over Carl Asmussen of Kitchener, Ont., in the evening round to bring him a 1-1 mark for Monday's play.

Burnaby Girl Holds Junior Singles Lead

TORONTO (CP)—Manitoba and Southern and Northern Ontario bowlers hold the spotlight after two days of action in the National Youth Bowling Congress fivepin championships.

Youngsters from the West were leading in the bantam girls singles, junior and senior boys singles and senior doubles and teams.

At the end of play Monday, the Southern Ontario bowlers held sway in the bantam boys doubles, junior girls doubles, and the senior girls singles and teams.

Northern Ontario bowlers led in the bantam boys and girls teams and junior boys and girls teams.

WINDS UP TODAY

The competition, bringing together 275 youngsters from British Columbia, Alberta, Saskatchewan, Manitoba, Northern and Southern Ontario, and Newfoundland, ends today.

Connie Morrision of Burnaby, B.C., took over the top spot in the junior girls singles, held during the first round by Judy Stavechny of Brandon, Man.

British Columbia also held the lead in the junior boys and senior girls doubles.

Ken Ploen Signs For 11th Season

WINNIPEG (CP) — Quarterback Kenny Ploen who led Winnipeg Blue Bombers to four Canadian championships in the last 10 years has signed his 11th contract, the Western Football Conference club announced today.

Ploen, 6'1", 185-pounds, came to Winnipeg in 1957 after leading University of Iowa to a Rose Bowl victory in his final college season.

An All-Star in his rookie season with Blue Bombers, he won the distinction again in 1959 and was selected all-Canadian quarterback in 1965.

LITTLE LEAGUE REGISTRATIONS

NEW YORK FANS EAGER FOR PLAYOFF TICKETS

NEW YORK (AP)—Police estimated about 10,000 fans lined up early Monday outside Madison Square Garden to purchase tickets for the New York Rangers' first appearance in hockey's Stanley Cup playoffs in five years.

The Rangers, currently in fourth place, still have a chance to take second in the regular National Hockey League race which ends Sunday.

Chicago long ago clinched first place. Toronto and Montreal are tied for second with 71 points each, while the Rangers have 70.

Favored Jayvees Take First Game

SAINT JOHN, N.B. (CP)—Windsor, Ont. AKO came from behind late in the game to defeat Mount Royal junior college Cougars of Calgary 64-63 Monday night in the Canadian junior basketball championships here.

The game was the best of four played during the opening day of the double-elimination tournament.

In other action, University of British Columbia Jayvees, the pre-tournament favorite, shook off a spell of inaccurate shooting in the first half to whip Moncton, St. Pat's Celtics 82-51 and Montreal Orchies established themselves as a top contender by walking to an easy 82-55 victory over Halifax Warriors.

Warriors were later eliminated in a 69-54 defeat to Moncton.

VANDERMEULEN LEADS

Dr. Norman Watt's Jayvees couldn't get untracked in the opening half but held a 38-27 lead over Moncton.

Sam Vandermeulen scored 13 points in the first half and finished with 20 in leading the Jayvees. Rich Inrig sank 18.

SHAW JOINS THE SAINTS

NEW ORLEANS (AP)—Bob Shaw, who resigned last week as head coach of the Toronto Argonauts of the Canadian Football League, Monday was named receiver-coach of New Orleans Saints, new entry in the National Football League.

Coach Tom Fears made the announcement following reports from Toronto that the 43-year-old Shaw had taken a job with the U.S. club.

St. George's Wins 17-14

FUKUOKA, Japan (AP) —St. George's School rugby team of Vancouver came from behind to defeat All-Fukuoka City High School Selection 17-14 here today.

The visitors overtook the tired-out Japanese in the 30th minute of the play and went on to their second victory in four games against Japanese teams.

Arnett Slaps Winner As Nelson Wins Title

NELSON (CP)—Nelson Maple Leafs won the Western International Hockey League championship Monday night, downing Spokane Jets 3-2 on an overtime goal.

Playing coach Frank Arnett gave the Leafs their second Savage Cup victory in the 49-year history of the league with a slapshot from the point at 1:15 of an overtime period.

The Leafs, who took the best of seven series in five games, now meet Drumheller Miners, defending Allan Cup champions, in the Western Canada quarter-final beginning in Nelson April 7.

The Nelson team won the opener 10-2, dropped the second contest in Spokane 5-0, took the third game 5-3 at home, then travelled to Spokane to beat the Jets 5-4 during the weekend.

Carl Chwachka and Buck Crawford scored early singles for the winners in Monday night's contest, but Don Scherza and Ron Bahr battled back to tie it up for the Jets.

When Juan Marichal puts his $100,000 arm to work in San Francisco's season opener next month, Jack Hiatt figures to watch the action from a front-row seat in the bullpen.

But the Giants' reserve catcher prefers the view from behind the plate — and the farther he hits, the closer he gets.

Hiatt led off the 10th inning Monday with a towering home run, giving San Francisco a 3-2 exhibition victory over California Angels, who dealt him to the Giants in 1964 for outfielder Jose Cardenal.

Marichal, meanwhile, showed up at the Giants' Phoenix, Ariz. camp, signed his first $100,000 contract to pitch in the April 11 season opener at St. Louis. The Dominican right-hander, a 25-game winner in 1966, was the last of this year's holdouts.

"I feel I'm in good endition and ready to go fight to work," said Marichal.

The long ball made the difference in three other games on Monday's exhibition schedule.

HITS 3-RUN HOMER

Sam Bowens' three-run homer lifted Baltimore Orioles past Washington Senators 4-3, two homers gave Pittsburgh Pirates a 5-4 nod over Los Angeles Dodgers and Atlanta Braves cracked five homers in trimming Boston Red Sox 6-1.

Chicago White Sox downed New York Yankees 12-7 in a 31-hit struggle, Houston Astros edged Minnesota Twins 7-6 on Dave Adlesh's single in the 12th inning, Cincinnati Reds whipped St. Louis Cardinals 7-4, Chicago Cubs edged Cleveland Indians 5-4 and the Kansas City-Philadelphia game ended in a 2-2 tie when rain stopped play after nine innings.

Dodgers' centre fielder Jim Hickman missed a shoestring bid for Andre Rodgers' liner with two on in the fifth inning and it went for an inside-the-park homer. Willie Stargell's sixth - inning shot tipped left fielder Bob Bailey's glove and went over the fence for a two-run homer that won it for the Pirates.

4 BRAVES GET HOMERS

Felipe Alou, Denis Menke, Mack Jones and Rico Carty all homered for Atlanta off ex-Brave Hank Fisher and Clete Boyer rapped a two-run homer in the eighth against Dan Osinski, another former Brave.

The White Sox rapped out 17 hits and battered Mel Stottlemyre for five runs in the eighth inning to outscore the Yankees.

Lee May and Vada Pinson each drove in two runs and John Edwards hit a bases-empty homer for Cincinnati while Ron Santo, who had homered in the second inning, delivered the winner for the Cubs with a fifth-inning sacrifice fly.

Don Lock's ninth - inning homer pulled the Phillies even with Kansas City before the rains came.

Chemainus Hooper Struts His Stuff

VANCOUVER (CP)—A versatile team of provincial high school all-stars walloped a Vancouver City College squad 85-62 in a Simon Fraser University-sponsored all-star game Monday on the Burnaby Mountain campus.

A spokesman said the Vancouver team, coached by Gene Rizak, didn't have the individual talent to compete with the visitors.

The star of the game was Bill Robinson of Chemainus who netted 20 points for the provincial squad. He received the most valuable player award for his efforts which included setting up six other baskets.

Bob Paterson of Kamloops added 15 points for the visitors while Jim Kardash of North Vancouver scored 15 for the Vancouver City College team.

The winners led 20-10 after the first quarter, 46-25 at the half and 74-37 after the third.

Boxing Club Booters Thump Portland Club

London Boxing Club of the Victoria and District Soccer League's second division displayed a big punch at Portland.

Playing a weekend exhibition match against Portland, the booting boxers took a 7-1 decision on goals by Allan, Barnswell, Alexander, Black, Vegas, Robbins and McIntyre.

FIGHT RESULT

SAN FRANCISCO—Jimmy Lester, 180, San Francisco, knocked out Tony Montao, 184, Phoenix, Ariz., 7.

City Swimmers Snap Three Alberta Marks

CALGARY — Mary Pat Pumfrey of Victoria set a pair of Alberta records here during the weekend as British Columbia defeated Alberta 269-221 in the first dual swimming meet between the two provinces.

Strength in relay events played a big part in the triumph by the coast swimmers, who won 10 of 16 relay contests. The B.C. squad was coached by Trevor Cole of Victoria Olympians and John Stevens of Vancouver's Arbutus Club.

Miss Pumfrey set Alberta marks in 200-meter breaststroke events as she won the women's open in 2:56.0 and took the 13-14 age-group race in 2:57.6. She also assisted in an age-group, medley relay win.

Another Victoria splasher, Jan Cronk, set a new Alberta record for girls 10-and-under as she finished the 100-meter breaststroke event in 1:37.1. Miss Cronk also swam on two winning relay squads.

Other placings in individual events by Victoria swimmers were by:

Rick Davidge, third in boys' 11-and-12 freestyle; Lorrie Cosby, second in girls' 13-and-14 backstroke and third in women's open backstroke, and Grant Treloar, third in men's open backstroke.

Individual star of the meet was Ron Wigham, a Calgary youngster who cracked four national records in the boys' 10-and-under section.

Esquimalt Curling

Competition in the sixth annual Esquimalt men's curling bonspiel continues tonight at the Sports Centre.

Bonspiel rinks, which included quartets skipped by Vern Kaspick of Duncan and Harry Dewar of Dawson Creek, will be in action each evening until swinging into day-long play Saturday. Final rounds are slated for Sunday.

Tonight's early draws:

6 p.m.—Everold Smith vs Larry Robinson, Don Edl vs Bill Beach, Bob Gallaugher vs Lynol Mack, Lyle Gordon vs Ray Dagg, Harry Donaldson vs H. Bird, Pat Thompson vs Bill Ludlow.

8:15 p.m.—Les McMullen vs Don Moss, Ken Sturrock vs CKDA.

Indian Soccer Title Won by Powell River

Powell River Sliammon captured the Totem Cup and the championship of the fifth annual all-Indian soccer tournament at Hampton Park.

The Powell River booters took the trophy Sunday by downing Sasquatch 3-0 in the championship game, which climaxed three days of play between 12 teams.

North Vancouver Drake Hotel collected the consolation crown with a 5-2 victory over Cape Mudge.

The tournament was sponsored by the Songhees Recreation Committee.

Results of Saturday's matches.

Mission 5, Cowichan 0; Drake Hotel 8, Songhees 2; Powell River 7, Ladysmith 2; Sidney 5, Alberni 2; Sasquatch 2, Sechelt 1; Cape Mudge 2, Nanaimo 1.

Tough, This Nancy? Try Her Knee Bends

By BRUCE LEVETT
Canadian Press Sports Writer

Nancy Greene came home from Europe this year with two goals — the World Cup ski championship and a gold medal at the 1968 Olympic Games in Grenoble, France.

It was a trip she had made before—but this time things were different. The pressure was on.

The girl from Rossland, B.C., wearing her white crash helmet with Tiger emblazoned in red across the front, had flashed to victory over the best skiers in the world.

International sports magazines were printing pictures of her slamming through slalom gates or booming across the finish line in the downhill.

And, by coming home midway through the season to ski in Canada, she was spotting her top rivals six important races with points counting to the cup.

CALM WAS BROKEN

And the pressure told. This new Nancy—more mature at 23 and with more poise than she had shown before—broke during recent competition at Franconia, N.H. and snapped at sport writers: "Why me—I'm not here to supply you with stories to write."

This lone outburst from the girl who had become the darling of the press conferences, illustrated the tension she was feeling.

Today, Nancy is relaxed again. She has the World Cup, visible proof that she is the top woman skier in the world and she is heading for the Far West Kandahar races outside Reno, Nev., this weekend.

Will she let down, as Jean-Claude Killy of France did once he had the men's cup sewed up?

Not according to Paul Serhenick of the Canadian Amateur Ski Association, who says "this is one tough little gal."

KEEPS IN SHAPE

Tough she is. To keep in shape during the off-season she does deep-knee bends, straightening up to her full 5-feet-4 with her kid brother on her shoulders. She lifts weights nearly twice as heavy as her 124 pounds.

And she is tough in other ways.

Ottawa-born Nancy is one of six children of skiing parents and has had to work hard at her skiing and her schooling.

After passing university entrance examinations she worked as a secretary to earn money to keep skiing and studying. This year she entered Notre Dame University at Nelson, B.C.—where most of the Canadian ski team trains—after five years out of school.

MADE OWN DECISION

Pat Ramage of Toronto, another CASA official who knows Nancy well, went to several of the World Cup meets with the team this year.

"She's still the same girl—she still bubbles, but she is showing more assurance as she is growing up," Miss Ramage says.

"It was her decision to return to Canada with the team. She felt that since Canada had invited top international skiers here to compete, it would have been rude to stay away."

MINOR LACROSSE LADS GO TO WORK SATURDAY

Winners of four provincial championships last year, teams in the Greater Victoria Minor Lacrosse Association will shake out the kinks for the first time in 1967 Saturday.

Player registrations will be held concurrent with workouts.

Victoria boys will drill at Stevenson Park; Saanich youngsters at Hampton.

Workouts start at 8:30 a.m. for tykes, under 8; at 9:30 for novices, under 10; at 10:30 for pee wees, under 12, and, at 11:30 for bantams, under 14.

Registrations will also be held April 5, at 5:30 p.m., at Stevenson and Hampton.

Ladysmith Team Best in Bonspiel

A Ladysmith team overcame a formidable 117-pin deficit Monday to win $500 top prize money in the fourth annual Vancouver Island tenpin bonspiel at Mayfair Lanes.

Johnnie's Service pounded out a last-game total of 765 pins to defeat Eager Beavers 2,527 to 2,483.

A fabulous final game of 247 by leadoff Johnnie Mitchell lifted the Ladysmith quartet to victory. Mitchell earlier rolled series of 638 and 600.

Victory was the sixth straight for the champions. During that spell they missed their team average of 613 only once.

CENTENNIALS WIN

Bowling with Mitchell were George Dick, Gordon Walt and Jack Gallagher. Rolling for Eager Beavers were Merv Nelson, H. Rosenthal, Mel Nelson and Billy Tully.

Centennials took the Mayfair Event, defeating Four Dee's 2,503 to 2,417. Bert Thrilwell, Donna MacKenzie, Mamie Holligan and Larry MacKenzie carried Centennials' colors. Four Dee's was an all-Davies' event—Jack, Jane, Pat and John.

EXPO HIRING

Negro Refutes Race Charges

MONTREAL (CP) — Richard Lord, a prominent Quebec Negro, said Monday allegations that the world's fair practices racial discrimination are "absolutely groundless."

Mr. Lord, first vice-president of the Quebec Liberal Federation, a provincial political party now sitting in opposition in the Quebec Legislative assembly, said in a statement he feels obliged to reply to charges of racial discrimination levelled against Expo by the New York Urban League.

The league, a social agency seeking to improve the economic position of minority groups, has asked for cancellation of U.S. participation in Expo unless there is immediate assurance that "there will be no racial discrimination in employment or in the housing of visitors to the fair . . ."

TAVELLED WIDELY

Mr. Lord said he had worked for Expo for a little more than two years—from 1964 to 1966—and that in his capacity as "project engineer in charge of communications," he had been sent out to various cities to speak to service clubs about the fair.

"If Expo had a discriminatory policy, they surely wouldn't have sent me around the country to represent them."

Negroes were welcomed in Montreal and as of last Labor Day, from 20,000 to 30,000 American Negro tourists had visited this city.

"They found—as future Negro visitors will also find—that they were well received, like nowhere else they go on the North American continent."

Asked what might have motivated the league's charges, Mr. Lord said:

"Expo is the biggest, most attention-getting event going right now and I suspect that somebody in the Urban League wants to exploit this situation to get attention."

SHOWN PREJUDICE

The Expo staff was "quite a heterogeneous group" and there hadn't been "any prejudice involved in the hiring."

Mr. Lord said he would write to the Urban League himself to set that organization straight.

"In Montreal," he said, "there is no discrimination as the American Negro knows it. I know what it's like down there because I did some of my schooling in the States."

Earlier Monday, Robert Shaw, deputy commissioner-general of Expo, labelled the league's charges as "ridiculous and without foundation."

Meantime, Milton Fredman, deputy commissioner-general of the United States pavilion at Expo, said:

"I've been making reservations for friends in all kinds of accommodations, and I've not encountered any kind of discrimination through questions as to a visitor's racial or religious origin."

In Trois-Rivieres, Que., Yves Gabias, Quebec's provincial secretary, said U.S. Negroes and non - whites from around the world will be made welcome in this province "on the same basis as anyone else" if they come here for the six - month fair, which opens in April.

Stop-Light Might Save Some Lives

Saanich Reeve Hugh Curtis said today he fears it is "only a matter of time" before there is a fatal accident at Douglas and McKenzie unless a proper traffic light is installed.

In a letter to Highways Minister Gaglardi, he repeated earlier opinions that the existing flashing red and amber light "is of little use."

"I am sure you will share my view that such a fear is justified and that we should make the installation operative before, rather than, after, such a regrettable mishap.

"I know the municipal council would be completely willing to share in the cost of this installation."

U.S. Tie Examined

MANILA (Reuters)—A resolution seeking a total reappraisal of Philippine-United States relations was approved unanimously Monday night by the Philippine House of Representatives. The resolution approved an 11-man committee to re-examine in depth the relations between the two countries, pinpoint irritants in their relations and suggest solutions.

HOME GARDEN

Sweet Corn a Treat Worth the Gamble

By HILDA BEASTALL

Hilda

The gardener who likes his vegetables with all the flavor which is his reward for home cultivation, will know that sweet corn is one of the foods to brag about when he grows it himself.

Not every coastal summer will provide enough cobs to satisfy the family's needs, but an assist from the Master Gardener may lengthen the season.

Quite frequently it is the end of May before the nights are warm enough, or indeed realiably frost-free enough, to sow sweet corn in the garden, but a batch of started plants put out during the last days of May will bear cobs earlier than the outdoor sown seeds.

At the end of this week would be a good time to make a start on this project.

Take a full-sized flat, 12 by 24 inches, fill with square peat pots of the two-and-a-quarter-inch size. Pack closely together, being sure they stand level.

Fill with a slightly damp screened mixture of compost and peat moss, and into each pot press two seeds of corn. After germination, remove the weaker seedling.

It is only sensible to use an early maturing variety of corn to get early cobs. One known as Golden Miniature, growing to a height of four feet should be tried, for the cobs are early, sweet and tender.

Avoid having the soil and the pots too wet in the early stages or the seed may rot. Keep the flat in a warm window, and after germination, turn it at least once daily to prevent having the young plants lean outwards to the light.

CYANIDE IN MILK

CHICAGO (AP)—A trace of cyanide was reported found Monday in a tank of milk on a Ravenna, Ohio, farm in an apparently isolated incident on the 12th day of the National Farmers Organization holding action.

The milk was dumped, but state health department officials took a sample and said an individual would have had to drink "50 quarts to be affected."

How To Avoid Death On The Highway

Today's super highways are designed like air lanes — to keep traffic moving fast, smoothly and without stops. Getting a flat, running out of gas or a split-second change of direction can end up in a pile of jagged steel and severed limbs — even death! April issue of Reader's Digest features an important article which shows how everyday driving habits — harmless on ordinary roads — can be deadly on highways. Read what special driving techniques you need for high-speed driving . . . how you can protect yourself from careless drivers . . . how to recognize danger signs most people overlook . . . the art of "defensive" driving. Religion in Schools Hassle Re-Opened

TORONTO (CP)—Religion in the schools, long a contentious issue among Canadians, was debated again Monday at the annual meeting of the Ontario Education Association.

Dorothy McGuire, president of the Christian Women's Council on Education in Metropolitan Toronto, chastised the association for its support of comparative religion courses which, she said, would cause "confusion in immature minds."

She spoke out against the idea that the present system of religious knowledge courses in schools should be scrapped in favor of a course acceptable to everyone, as recommended by a brief submitted to the Keiller MacKay committee on religious education.

The association brief suggested the course be given by specifically-trained teachers instead of clergymen. It said instruction in morals or religion should be "similar in methods of teaching in other subjects."

Mrs. McGuire said that under the proposal the "little agnostic could say: 'I don't believe in God' and the teacher could say nothing."

ROOT OF DEMOCRACY

Very Rev. Angus MacQueen, a former moderator of the United Church of Canada, said a failure to preserve the "Judeo - Christian" heritage would be both undemocratic and anti - democratic, since democracy's roots are found in Judeo - Christian doctrines of man's sin and fallibility.

He said provision of a new, more acceptable form of religious education poses a challenge to both the churches and the educational system.

Mr. MacQueen felt the Bible courses recommended by Mrs. MacGuire were an "impossible ideal" because of the different views of liberal and conservative schools of Christian thought.

In a later interview, he said he favors the stand of the association. The OEA-supported said its proposal "would take care of some of the deep needs of every child," while eliminating the problem of exemptions from religious courses.

James Buller, chairman of the suburban East York board of education, told the meeting a breakdown in family relations is blamed for an increase in the juvenile delinquency rate among Canada's Indians.

He said the ratio of Indians in reform institutions to total Indian population is five times that of non-Indians. Mr. Buller, an Alberta - born Indian, was chairman of a panel discussion.

KNOWLEDGE LACKING

Virginia Summers, an Oneida who has taught in Indian and public schools in Ontario's Elgin County, said there is a lack of knowledge of Indian problems in communities near Indian reserves.

$20,000 Strike Aid Sent East

VANCOUVER (CP)—The British Columbia Teachers Federation voted Monday to send $20,000 to a Canadian Teachers Federation fund supporting Quebec teachers who went on strike Nov. 24 to back pay demands.

The Quebec teachers returned to their jobs last month after the provincial government ordered them back to work.

A spokesman at the B.C. Federation's 48th annual convention said the money would be sent to the CTF July 1.

The 1,000 delegates to the three-day convention also voted to increase their annual professional dues to $75 from the present $55, a 36 per cent boost.

TEENAGERS SAVE WOMAN

WEST VANCOUVER (CP)—Four unidentified teenage girls saved a grandmother from drowning Monday. Mrs. Alberta Parrott jumped into a swimming pool to rescue her granddaughter and another little girl, but became unconscious after pushing them from the water. The four girls pulled her from the water and left without giving their names.

Caravan Formed

VANCOUVER (CP) — About 200 men from the Army, Navy, Air Force and RCMP are training for the formation of a services' centennial caravan at the request of the provincial centennial committee. The caravan will visit communities in the Fraser Valley, Cariboo, Chilcotin and Northern Interior.

CATHOLICS TAKE NEW LOOK AT SEPARATE SCHOOLING

By GEORGE CORNELL

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) Some do-or-die questions today were put before Roman Catholicism's huge educational system in the U.S.

Among the crucial, widely argued issues cited were these:

1. "Why should the church be operating schools at all?"
2. "Does its goal of 'every Catholic child in a Catholic school' remain a possible and desirable one today?"
3. "Should we concentrate on one level of education or should we instead seek to promote education across the board on all levels?"

The questions were posed at the annual convention of the National Catholic Education Association by its president-general, Bishop Ernest J. Primeau of Manchester, N.H.

NEEDS PHILOSOPHY

"What Catholic education today needs more than anything else is a philosophy, a rationale for its own existence," he told the school officials and teachers, including thousands of nuns.

He said he feels sure most of those present "would agree emphatically that it is reasonable and even essential" for the church to sponsor edcational institutions, but he added:

"Even so, in honesty to ourselves, to the church and to American society, we are, it seems to me, duty - bound to formulate the reasons for the existence of a Catholic school system in the United States at this particular moment in history."

The basic questions were brought out at a time when change, critical inquiries and new proposals are coursing through the church's system of 14,000 U.S. schools with more than 6,000,000 pupils.

Amid its problems of rising costs to maintain quality, there have been suggestions that some segments of it, such as elementary parochial schools, be dropped or curtailed so as to concentrate resources at other levels.

ANSWERS NOT EASY

"Finding answers to the present challenges," Bishop Primeau said, demands "some hard and original thinking."

This is "perhaps particularly difficult in a time of transition when so much that was formerly taken for granted seems suddenly uncertain," he said.

Regarding the traditional Catholic ideal of "every Catholic child in a Catholic school," Bishop Primeau said it involves complex questions both as to its "abstract desirability" and "the dollar-and-cents facts of life."

After a century of strenuous effort, he noted, it is still far from a reality—with only about half of Catholic grade - school children in church schools, and a far smaller proportion of high school and college students.

POSES QUESTION

If the objective can't be achieved, he asked, "what should be done instead?"

As for the question of whether the church should seek to provide bottom-to-top education, or focus on a particular level, he cited studies indicating that church schools all the way make the fullest impact.

"If the implication of this fact seems to run head-on into seemingly insuperable problems in sustaining a massive Catholic educational system at all levels, I can only say that we should face the issue squarely and not seem to dodge it."

He expressed confidence that solutions to the problems will be found.

However, he said, the answers had to be found soon or the chance would "pass us by" and "blind determinism" would take over, bringing the "haphazard outcome of neglect."

RUNS FROM CELL

'You're Free' Russian Told

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (CP)—A Russian trawler captain convicted of violating U.S. fishing waters was released from jail Monday after the Soviet government paid his $10,000 fine.

Leonid Kushenko, 29, of Vladivostok, spend two days in an Alaska jail after he was found unable to pay the fine.

A cashier's cheque for $10,000 was deposited with the court clerk shortly before noon. The Soviet embassy in Washington arranged for the cheque.

U.S. marshal George Bayer went to Kushenko's cell and then realized he didn't know how to tell the Russian he was free.

Bayer then got a Russian dictionary and pointed to the word "free." Kushenko's face lit up, he jumped gleefully into the air and then ran from the cell.

Kushenko was flown to Kodiak. From there the U.S. Coast Guard took him to his 178-foot shrimp trawler, the SRTM 8-457, which was escorted from Kodiak to international waters by the Coast Guard Sunday afternoon.

The Coast Guard seized the trawler last Wednesday five miles off Alaska's Shumagin Islands in the first arrest for a violation of the newly enforced U.S. 12-mile fisheries zone.

Another Soviet trawler was seized by the same cutter March 2 only 1½ miles off the Alaska coast for violating the three-mile territorial limit. Skipper Nicolai Zernov was fined $5,000.

IT WON'T WORK, said Tory leadership candidate George Hees Monday in a discussion of services unification. Time will be lost in retraining men moved between branches of the service and morale will suffer, he stated.

Clothing Stolen

About $50 worth of clothing was stolen from a James Bay coin laundry Saturday evening.

A Niagara Street resident left the clothes unattended for about 15 minutes in two dryers.

FIRST THROUGH THE ROCKIES?

1912 Joys of Motoring Lost In Memories of Tire-Patching

By GLEN ALLEN

Don't put Charlie Robinson in the driver's seat.

Being a passenger is bad enough.

At least it was back in 1912 when he was a young and road-sick passenger in the first automobile to cross the prairies and mountains to Victoria.

It took the Robinson family well over a month to drive, navigate and even push a 1910 Buick here from a little town on the Manitoba border.

As Mr. Robinson, now retired and living in Vancouver puts it: "We never had a car before and none of us could drive, so we naturally decided to go to the coast."

12 New Tires

Mr. Robinson Sr. started out in Tantallon, Saskatchewan, on July 14, 1912, with three passengers, 12 new tire tubes, cans of rubber repair cement, extra gasoline and a very long way to go.

"We didn't know we were breaking any records," says Mr. Robinson.

"It was more like a big long picnic than anything else."

But some ingredients of the Family Robinson's picnic included: plagues of flying ants, loneliness (they didn't see another car in five days on the road), injuries (the crank-starter sprained at least one arm) and no roads at all. (They had to push the car along a pack trail near Fernie).

Their big complaint was tires.

"In those days," says Mr. Robinson, "there was no such thing as a kit to fix tires with. All you could get was rubber cement and an old inner tube.

20 Miles Daily

"We started with 12 tubes and by the time we went 60 miles — it took three days — they were all used up.

"Speeding" and going downhill, the car could be pushed to 35 miles per hour.

Any repairs to be done were often makeshift, effected by tradesmen who had rarely seen a car.

"Our biggest thrill almost made up for the hardships," says Mr. Robinson.

"We finally crossed the mountains and got to Elko, B.C.

"The people had heard us coming and the streets were lined with men, women and children.

Keys to City

"The mayor gave us the freedom of the town.

"They wouldn't let us pay for anything and we were guests at the local hotel.

"They told us we were the first ever to come from the east and that no other car had ever left there to go east.

Mr. Robinson said the rest of the trip to Victoria was uneventful except that the tires were "smooth as ice."

BUS CRASH KILLS 4

PARIS (AP)—Agence France-Presse reported today that 24 persons were killed and 32 injured when a bus crashed into a ravine near St. Denis, Reunion Isle, in the Indian Ocean.

The report said the bus was mostly loaded with school children.

Now you can hop the Pacific with BOAC

Starting April 1, BOAC has a brand new hop . . . we can fly you right across the Pacific, all the way to Australia. At the same time we're introducing new low fares—from only $817* return. That's $274* less than the current lowest South Pacific fare.

FORMATION FOXTROT was one of manoeuvres executed by seven Pacific Command destroyer-escorts off Victoria shoreline shortly after 10:30 this morning. Dallas Road parking areas were packed tight as baseball park bleachers for sail-past. "Foxtrot", most spectacular of several marine choreographic exercises, is replacement of ships at head of line by ships at rear. After ships put on their show, they headed into Esquimalt Harbor to be greeted warmly by families of crew members. (Times photo by Bill Halkett.)

Earth's restless oceans never hold a point of balance for long. There is the ebb, which yesterday at St. Malo bared more of the Channel floor than French or English eyes have gazed on since the time of the first Napoleon. Next comes slack water, an uneasy truce that serves only to tantalize archaeologist, booty-hunter and casual viewer. Then the turn of the tide and the mounting flood, to send all scampering.

We can only hope the more interesting finds were buoyed for future underwater investigation, and wonder what such a mighty withdrawing of the waters would reveal on our own sea-floors. It's possible that we might receive some intriguing surprises.

While there's no record of early crossings by water from Asia, these shores may well have been visited. The Chinese had, and for that matter still have, sea-going junks capable of such a voyage.

Several of those ageless vessels have crossed the Pacific in recent years. Magnify the perfect little Maritime Museum model—apply a breath of imagination—and it's easy enough to visualize a junk of an earlier day staggering in to lay her bones on our watery doorstep.

For the rest, and not to speculate, there would be towboats and fishboats overwhelmed in half-forgotten gales, and up Salt Spring way, the torn iron of the barque, 'Panther.'

Over toward the American Islands, among the weedy rocks and sea-pools with their surprised fish, the searcher might even find our nearest approach to the wine-filled amphorae of ancient Mediterranean wrecks. During Prohibition years, many a hard-pressed rum-runner hove many a sack of good Canadian liquor overside to become a trove of doubtful virtue for the finder.

★

It is as well that we are dealing with improbables, since the sun-moon pendulum of the tide swings inward as well as outward, and we like to keep our basements dry.

Anyway, our West Coast tides can be spectacular enough, especially where their passage is blocked and confined.

Witness Seymour Narrows, a shipway that demands canny navigating even though its once-notorious Ripple Rock is no longer a menace. This is but one of many treacherous passes through which our North Pacific tides crowd their way.

Slingsby Channel, north up the coast, is a funnel mouth for one of the worst of these tidal rapids. It is called the Nakwakta, and many a tall tale centers upon it. The rock that rears from its mad flow is reputed to shake when the current is in full race. Its slack water period lasts only for about six minutes. Then the current, reversed, begins to gather its headlong strength again.

★

For my own purposes, I prefer gentler tides, the sort that go out and come in at a saunter rather than a gallop. We have bays in plenty where extensive flats are bared by such easy tides as these, and where anyone willing to tramp out from the foreshore can gather the makings of a seafood dinner.

On rare occasions, when the ebb is extremely low, a goey-duck bar may be revealed.

The goey-duck is no tall tale, but a prehistoric-seeming clam of massive proportions. It has a neck like a section of garden hose, and its digging powers must be tested to be believed.

Give it a fair start—or even an unfair one—and the goey duck turns itself into a hydraulic dredge. It can delve so fast that the weak or languid spader has no chance to catch it, and it is as often lost as fetched from its watery shaft.

But the smaller, easier come by clams of the long grey flats suit my taste better. The tide has no tastier gift than these.

You dig or you gather until a lip of foam at the sea's edge gives warning. The tide has turned, and it's time to get out of there.

Home Is Where The Sailor Is After War Games

By TED GASKELL

"All hands to stations for entering harbor."

A cheer from the men answered the message which came over the HMCS Saskatchewan's intercom at 10.40 a.m. today as the ship pointed her sleek bow to the dock at Esquimalt. Hundreds of wives children and sweethearts awaited the return of their menfolk after three months of war games.

LINE OF SEVEN

The ship led a line of seven into Esquimalt Harbor.

The Saskatchewan and Mackenzie were returning from nearly two months of exercises with ships, subs and planes of the Canadian and U.S. navies in the Carribean.

HMC ships Algonquin, Crescent and Columbia have been transferred from Halifax to the West Coast, and the Yukon and St. Croix steamed out of Esquimalt earlier this morning to meet the quintet and join them in taking the salute from Rear Admiral J. A. Charles, Maritime Commander (Pacific).

But the officials standing on the saluting base were far from uppermost in the minds of the men. They finally stopped their below-decks pacing and coffee drinking and went up on deck to pick out their own particular greeters among the hundreds who lined the jetty as the ship tied up shortly after 11 a.m.

Tiny tots, some of whom were really too young to know why they had been bundled up in their winter clothes and taken out of their cosy playpens clung to mothers and wondered what all the fuss was about.

And they obviously weren't much clearer when the gangplanks were finally lowered and they were taken aboard and grabbed by some man in blue who looked rather familiar. But it was cosy, being hugged and mummy seemed pleased so it must be all right and there was no need to cry.

For the older children it was different. Dad was back. Maybe, they thought after the initial greeting, that he'll have lots of interesting stories to tell, pictures to show and maybe even a huge straw sombrero or serape.

A lot would have been right.

Below decks all kinds o souvenirs were ready to be taken ashore. There were lots of hats at least two feet high and a bit wider bought for $1.50 Canadian—"probably about 40 cents before we arrived," said one sailor wise to the ways of the Latin American tourist trade."

There were statues of bulls, big and little, stuffed alligators and trinkets of all kinds, even machettes, a popular item for sailor's rumpus rooms.

There seemed to be no last minute packing. Everyone's gear was stowed and ready to go.

The younger men were more eager to get home. Some paced impatiently; others sat and discussed plans for leave over coffee cups.

FISHING TRIP

One young lad shuffled a deck of cards and thought about a fishing trip he planned. Another was carefully checking the classified ads in the papers that had come aboard that morning with the mail. He was apartment-hunting.

Two stewards talked in the galleys. No leave for them, they were on call by the captain and commander.

Others stood in the darkened ops room below the bridge and bent over instruments, getting whatever homecoming excitement they could from seeing the B.C. Coast as a line on a radar screen.

Soon they would be on deck and actually see the Sooke Hills, the Victoria skyline and the familiar Dockyard with ships of all sizes.

They would be home.

New Empress Cafe Opens Wednesday

The first major stage of the renovation of the Empress Hotel has been completed and will be on public view Wednesday.

Manager Les Parkinson said today the Garden Cafe, a new dining area taking the place of the hotel's coffee shop, will be open for business Wednesday.

OVER BUDGET

Mr. Parkinson said the project had gone over its original $100,000 budget but declined to say by how much.

Another major job, the replacement of old DC current wiring, is almost completed. Mr. Parkinson said that AC wiring and TV cable is now 95 per cent installed and it shouldn't be too long before that phase of the renovation is finished.

Most of the work to date has been out of sight of the public as will the next stages of the $4 million face-lifting job.

"We shall be well into next year before you see any changes in the main lobby or the downstairs lobby," Mr. Parkinson said. "We are concentrating on the functional area of the hotel first and endeavoring to keep the hotel functioning smoothly while these major changes take place."

A meeting was held this morning to discuss the design and layout of the new Royal Suite.

Mr. Parkinson said the suite would have six rooms including a dining room, master bedrooms and a reception area plus various kitchen and pantry areas.

WOMEN GET ACTION ON PROTEST

Cannon Kick Sparks Second Look

Esquimalt council will take a second look at a proposal to place a First World War cannon in Memorial Park.

Reeve Ray Bryant said a letter has been received from the Victoria Voice of Women protesting the installation of the cannon as playthings for children.

Reeve Bryant said the letter was received too late to include in the agenda for tonight's council meeting.

"What we do in these cases is refer the letter to the council committee involved in the original decision," he said. "The objections will be studied and the committee will bring in a further recommendation."

It is intended to install the cannon in Memorial Park.

The council committee involved is the parks committee, chaired by Coun. Arthur Mebs.

NO MALICE, 31 TELL UVIC HEAD

An open letter signed by 31 of the 300 faculty members at the University of Victoria today said that a recent statement by president Malcolm Taylor "is not an adequate response" to recent criticism.

Copies of the open letter to Dr. Taylor were being circulated this morning on campus to all faculty.

The signatories said they deeply regretted Dr. Taylor's statement that recent criticism is apparently the result of "a concerted attack" by a "certain element" that is trying to undermine the university.

●

The criticism has boiled up over the failure of the university to renew the contracts of three outspoken faculty members, Dr. Charles Tarlton, political science department, and J. S. (Jerry) Schwartz and Alan Mackenzie, both of the English department.

Three other faculty members resigned in protest and two of them circulated open letters criticizing the action and attitudes of the administration.

It was their criticism that provoked Dr. Taylor to make a statement last week.

●

The open letter of the 31 said Dr. Taylor's statement implied "a malicious intent which we do not believe exists" among the critics.

It said "the current dismissals and the related issue of academic freedom" concerns all faculty and is important for the future of the university.

It said Dr. Taylor implied that all critics of the university do not have its best interests at heart.

On the contrary, argues the letter, effective criticism is necessary in the university and it is wrong to attach "the stigma of disloyalty" to those who question administrative procedures.

●

The letter asks Dr. Taylor to give more information on the reasons why the three faculty members were let go and says he is now free to do this since their appeals have either been decided or dropped.

It also asked him to reconsider his "assessment of the present situation" so that healthy criticism will not carry "a moral stigma at this university."

The 31 who signed the letter do not include either the three who were dismissed or the three who have resigned in protest.

Police Uncover Cache Of Forgery Gear

Man Pleads Guilty, Held for Sentence

By DON VIPOND

A city detective testified today he spotted a cheque-writing machine in the kitchen cupboard when he visited the home of a man charged with shop-lifting last week.

Detective Tom Smith said he returned to the home of Robert Bowen, at 512 Constance, armed with a search warrant the next day and found:

- Four unemployment insurance books in a china cabinet.
- Two social insurance cards and more insurance papers in a canister on top of a cupboard.
- More social insurance cards in a woman's handbag under a mattress.

Bowen pleaded guilty to possession of instruments to commit forgery when he appeared in central court this morning. He will be held in jail until he is sentenced April 7.

The 22-year-old told investigators after he was arrested Friday that he intended using the $50 cheque-stamping machine he bought and the variety of identification cards Ottawa sent him to commit forgery.

Bowen, who also uses the name Karry, admitted he had sent application forms off to Ottawa two at a time for the unemployment insurance books and papers he intended using for phoney identification. He had them returned to him addressed to general delivery in Victoria.

SHOPLIFTING

Police got on his trail Thursday after he tried shoplifting four records from Kelly's on Yates Ltd., 648 Yates. He was caught by an employee and turned over to police.

The accused told police he wanted any charges from other points in the country waived to the local court, said Detective Smith.

Among other things, he told detectives he still had a TV set he had rented in Edmonton.

MRS. BOBBIE ALLISON
. . . died in Ontario

Funeral Rites Held For Former Musician

Funeral services were held here this afternoon for a former Victorian, Mrs. Margaret (Bobbie) Macquelin Allison, who died Friday in Willowdale, Ont.

Born and raised in the city, Mrs. Allison, 33, was the daughter of well-known Victorians Mr. and Mrs. W. W. McGill, 3441 Mayfair Drive.

Besides her parents, she leaves her husband Robert and seven-year-old daughter Lynn, both of Willowdale, and two sisters, Mrs. Roger (Edith) Galloway of Oakland, Calif., and Mrs. James (Trudie) Duxbury of 3270 Woodburn, Victoria.

MUSIC, FLOWERS

Her two loves in her Victoria years were music and flowers, and she is well remembered for her part in Victoria musical activities.

Mrs. Allison began her music study at the age of nine, under local cellist Percy Humphrey, and played in a trio with her two older sisters. She was among the first members of the Victoria Junior Symphony Orchestra now disbanded which operated during the 1940s.

She also helped with musical arrangements and other work at the Children's Garden Library on Tattersall Drive, operated by her mother Mrs. Gertrude McGill.

WITH GISH

With her sisters, Mrs. Allison once appeared with actress Lillian Gish in the movie The Commandos Strike at Dawn, which was filmed here.

Mrs. Allison attended Cloverdale and Mount View High schools. After graduating, she took a business course in Victoria before going to Vancouver to work for Canadian Pacific Airlines.

Her husband, now a Toronto insurance executive, was at that time a CPA pilot.

Mrs. Allison also leaves six nieces and nephews, here and in California, and relatives in West Vancouver, Summerland, Seattle and Winnipeg, Man.

Services at McCall's floral chapel this afternoon were held with Rev. Norman Archer officiating, and were followed by interment at Royal Oak Burial Park.

CALLERS WELCOME

Boys Clubs Celebrate Their Week

Rounding the corner of their 60th year the Boys's Clubs of Canada are as youthful as ever.

The Boys' Club of Victoria is celebrating Boys' Club Week with a rock and roll dance, hobby show, father and son night, sports and a carnival.

The old firehall at 1240 Yates will swing with today's music Wednesday at 8 p.m.

Club members and other interested boys and girls will be welcome.

SPORTS, FILMS

Tonight is sports and film night, Thursday a hobby show and father and son night are arranged, Friday and Saturday are carnival nights.

Executive director of the local club Ron Havard said the club's purpose is not only to keep boys "off the streets" but to receive guidance in a wide variety of activity.

"Boys turn to delinquency and join gangs only as a last resort," he said.

The club here will be open to the public daily from 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. and 6:30 p.m. to 9 p.m.

$500,000 Shop Centre For Gold River

A $500,000 shopping centre for Gold River, one of Vancouver Island's "instant" towns, will be built by the end of the summer.

Contract for the construction has been let to A and B Construction of Nanaimo.

Completion of the centre, which will be located in the heart of the town, will include merchants, a bank and credit union, medical offices, beautician and real estate offices.

Gold River townsite was built to provide housing for employees in the $60 million pulp mill being built by the Tahsis Co. Ltd.

The mill is scheduled to go into production in July.

Shelbourne Plan Goes Before Planners Tonight

A $2.5 million development proposal for the North Shelbourne area of Saanich will come before a municipal lands and planning committee meeting tonight.

The plan envisages a shopping centre covering just over six acres between Cedar Hill Road and Shelbourne, just north of Ruby, plus garden apartments limited to three storeys on five acres to the immediate north.

The shopping centre would include a Safeway store. The apartments would comprise 93 two-bedroom suites and 36 one-bedroom suites.

The twin proposals ran into stiff opposition at a public hearing when council voted to table the apartment plan and favored by a 5-to-3 vote the shopping centre.

Job Insurance Soon Extended To Farm Workers

Compulsory unemployment insurance is being extended to agriculture and horticulture this weekend.

These two occupations have operated outside unemployment insurance, but a federal cabinet order last fall brought them into the scheme effective April 1.

The change affects employers and employees on farms, ranches, nurseries, greenhouses and fruit, vegetable and flower growers.

Local farm groups have been contacted by the Unemployment Insurance Commission which is in the process of registering employers.

Mrs. Butt studied parliamentary procedure for four years, is now qualified as consultant for conventions, other large groups. She is former president of the Victoria Parliamentary Unit and Arbutus Toastmistress Club. Another accredited certified parliamentarian is Sandy Robertson, 3161 Service St.

Uvic Library Gets $5,000

The Canada Council has given a $5,000 grant to the University of Victoria library to help build up a research collection.

In making the award, one of 27 which totalled $500,000, the Council announced that its assistance to all universities is less than one-quarter what they requested.

Uvic's library has been building up its collection particularly with a view to creating a research section for the use of students in the recently formed School of Graduate Studies.

Ask The Times

Q. Can you tell me something about Venus. How warm is it there? Has its surface been seen by astronomers? I.H.U.

A. The surface of Venus is thickly veiled in dense clouds. It has never been seen by telescope or the naked eye. Information gathered by Mariner II in 1962 led scientists to believe its surface temperature is about 800 degrees, probably because of the insulating blanket of cloud.

Q. Can you tell me who wrote the song:

Where e'er you walk
Cool breeze shall fan the glade
Trees where you sit
Shall crowd into a shade.

A. Music by Handel (1685-1759). Words by Congreve (1707).

SHOPPING GUIDE

'Magic' Glue Perfect For Mending Ceramics

By Penny Saver

There's one ashtray in our house that must be jinxed. Either that or one "butter fingers" in our household is under an evil spell when she's anywhere near the china piece. I can't tell you how many times that ashtray has been mended in the past three months — nobody can really answer that except the culprit herself. I know it has been broken more than once because she told me about a remarkable glue that she found. You can't even see where the piece was mended. That fact alone makes this one member of our household very happy.

The adhesive was designed by a company that makes baking dishes that withstand extreme hot and cold temperatures. The glue itself can stand heat up to 500 Fahrenheit degrees. When you apply this glue, it won't run. The tight-fitting repair jobs last and last. Repair glass, china and ceramics with this glue which sells for $1.49 the tube. I have a feeling that our "omen" of an ashtray will receive several more repairs with this glue. Pick up a tube for your mending jobs.

Thinking of adhesives, at times I've wished that there was an edible glue on the market, made for bonding certain foods that are supposed to look attractive back together. I'm thinking particularly of egg wedges that, when cut properly, are ideal garnishes for salads, cold plates or hors d'oeuvres. I must be jinxed when it comes to that art as my wedges are always crumbly and they're never anywhere near the same size. In one shop, I found a way to end that problem. There's an egg wedger that slices an egg into eight uniform pieces. Place the egg into the little cup and press down on the plunger. This party-preparation takes only a few minutes — the only thing that takes any time at all is shelling the egg. Price of this wedger is $1.55

Another gadget for the kitchen in this shop is a hamburger press. This is a plunger device as well. You fill the cavity with your favorite patty preparation and press down on the handle. The patty is a perfect circle. You can make extra thick or average size patties with this adjustable press. These kitchen wonders are priced at $1.59.

Remember my number is 382-3131. Give me a call if you want to shop for these items.

The home of Mrs. William Burton (extreme left), at 812 Transit Road, will be the setting on Saturday, from 2:30 to 4:30 p.m., when the King's Daughters and Sons hold their annual daffodil tea. Seen with Mrs. Burton are Miss Katherine Lawrence (centre) and Mrs. Clifford Wilkins. There will also be a home baking sale and lavender sachets made by the junior members of the district will be on display. Tea proceeds will be used for the group's charities. Presiding at the head table will be Alderman Lily Wilson, Mrs. T. A. Brown, Mrs. A. E. Walters, Mrs. J. L. W. McLean, Mrs. H. H. Youson, Mrs. W. Clark, Miss Jessie Gordon and Miss J. Roberts.

DEAR ABBY . . .

Young Man Won't 'Communicate'

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I just LOVE to write letters to fellows. I don't care if I know them or not, as long as they are a friend of mine.

My problem is, I have lived around the corner from this boy all my life. I am 23 and so is he. We never played together as children because we went to different schools. Sure, we'd see each other, but never a word was spoken.

Two summers ago, I said to myself, "This is silly!" So when I saw him, I said, "Hi, Tony, where are you going?"

He didn't answer me. He just smiled and kept going.

The next time I saw him, about a year later, I said, "Hi, Tony, where are you going NOW?" He didn't answer me, but smiled and went on. He is now in the service. Should I ask his mother for his address and write to him?

LOVES TO WRITE

DEAR LOVES: If you LOVE to write letters — go ahead and write. He might communicate better by mail. But don't be surprised if he doesn't. A young man who won't talk, probably won't write either.

DEAR ABBY: If I don't get this off my chest I'll burst. I have two sons. There are none better. They are both married and have lovely families.

It hurts me to go into their homes and not see even one photograph of Dad and me in sight.

We have gone to the trouble and expense of taking pictures, having them enlarged and framed, but they must be stored away in a closet somewhere.

We have our home full of pictures of our sons, their wives, and children. Am I wrong to feel hurt? Set me straight.

HURT

DEAR HURT: No. Apparently your sons and their wives are not aware of your feelings.

DEAR ABBY: I load and unload freight and baggage for a major air line. We handle dogs and cats that are "kenneled" for transportation.

Most of these animals have never experienced anything like this before, and they are petrified from the noise of the screaming jets, and from so much jostling around. Some animals try to chew through the kennels, and they end up with broken teeth and bleeding mouths. Some even get loose.

A veterinarian has informed me that tranquilizer pills are available through any vet which, if given to the animal before the trip, will keep him calm and comfortable. I have seen so many frightened and hysterical animals in my work, it breaks my heart. If you love animals as I do, you'll print this.

Dairy foods go with good living

Yes, dairy foods go with good living and the good fun of springtime capers. Colour predominates this season, especially on the party table and quick to mix, gay milk drinks will delight your teens.

For a zippy "Orange Flip" start with a quart of milk. Add 2 pints of orange sherbet and a chilled 30-ounce bottle lime-grapefruit carbonated beverage. Stir with a lighthearted touch, just until blended and serve while still fizzy. (Makes 14 servings)

As a go-along for milk drinks, plain or fancy, serve these hot buttered biscuits warm from the oven.

~~HOT~~ TOP DOGS

2 cups packaged biscuit mix
¼ teaspoon dry mustard
1 cup shredded cheddar cheese
⅔ cup milk
6 wieners

Preheat oven to 425°F. Combine biscuit mix, mustard and ¾ cup of cheese. Add the milk and mix lightly until just combined. Spread batter evenly in buttered 8" x 8" pan. Quarter wieners, cutting lengthwise and crosswise. Arrange in three rows on batter. Sprinkle with remaining cheese. Bake 25 to 30 minutes. Cut into squares.

Ever tried combining chocolate and lemon? For a pick-me-up or party special add lemon sherbet to chocolate milk and shake well. It's frosty and so satisfying!

Many Showers Preceded Pollard-Gale Vows Last Saturday

GAY PARTY WHIRL HELD FOR NEW BRIDE

A round of parties heralded the wedding of Miss Phyllis Gale and Mr. William Pollard, which took place in Garden City United Church last Saturday.

Mrs. W. J. Cozens had Mrs. E. W. Cozens as co-hostess when she gave a shower in her Baxter Street home. A decorated shower cake centred the refreshment table. Special guests were the bride's grandmother, Mrs. G. Turner; her aunt, Mrs. J. Gale and her sister, Miss Virginia Gale. Sending gifts but unable to attend were Mrs. L. Fieldhouse, Mrs. H. Larson, Mrs. G. Prat and Mrs. F. Gale Sr.

Ribbon corsages in pink and white were presented to the bride, her mother, Mrs. F. Gale and the groom-elect's mother, Mrs. William Pollard. Other guests were Mrs. M. Proctor, Mrs. W. Baxter, Mrs. C. Power and Mrs. D. Smith.

Miss Pat Barker gave a surprise shower in the Layritz Avenue home of her mother, Mrs. G. A. Barker. Carnation corsages in shades of pink, white and deep pink respectively were presented to the honor guest, her mother and the groom's mother. A pink and white decor was used and gifts were presented in a wicker clothes hamper. Games were played.

Invited guests included Mrs. D. Smith, Mrs. V. Prat, Mrs. D. White, Mrs. H. Carlow, Mrs. G. Turner, Mrs. F. Gale Sr., Mrs. J. Gale, Mrs. W. Cozens, Mrs. D. Rand, Miss Lona Donaldson and Miss Virginia Gale.

Gifts for the pantry and pink roses en corsage were received by the bride when a family party was held in the Sparton Road home of Mrs. David Wootten. White carnations were presented to the bride's mother. Gifts were in a decorated box. The hostess' mother, Mrs. H. Smith, assisted with the arrangements.

AUNTS ATTEND

Others invited were the bride's aunts, Mrs. J. Gale and Mrs. E. Ferguson; Mrs. A. J. Hawthorne, Mrs. Bert Garnot, Mrs. D. Proudlove, Mrs. G. Morgan, Mrs. W. Pollard, Mrs. F. Gale Sr., Mrs. G. Turner, Mrs. D. Smith, the Misses Patricia and Betty-Lou Pollard, Virginia Gale, Kathy and Karen Morgan.

Mrs. V. Prat was co-hostess when Mrs. D. Rand entertained at a shower in her Tulip Avenue home. A decorated well held the gifts, the honor guest was seated in a decorated chair and pink and white carnation corsages were presented to the special guests.

Those invited included Mrs. Bill Boden, Mrs. Doug Baxter, Mrs. Bill Duckworth, Mrs. S. Surgenor, Mrs. D. Smith, Mrs. F. Gale, Mrs. W. Pollard, Mrs. Bill Cozens, the Misses Sharon Smith, Lee Magg, Pat Barker, Virginia Gale, Betty-Lou and Pat Pollard.

Members of a playground group of which the bride is a former member surprised her with a shower in the Lavender Avenue home of Mrs. B. A. Grainger. The hostess was assisted by Mrs. B. Jackson. Gifts were in a decorated laundry basket. Blue iris en corsage were received by the honor guest and her mother was presented with white carnations.

Invited guests included Mrs. B. Bayton, Mrs. E. Coldwell, Mrs. M. Halowski, Mrs. L. Duncan, Mrs. R. Mannix, Mrs. V. Hitching, Mrs. C. Pring, Mrs. B. Hilborne, Mrs. H. Gale, Mrs. E. Carter, Mrs. M. Bramley, Mrs. F. Greig, the Misses Virginia Gale and Ann Jackson.

WHY GROW OLD?

By JOSEPHINE LOWMAN

Keeping House in Perfect Order Is Full Time Job

How perfect a housekeeper should a woman try to be? It is difficult to know where to draw the line although that was never one of my problems.

Certainly creating a charming, restful, lovely, physical atmosphere in the home is rewarding to the woman and her family. This is important and gives a lift to the spirit.

Lowman

However keeping a house in perfect order is a full time job, even with help, and few women have any today. If there are children, it is impossible unless one imposes damaging restrictions on them.

I myself respond enthusiastically to a beautifully decorated home, with everything just as it should be and have at times even felt a little envious. Then I think, 'Where are the magazines, the books left open where the reader stopped reading? Where is the chess board, the pipe on the table, the natural clutter which is bound to occur when a house is lived in vibrantly?" This is very different from the clutter of neglect and not caring enough to take the trouble.

I am thinking today of thousands of my readers who have young families, who do all the work themselves, who enter into all sorts of civics and philanthropic work, and still try to be perfect housekeepers.

I feel sure that many husbands and children would prefer a wife and mother who is gay and rested rather than one who is exhausted from trying to be a perfect housekeeper. Doctors' offices are filled with would-be perfectionists of all sorts.

It seems to me that far too many women make entertaining a chore rather than a pleasure because they are perfectionists. Unless everything is perfect, they do not have friends in as often as they would like. When they do have them in, the hostess is tense and nobody has much fun. I am convinced that unless the hostess has fun, no one else does.

Anyway, this is just a suggestion to the mothers of a lovely hectic young family. Enjoy your children but enjoy your friends, too. If your main ambition in life is to be a perfect housekeeper, why not wait until the children leave home?

Even then you might want to do something more interesting, but I am no authority because I never could have been a perfect housekeeper. If I had waited for perfection to put the latchstring out for friends, I would never have put it out. However, it has been out there waving in the wind of welcome for many years, and nobody has seemed to mind what they found on the inside.

If you want to know how to gain friends and be popular, send for my free leaflet "Eight Weeks to Popularity." To obtain your leaflet, send a stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request for it to Josephine Lowman in care of this newspaper.

A wedding of interest both here and on the Mainland will take place in Vancouver on April 8 when Margaret Elaine Wilson becomes the bride of Mr. Glen William Walker, Vancouver. The bride-elect is the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Francis J. Wilson, of Vancouver, and her fiance's parents are Mr. and Mrs. William H. Walker, of North Surrey, formerly of Victoria. Rev. Northcote Burke will conduct the ceremony at 11 a.m. in Christ Church Cathedral, Vancouver, and Rev. Boyd Dowden will celebrate communion. The service will be sung by the cathedral boys' and men's choir, directed by Mr. Beal Thomas. The groom-elect is a 1966 graduate in education from the University of British Columbia and is presently on the staff of Windermere Secondary School in Vancouver.

CLUBWOMEN'S NEWS

Fashion Show — Plans were discussed for a fashion show to be given by the Oak Bay Business and Professional Women's Club at the recent meeting in the Oak Bay Beach Hotel. The event will be held on Friday, at 8 p.m. in the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria. Fashions will be by Toojays and Piccadilly Shoppe. Proceeds from the event are earmarked for the annual bursary given to a woman student at the University of Victoria who has attained the highest marks in western Canadian history. Guest speaker at the meeting, Mrs. Shusan Egoiain spoke on "Composition for Decorating."

Initiated — Mrs. K. Johnson was initiated as a new member when the Ladies' Auxiliary to Britannia Branch No. 7, Royal Canadian Legion, met recently with Mrs. D. Smith presiding. It was reported that a mock auction had realized $36.75 and that a sewing meeting would be held on Wednesday, April 5, at 2 p.m. in the home of Mrs. E. O. Teal, Suite 10, 1013 Vancouver Street. Plans were made for a dance and it was announced that donations for "Project 67" would be accepted until June. Reports showed 30 patients visited in the Veterans' Hospital, four in the Royal Jubilee and two in St. Joseph's Hospital. Eleven auxiliary members were visited at home or in hospital, four funerals were attended and five applications for membership received.

Buy Bassinets — Proceeds realized from the coming bridge-luncheon of St. Joseph's Hospital Women's Auxiliary will be used to buy six bassinets for the maternity ward. This was announced by president Mrs. W. Rogers at the auxiliary meeting in the hospital. Guest speaker was Dr. F. G. Stuart, chief of the radiology department, who explained how his department worked, and showed X-ray pictures. He mentioned that 12 years ago, the department diagnosed 12,000 patients annually. Now they do 25,000, he said, emphasizing the need for expansion.

Reports Given—When members of the Dogwood Social Credit Women's Auxiliary recently met in the Beach Drive home of Mrs. W. N. Chant, reports were read by secretary Mrs. M. Sater and treasurer, Mrs. W. Collis. Mrs. C. M. Walkemeyer presided over the meeting, assisted by Mrs. C. Rushton. Following the business discussions, refreshments were served.

A WOMAN'S VIEWPOINT

By Pat Dufour

The dying days of March are hard on a sun-lover like me. Looking out of the office window, the branches of a chestnut tree seem reluctant to break into foliage.

The sticky buds show just enough promise to make me long for the chance to sit at one of the garden cafes I knew in Europe or the West Indies, acquiring freckles with the zeal of a fanatic.

The elusive sun is a problem I can't solve but I can indulge in a garden cafe . . . as of Wednesday afternoon, courtesy of the Empress Hotel.

I know what you're thinking. The winds that whip along the Causeway on occasion seem conducive only to chilblains and chattering teeth if you're crazy enough to sip your tea with alternate gulps of fresh air.

Hotel manager Les Parkinson is aware of this so he's come up with a new type of "garden" . . . one that brings the outdoors within reach of heat registers and other amenities.

It's located where the old coffee shop used to be but any similarity to the original eating place has been completely . . . and artistically . . . eradicated.

Graceful "garden gates" of wrought iron separate the new creation from the rest of the hotel, blending with the Italian-inspired columns that add the feel of a well-loved formal garden.

The "lawns" are green carpet and the "walks" have to be examined at ant's height to give up their secret. Actually made of vinyl, they look so much like brick paths you almost feel tempted to peer down to see if there are any upstart blades of grass breaking through!

Naturally, nothing but garden furniture would do in such a setting and this is delightfully represented in the black wrought iron chairs that offer luxury with their green upholstered seats. These were designed by Rudy Kovach of Vancouver and made in Los Angeles. The garden is the dream child of Rudy and created by Marwell Construction Ltd. of Vancouver.

Garden Blooms All Year 'Round

Planters, filled with blooms from the hotel's greenhouses, will make this one garden that will never be defeated by an off season.

Just in case you're wondering if the trappings may outshine the culinary fruits of this weedless garden, one look at the elaborate menu is enough to ensure that more than your aesthetic senses will be well satisfied.

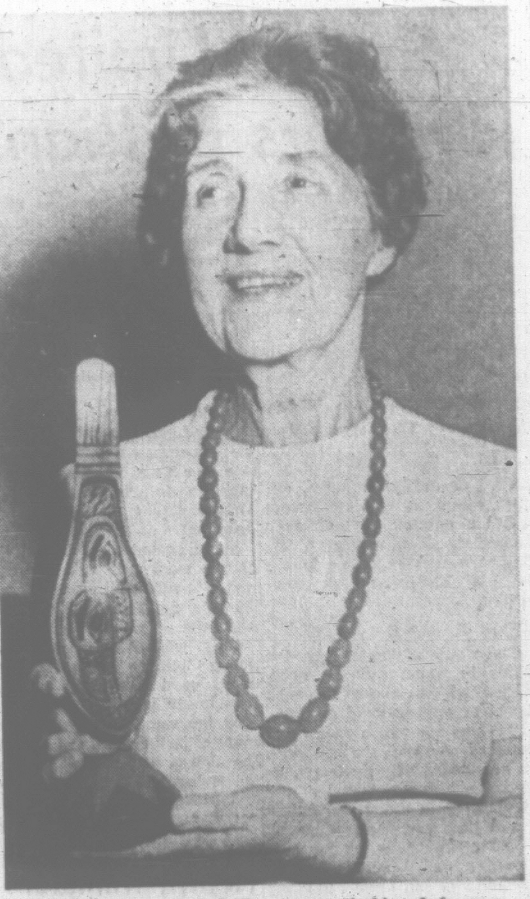
There are dishes for every taste, whether it's a knickerbocker glory at the milk bar, a hearty breakfast, luncheon or dinner or a quick snack between shopping sorties.

I could feel my digestive juices gurgitating in anticipation as I tried to decide what I'd have at my first indoor-outdoor feast.

At this moment I'm gravitating between a crackleburger (love that name!), a hamburger with a 'topper' of egg on its round steak base, salmon, shrimp or crab.

Traditionalist that I am most of the time, I'll probably end up having some of the pork sausages that the hotel staff makes in its own kitchens or a sandwich made of the corned beef that usually woos me away from more frivolous concoctions.

Whatever it is, I'm sure the garden atmosphere will add zest and enjoyment to the eating. What's more, my goose pimples will be grateful for the rest period!



This uniquely carved Indian spoon, fashioned from a single piece of wood and stained with special Indian dyes, is one of several pieces Miss Violet Hendry brought with her from Bella Bella. This one was carved by Johnny Humchitt, "an excellent carver and dancer in the village". She'd also brought a small unfinished totem pole, made by Johnny's grandson, Robert. Miss Hendry was in Victoria to speak to the Indian Arts and Welfare Council.

First 'Community Centre' in Indian Village

LIBRARY IS A DREAM COME TRUE

By DINA SUDLOW

For the last six months, Violet Hendry has been watching a dream unfold and take form before her eyes. She has been watching a village and its people take their first steps toward a community life by its own efforts.

It was last September when Miss Hendry arrived in Bella Bella, a small village on the coast of mainland British Columbia, armed with 19 cartons of books and a dream. The books came from the Vancouver Public Library, Crofton House School in Vancouver where she had been a librarian, and her church, St. John's United, Vancouver. They provided moral support for the dream of establishing a community library in an Indian village.

Bella Bella had been recommended to her mainly because of the great interest and enthusiasm which the school principal Rev. John A. MacLeod had for such a project.

COMPLETE CO-OPERATION

"He arranged for me to take over the school library," recalls Miss Hendry. "From there I worked with the children and, through them, reached the parents. Throughout the project I've had the complete co-operation of the school staff.

"Now I'm watching the library grow from a reading centre to the beginning of a community centre. Progress is slow and gradual, but it is coming."

The first off-shoot from the reading centre was the organization of a square-dance club, which is now being managed by Mrs. MacLeod, wife of the school principal. "It meets every two weeks and is making healthy progress," reports Miss Hendry with obvious pride.

One thing led to another. A senior citizen group was formed with several of the elderly village women as the nucleus. "They meet the same night as the square-dancers and enjoy a social evening as they watch the dancers."

At this time, too, teacher Mrs. Edith Spencer began the Grade 7 girls' hobby club. The youngsters learn to sew, knit, crochet — even hook rugs.

"They are even planning a bazaar for early April," says Miss Hendry.

BOYS' CLUB

When the boys heard about the girls' club, they wanted to start their own. "Now every week they all gather in the school basement to watch Johnny Humchitt carve and learn the craft themselves."

Miss Hendry tells with delight of some events coming up on the village agenda. "They are planning to have a centennial pageant in the near future illustrating the history of Bella Bella from 100 years ago to today.

"Also, the youngsters have a project all their own. They are preparing a children's centennial book, which will be inscribed with all their names and which will contain stories of the people themselves.

"Right now, all the children are busily interviewing the older people in the village to get all the old stories!"

She speaks with pride about the village's main centennial project — restoring "Old Town," the original site of the village and a former Hudson's Bay Company fort, as an historic park with camping and picnic grounds.

She remembers with a laugh the "unofficial" opening of the park, when she and several teachers and a large number of children "opened the project with a wiener roast!"

SELF-HELP PROJECT

All the work of clearing, building roads and setting up campsites is being done by the people themselves.

The library at Bella Bella is now run on the same rules as any other public library and Miss Hendry has found that the people are becoming increasingly interested in books as time goes on. "Many of the men pick up books on home building and repair and are using the knowledge they've read."

Miss Hendry is delighted with the co-operation and help given her by the village people, particularly a leading woman in the community, Mrs. Margaret Reid, who heads a committee to assist with the library.

"It's not only the women who are pitching in," says Miss Hendry. "Several men have volunteered, too, and one is starting repair work on the books."

Miss Hendry has an interesting and rather strange story to tell about the people of Bella Bella, whose population mainly relies on fishing. "When Namu the killer whale was captured, the people said again and again that it should never have happened, and predicted disaster. Oddly enough, the next season was extremely bad for fishing."

Miss Hendry is going back to Bella Bella with another hope — not only that the people will manage their own library, but will build their own community centre, with facilities for meetings, dances and all phases of community life.

Make New Home in Chilliwack Following Vows in View Royal

Mr. and Mrs. Philip Arthur Cornforth, whose recent marriage took place in All Saint's Church, will make their new home in Chilliwack.

Rev. J. Vickers officiated at the evening service which saw Valerie Joyce Butler, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. V. E. Butler, 302 Bessborough Road, become the bride of the son of Mr. and Mrs. A. Bernard, 2951 Craigowan Road. Baskets of spring flowers were at the chancel steps.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore an empire-line gown of peau de soie that was topped with a lace jacket with belled sleeves and enhanced with a lace train cascading from the shoulders. Her veil was in chapel length. She carried a cascade bouquet of red American Beauty roses and carnations and wore a single strand of pearls and matching earrings, gift of the groom.

"I'll Walk with God" was sung by soloist N. Sandford.

Maid of honor Miss Lynda Keys chose a floor-length empire-line gown of pink brocade and flowered headpiece to match. Similar gowns and headdresses in blue brocade were worn by bridesmaids, the Misses Sherill Brown, Stella Cornforth, sister of the groom; Luara Butler, the bride's sister, and flower girl Bonnie Browett, niece of the bride. All carried toning colonial bouquets.

Jim Forde was best man and ushering guests were K. Widdifield and J. Blogg.

Harry Downard proposed the toast to the bride's happiness at the reception which followed at the Royal Colwood Golf and Country Club. The head table was centred with a three-tier wedding cake.

As her going-away outfit, the bride chose a deep coral-toned suit, teamed with beige hat and accessories.

Baby-Sitters Take Course

Sixty girls will gather at St. Aidan's United Church next Tuesday for the first lecture in baby-sitting of a four-week course, organized by the Victoria Jaycee-Ettes. The students are all members of the church's Canadian Girls In Training group which is headed by Mrs. E. D. Horne. Three more lectures will be given on the next three Tuesday evenings.

Lecturers for the new course are volunteers from the Naval Fire Service, FO1 Doug Smith and Fire Fighter Bob Noble. They will teach first aid and fire safety in the home, instruct on how to react in emergencies, give baby care and demonstrate procedures to be taken in situations involving prowlers and peeping Toms.

The enthusiastic response to the new course, says a Jaycee-Ette official, will probably result in it becoming a permanent project of the sponsors and the Naval Fire Service.

OKANAGAN HONEYMOON

Stagg-Belanger Wedding In Metropolitan United

A floor-length gown of pale yellow chiffon over taffeta was worn by Darlene Marie Belanger when she became the bride of Gary Elwood Stagg recently. Her watteau train, enhanced with lace appliques, extended back from a bridal bow at the waist. White self-fabric roses held her shoulder-length, tiered veil of pale yellow tulle. She carried a cascade bouquet of white gladioli and trailing shamrocks. Only jewelry was a pearl pendant and matching earrings, the groom's gift.

Rev. A. E. King heard vows exchanged between the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. V. Challenger of Port Coquitlam, who travelled to Victoria for the wedding, and the son of Mr. E. C. Stagg of Calgary. The double-ring ceremony took place in the parlor of Metropolitan United Church.

Mrs. Mary Crichton was the bride's only attendant. She was wearing a sheath dress of chiffon over taffeta in turquoise tone. Her bow headpiece with matching net veiling was in the same shade. She carried yellow marguerites and fern in her bouquet.

George Kazakoff was best man.

A reception followed in the Falmouth Road home of Mrs. Crichton.

For travelling on honeymoon to the Okanagan, the new Mrs. Stagg chose a suit in mint green tone, complemented with brown accessories and a muskrat jacket, a gift from her mother. Her corsage was of yellow roses.

Surpass Goal For Centenial

OTTAWA (CP)—The Federated Women's Institutes of Canada have surpassed their initial goal of raising $20,000 for a centennial fund for adult education among women of northern Canada.

The fund, begun three years ago, has already paid for a convention of the 11 Women's Institutes in the Mackenzie district of the Northwest Territories.

Contributions are still coming in, and further plans for using the money will be made at the annual meeting in Guelph, Ont., in June.

BELONGED TO BRIDE'S GREAT-GRANDMOTHER

Heirloom Locket for Talisman

A gold locket which belonged to her great-grandmother fulfilled the tradition of "something old" for Edna Grace Graham when she became the bride of Colin Taylor de Macedo. The locket was the only jewelry accent to her floor-length gown of white satin. The bodice of the gown was styled with sleeves ending in lily points. Her train of Chantilly lace extended to floor-length from the shoulders. A white rose held her tiered veil of lace, and she carried a bouquet of red roses with white stephanotis.

Rev. S. J. Parsons officiated at the ceremony uniting the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. Graham, 1015 Tolmie Avenue, and the son of Mr. and Mrs. C. J. de Macedo, 1875 Ventura Way. Centennial United Church was decorated with arrangements of iris and daffodils for the occasion. Mr. Graham gave his daughter in marriage.

During the signing of the register, W. Alexander sang "Because."

The bride's duo of attendants were matron of honor, her sister Mrs. R. Henson, and bridesmaid Miss Gail Crother. They were dressed alike in gowns of satin in aqua tones with matching headpieces of lace and net. They carried bouquets of white and aqua colored carnations.

R. Smith was best man and ushering guests were G. Uttke and B. Kirkby.

A three-tier wedding cake with pink and white decorations, made and decorated by Ed Fry, centred the head table at the reception following in Holyrood House. W. Alexander proposed the toast to his niece's happiness.

For travelling on honeymoon to the southern United States, the new Mrs. de Macedo chose a coffee-brown toned suit with black accessories and a corsage of yellow roses.

The newlyweds are now living at 516 Dallas Road.

Detective Series Previewed In Two-Hour Thriller Tonight

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Television audiences can try something new tonight: A two-hour preview of a series for next season.

The subject is called Ironside, and it stars Raymond Burr as the crippled detective for the San Francisco police who tracks down the sniper whose bullet paralyses him. The show is a world premiere attraction on NBC's Tuesday Night at the Movies.

Next season Ironside will appear on NBC in one-hour versions at 8:30 Thursday night—"my old Perry Mason time slot," Burr points out.

It's not easy to catch up with Burr, a native of New Westminster, B.C., but he was located at Universal studio during the final day of shooting on Criss Cross, a feature film intended for the theatre screens first and TV later.

"Leaving for Vietnam tomorrow," he reported. "I'll be spending my birthday there for the fifth time." He'll be 50 May 21.

"I've been in Vietnam about 10 times in all, but I usually visit there in May, between the television seasons."

VISITS HOSPITALS

The hefty actor spends his time in talks with the soldiers at hospitals and troop installations since he is not a song-and-dance man. On this trip he said he also will tour other parts of the Orient at the request of the U.S. government, advising on the use of educational television.

He will return in late May to begin his second television series, for which tonight's movie served as a pilot. Ironside—tat's the detective's name—was snapped up by the Madison Avenue buyers.

During his nine-year tenure as the ever-victorious Perry Mason, Burr faced what his fellow actors concede was one of the toughest assignments in television. He was the focal figure of an hour-long show, one that required the memorizing of reams of courtroom dialogue for every show. The role made him rich, but it also put him in the hospital from time to time.

EASY COME, EASY GO
Elvis Presley
Capitol Theatre

Age and affluence have sobered Elvis Preslay's style. He is plumper and jollier and his dance routines are much less erotic than they used to be.

At 31, with an income from films and royalties averaging about $6,000,000 a year, he can afford to be less boisterous without losing any of his millions of fans.

The title, Easy Come, Easy Go, seems to fit his new image, but he still wags an aggressive guitar, belts out a series of steamy lyrics in an electronic baritone and, this time, puts on an eel-like display of skin-diving for the underwater cameras.

The skin diving of course is involved with treasure under the sea. The slender story is enlivened with beautiful boats and a string of beautiful dames headed by Pat Priest and Dode Marshall.

There is plenty of singin' and swingin', which seemed to please the youngsters at Monday's matinee and one or two wisecracks which appealed to adults as well.

"Leave her to me—I understand women," says one of Presley's male companions.

"If you do you're the first ever," he shoots back.

There are the usual romantic misunderstandings between Elvis and his idealistic No. 1 girl friend. Nothing serious, of course, but enough to keep the story off the ground.

Settings and camerawork are competent for this type of film.

WIGGLING MEANINGLESS

Belly Dancers Back to School

CAIRO (AP) — Egypt's exotic belly dancers will soon have to go to school. The government has classified their wriggling "shamefully meaningless" and decided to open a school for this ancient art.

Only shapely, attractive brunettes will be admitted, an announcement said. Brunettes are more representative of the Orient than blondes, the announcement added.

The down-to-earch dance must be transformed into an are more in keeping with the nation's determined progress, the announcement stressed. Russian ballet experts will be hired to revamp the belly dance by introducing "meaningful" moto it.

The belly dance will no longer be a source of sexual excitement, it will be an art expressive of oriental music and atmosphere, the announcement went on. Even the name belly dance is to be abolished and the name "oriental dance" should replace it.

Practising belly dancers will have to enrol for a short-term study at the projected school to "cleanse and polish their movements of any gesticulations having as their primary target to arouse sexual excitement of spectators."

In addition, the revealing, spangled costumes are also target of official criticism. officials say a new garb is being tailored, covering navel and ankles. This, they say, will urge dancers to depend more on mastery of the art rather than simply expose their charms to win applause.

Godot: Limited Range Hampers Brilliant Concept

By AUDREY JOHNSON

WAITING FOR GODOT
By Samuel Beckett

Estrogen	James Netherton
Vladimir	James Leard
Pozzo	Alan Munro
Lucky	Peter Lower
The Boy	Jeffery Schwartz

A play that is already a classic of the 20th century theatre holds the Phoenix stage at University of Victoria this week.

Waiting For Godot, a Campus Players production that ends the Phoenix Theatre season at Uvic, plays nightly through Saturday.

The absurdity, cruelty and utter vacuity of man's existence and his passing of time in a universe without meaning, are Beckett's preoccupations in this as in his other dramatic writings.

VALID ENOUGH

Given this understanding, the terms in which director Frederick Edell has chosen to couch the piece appear valid enough.

The metaphor of a faded and deserted vaudeville stage with its abandoned comedy trappings suits the idea and mood of the play better in many ways than the original wayside setting.

And that the tramps, Estrogen and Vladimir, should become two sad clowns hanging about the empty stage, alternating in moods of hopelessness, despair, sudden fits of exuberance, snatches of memory, anxious expectancy — this too fits the picture.

The concept in fact, is brilliant; bulging with possibilities, promising an enhanced poignancy, an intensified vision.

But somewhere along the way between director's concept and the performance I saw Monday, something had gone wrong.

The youthful cast works hard, with intensity, with sincerity, but the range is severely limited and results in long periods of dullness.

In fact, this is probably the answer to the problem. Lacking the experienced actor's instinctive sense of timing and virtuoso technique, the director's metaphor is impossible to bring off.

Stage business dominated the spoken word until its sense was quite obliterated at times. Accents appeared and disappeared.

Only with Alan Munro and young Jeffrey Schwartz was every word distinct and meaning clearly expressed.

At the same time the achivement of Netherton and Leard as the clowns and Peter Lower as the rich man's trembling slave, acnowledging their limits of age and experience, was considerable in teamwork, concentration and energy.

Centennial Book Price Set at $25

LONDON (CP)—The average Canadian will have to dig deep in his pocket if he is to acquire the huge, lavish centennial book produced by Canadian photographer Roloff Beny.

The London publishers Thames and Hudson, said Monday the book will sell for $25 in Canada and $31.50 in Britain.

Beny, a native of Medicine Hat, Alta., put about four years of thought and effort into this creative work to be published April 24.

Sponsored by John David Eaton of Toronto, president of the T. Eaton Co., Ltd. the book has been selected by the Canadian government to commemorate the centennial. Copies will be provided as gifts for all heads of states and government leaders invited to Canada to participate in the celebration.

The Guardian says Beny may make a fortune on the basis of royaltes of 10 per cent and the likelihood more than 100,000 copies would be sold.

CMHA to Meet Health Minister

A delegation from the B.C. division, Canadian Mental Health Association, will meet Health Minister Wesley Black inVictoria around the middle of April.

They will discuss the association's 18-point brief for the upgrading of psychiatric facilities and care for the mentally ill, board president Graydon Roberts announced in Vancouver.

EXAMPLE FOR THE WORLD?

Canada Makes Study Of Aussie Labor Laws

Ivan Rand, former Supreme Court justice, spent a month in Australia examining its labor legislation in connection with his Ontario royal commission inquiry into labor disputes. Australian practices are discussed in this story.

RAND

By VINCENT MATTHEWS
Canadian Press Correspondent

MELBOURNE — The way Australia deals with its industrial disputes has long been held up as an example to the rest of the world.

The law compels employers and unions to submit their disputes to arbitration and if either party defies the arbitration commissioner's decision the law steps in and imposes stiff penalties.

Legislation also provides for a minimum wage which is determined by arbitration commission judges and is reviewed periodically when trade unions apply for an increase.

Ivan Rand, the former Supreme Court of Canada justice who is looking into Ontario labor disputes as a one-man royal commission, had several times praised the Australian system during hearings.

With commission counsel Marshall Pollock he got a first-hand view of Australian practices during a trip here in February.

He learned that in Australia the system is constantly under attack both from unions and employers. But to Labor Minister Leslie Bury this criticism is an indication of the system's success—as long as both sides attack it at some time or another it proves it is doing its job impartially.

The Australian approach to the nation's industrial arbitration system is simple and human: "It's a great system when it gives us what we want but it's no good when it doesn't."

BORN OF STRIFE

The system itself was born after the fierce battles between bosses and workers at the end of the last century. Strikes were widespread and violent. The employers held the whip hand and used it ruthlessly.

Compulsory arbitration of industrial disputes was first brought in by the State of New South Wales in 1901. The system became nationwide when the commonwealth court of conciliation and arbitration was established in 1904.

There have been changes to it since then. In 1956 the court was split into two parts: the conciliation and arbitration commission and the industrial court. The commission fixes basic wages, "margins"—extra pay—for skilled workers and conditions for workers under federal awards, more than half the 4,000,000 workers in Australia. The court deals with judicial matters and enforces commission decisions.

Another important change in the act was made in May, 1965. This gives parties to a dispute 14 days to cool down before applying to the court for action. This amendment was needed because if there is one part of Australia's industrial laws that causes ill-feeling it's the penal clauses.

BACKED BY FINES

The system works like this: Unions put their claims before an employer. If he rejects them, unions and employer must tell the arbitration commission that a dispute exists.

A commissioner—usually a man with wide experience in industrial matters — holds a conference in secret with the two parties. In most cases this conference settles the matter.

If the commissioner thinks the case is in the national interest he can send it to the commission's full bench, three judges sitting with a commissioner.

If the parties still can't agree, the commissioner issues an order which, if not complied with, is enforced by the industrial court.

This is where the penal clauses—hated by the unions —come in. If, for instance, unions are so dissatisfied with a commissioner's order or an employer's offer that they go on strike, the employer can immediately apply to the commission for an order prohibiting the union from striking.

If the union persists in the strike, the employer, after a 14-day cooling-off period, then asks the industrial court to act against the union for defying the commissioner's order.

The result is usually a heavy fine—up to $2,400 Canadian for each offence and jail for union officials.

The government claims these penal clauses have had a major influence in reducing the number of strikes. The Labor party at the last election pledged to repeal the clauses if it got into power.

CAN DECERTIFY UNIONS

Another powerful penal clause the industrial court has is "de-registration." Trade unions are registered with the arbitration commission as legally representing the workers in their particular industry. If any union got completely out of hand the right to represent its members at commission hearings would be withdrawn. This would make the union virtually powerless.

This threat was held over the heads of the leaders of the militant Waterside Workers' Federation two years ago. The result was unprecedented industrial peace on the waterfront.

But if the unions feel that their right to strike and to press their claims on employers vigorously is restricted by the arbitration system, employers aren't always happy at the way the arbitration commission awards pay increases. They are urging the government to insist that the commission should take into account the state of the nation's economy when making pay awards and the effect a pay rise has on prices.

UNIONS ASK RAISES

The arbitration commission will shortly begin hearing a new union application for an increase in the basic wage. Its decision will directly affect the 2,000,000-odd workers under federal awards and will eventually flow to other workers whose basic pay is decided by state wage boards.

The skirmishing has already begun with union leaders warning that they may drop arbitration if they don't get a better deal and employers expressing alarm at the effect on prices of any further nationwide pay rise.

Unions favor the arbitration system best in times of industrial crisis when there is unemployment and employers are in a commanding position. Then the court protects basic standards. Unions like arbitration least in times of affluence when they feel they can get more from employers by direct bargaining.

Acting, Poker Playing Among Ike's Triumphs

NEW YORK (AP) — As a teen-age Shakespearean comic actor, Dwight E. Eisenhower won the accolade "best amateur humorous character seen on the Abilene stage in this generation."

The former president recalls the reviewer's plaudits in his forthcoming book, At Ease: Stories I Tell to Friends, excerpts of which are contained in a Saturday Evening Post article out today.

His stage triumph came in the role of Gobbo in the Abilene High School senior class production of The Merchant of Venice.

Poker was taught the young Kansan by his childhood hero, Bob Davis, a hunter-fisherman and guide who was illiterate but "knew poker percentages cold."

Sticking strictly to the percentages, Eisenhower said, he became a "regular winner" but quit while in the army "when I found officers around me losing more than they could afford."

Marine's Sentence Cut In Murder, Mutilation

DA NANG, South Vietnam (AP)—The commander of the U.S. 1st Marine Division has reduced a marine's life sentence for the murder of a Vietnamese man and woman to 25 years at hard labor.

Maj.-Gen. Herman Nickerson Jr. extended the clemency to Private First Class Charles W. Keenan who was convicted on two counts of premeditated murder by a marine court martial at Da Nang in January.

The two Vietnamese, Nguyen Thi Co, and her brother-in-law, Nguyen Qua, were killed Sept. 22 while a U.S. marine patrol was on a combat reconnaissance mission from its base camp at Chu Lai, 50 miles south of Da Nang.

Another marine, Cpl. Stanley J. Lucsko, 20, was convicted of premeditated murder in the death of the woman and given a life sentence which Nickerson still must review.

A third marine, Pfc. Ronald A. Piatkowski, 18, was convicted of attempting to murder the man and mutilating his body by cutting off the left ear. He received a 10-year sentence.

The sentences of all three also must be reviewed by a military appeals board in Washington before becoming final.

According to testimony in the transcript of Keenan's court martial:

Four members of the reconnaissance patrol searched a house across a rice paddy from the trail the patrol was travelling.

Pfc. David M. Moore testified that the woman came from behind the house which he was near, went to a haystack, and began feeding some cattle.

He said Luczko "started to play with his pistol . . . and asked me how big a hole did I think it would make in her." Moore said Luczko shot at the woman three times.

Moore testified that Keenan then emerged from the house and asked Luczko,, "Should I finish her off?"

SHOT HER IN THE HEAD

"Then Luczko said, 'Finish her off,' " Moore, said, "and Keenan fired with about a four-round burst of his AR (automatic rifle) and the rounds struck the woman in the forehead."

The witnesses said the woman's body was covered with hay and the stack was set on fire. The marines then left.

Moore said the marines encountered the man later. He said he heard a shot from a pistol and then a rifle shot.

"I ducked down and moved to my left, got out of the line of fire. . . . As I turned around and saw the man run, I heard Luczko say, 'Fire! Damn it! Fire!' "

He said the man ran up an embankment and fell behind some bushes.

At his own trial, Piatkowski testified he found the man lying behind some heavy brush.

"His eyes were fluttering and his jaw moved," he said. Pitakowski said he asked the squad leader (Luczko) what to do and was told to "shoot him."

"Then I shot the man," he said. "From there I asked my squad leader if I could cut off the man's ear. I did so and they helped me drag the man over to the bushes."

Goodwill Tour

SYDNEY (AP) — Prime Minister Harold E. Holt of Australia left today on a two-week goodwill tour of six East Asian capitals. It is Holt's second such tour in a year. He will visit Singapore; Phnom Penh, Cambodia; Vientiane, Laos; Hong Kong; Taipei, Formosa, and Seoul, South Korea.

HAVE YOU WRITTEN A BOOK?

A publisher's representative will be in Victoria in May. He will be interviewing local authors in a quest for finished manuscripts suitable for book publication by Carlton Press, Inc., well-known New York publishing firm. All subjects will be considered including fiction and non-fiction, potery, drama, religion, philosophy, etc.

If you have completed a book-length manuscript (or nearly so) on any subject, and would like a professional appraisal (without cost or obligation), please write immediately describing your work and stating which part of the day (a.m. or p.m.) you would prefer for an appointment. You will promptly receive a confirmation for a definite time and place.

Authors with completed manscripts unable to appear may send them directly to the representative (address below) for a free reading and evaluation. He will also be glad to hear from those whose literary works are still in progress. Please address:

BRIDGE LESSON

By OSWALD and JAMES JACOBY
Newspaper Enterprise Association

"When in doubt lead trumps" is one of the really old bridge bromides. There is very little merit to it. A better one is, "When not in doubt, lead trumps."

North's two club bid was Stayman and asked South to show a four card major suit if he could. South obliged with a two spade bid and North made a slight overbid of five spades. With an absolute maximum no-trump, South went on to six in spite of his poor trump holding.

The contract is a good one. It spreads if diamonds break favorably, if both kings are finessable, or if West opens anything but a trump. On the other hand, West has an almost automatic trump lead. He is not in doubt at all. He sees that any other lead is likely to cost a trick and that a trump lead won't.

Even with the trump opening South is likely to make the hand. He will draw trumps with three leads, play dummy's king of diamonds and lead a second diamond. East will show out, whereupon South will play his ace and jack of diamonds.

West will be in with the queen and forced to lead a heart or club. A heart lead will be fatal.

Does West have an absolute guess? Not at all! East will have discarded three times. He will drop the two deuces first and either the three of hearts or four of clubs next. West will read East for having started with five cards in each suit whereupon West will know that South holds three hearts and two clubs. Then West will lead the club and beat the slam.

SPORTYAK II
Safest boat afloat, buoyant as a rubber dinghy—tough as glass. Weighs 30 lbs., floats 700 lbs. Cartops without a rack. Stows aboard —or tows astern with almost no drag. Widely used by commercial and sports fishermen, hunters, explorers and prospectors. Barrel of fun for the family, too. Row—paddle—sail—power or DRIFT. Only $129.50 basic. Bright orange.

Andy Stephen Looks at TV

ABC-TV showed that awards shows can be pleasant things to watch.

The network proved it by carrying the Tony Awards from the Shubert Theatre in New York. The awards are the Broadway equivalent of the Oscar of movie fame and TV's Emmy.

Stephen

Firstly, the show opened with a scene from the hit Broadway show, cabaret. It was lively and carried the magic of the theatre into the home, and really set the mood for the evening. As it turned out, Cabaret carried off a host of the Tony awards.

Scenes from three other Broadway musicals also helped provide an airy change of pace throughout the 70-minute telecast.

Secondly, Robert Preston and Mary Martin, the stars of the show "I Do! I Do!", made the perfect hosts for the program. The pair, like two peas in a pod, handled their chores with efficient decorum allowing enough wit to filter through to carry the show out of what could have been a stodgy affair.

Thirdly, there was nothing sickening or maudlin about those who presented the Tony awards nor from those who accepted them.

The presenters were short in comment and the winners just as tastily succinct in acceptance.

Preston won a Tony for his part in "I Do! I Do!" and it would have been a successful evening all around if Miss Martin could have gotten one too. But Barbara Harris, star of The Apple Tree, took the win. Miss Martin still came back with the sparkle of a professional. Her loss must have hurt but she didn't show it.

If Oscar and Emmy can come off as smoothly in future weeks, ABC-TV will have pulled off a neat coup.

It was the Bell Telephone company which started the trend towards uninterrupted programs, passing on its brief message fore and aft of its show. It was a move heralded by critics and viewers alike.

Sunday, a car maker announced it would interrupt the two-and-a-half hour running of "The Robe" with only one commercial intermission. A good move since the movie running time was long.

However, after making the proud brag at the beginning of the show it spoiled everything by running through a 10-minute commercial even before the movie started, plus the middle break.

A better idea? I wonder.

"WHEELING GULLS"

In this choice Gordon Head area of delightful homes, one long, low beauty, etched in sparkling white against the blue of the Straits, seems to command by sheer right of location! A sweeping curve of emerald lawn, a wide door and you step into a world of quiet elegance, where expert planning, fine craftsmanship and exquisite taste have set the scene for gracious living from the spacious living room with floor to ceiling fireplace and the guest-size dining room, sky wide windows present the ever changing sea scope in all its day time moods. Sliding glass doors to a "different" deck tempt one to watch until night steals the last color from the sea and islands, before turning the whole "veer wall" to muted gold with the flick of a draw cord and the soft glow of valance lighting. Creamy wall-to-wall carpet unifies the main living areas and carries down the stairs from the entrance hall to the almost finished recreation room with open fireplace and gay color accents. Beautiful kitchen. 3 lovely bedrooms, 4-pce double vanity bath and extras too numerous to mention make this MEDALLION home a must see! Price $29,000. Bev McArthur, 385-6741 anytime.

THE "MODERN BAVARIAN"

THIS BRAND-NEW HOME offers old country charm and gives you all the benefits of modern living. The builder took pride in his work, used the best building materials available, and incorporated many extra features usually only found in homes of the higher priced ranges.

THE INTERIOR consists of an entrance hall, spacious living room, fireplace, guest-size dining room with sliding glass doors to the patio, and a bright well-planned kitchen with eating area. All have BEAMED CEILINGS! The upper level consists of 3 bedrooms (master bedroom is en suite) and 1½ bathrooms. On the lower level you'll find a PANELLED DEN (or 4th bedroom), a bath, utility area and rec. area. The home is situated in an elevated location on a landscaped lot offering partial sea and mountain views!

View this home and you will see modern styling at its very best — not ultra but serene quality combined with good taste and excellent workmanship.
Spacious living room with white marble fireplace, beamed ceilings, indirect valance lighting, rich wall to wall carpeting, separate dining room, 3 bedrooms. The master bedroom has one complete wall of closets and its own bathroom. The main bathroom is a showplace. A very swank kitchen with utility area partitioned off behind folding louvered doors. An open stairway leads to the lower floor where there is ample room to complete 2 more bedrooms and a rumpus room or den with fireplace.
There is a spectacular panoramic sea view from nearly every room and it can not be spoiled by other homes. If you are looking for a home that is quality throughout — a home with a style of its own and a sea view that cannot be surpassed, we urge you to see this at

VOTE PREDICTION:

Puerto Ricans Will Retain Special Status

By DAVE NICHOLSON

SAN JUAN (CP) — Puerto Ricans vote July 23 in a referendum aimed at determining the political future of the Caribbean island.

Observers see little chance of the vote producing startling results. They say it's already clear Puerto Ricans will choose to retain their special status as a commonwealth of the United States.

The referendum will offer three choices: continued commonwealth status, full statehood within the U.S. or total independence.

But if the vote is expected to produce no surprises, neither is it expected to provide a final answer to the island's future. Spokesmen for the statehood and independence parties say they will continue their struggle even if the referendum shows overwhelming support for commonwealth status.

Ironically, independence party leaders claim their following is growing at a time when the government of Roberto Sanchez Vilella, a staunch supporter of the commonwealth system, is bringing in new industry almost as fast as the island can find room for it.

150 NEW FIRMS

Under the government's Operation Bootstrap, 150 new industries moved into the island last year. Net income from the total of 2,300 plants operating on Puerto Rico grew by 10.7 per cent to $485,000,000.

But the government opponents say the industrial program is doing far more good for the American businessmen operating the plants than for the Puerto Rican peasants, many still trapped in grinding poverty.

Poverty is not hard to find on the island of 2,700,000. Much of the worst of it is concentrated in this capital of 700,000, where a matter of inches can separate squalid huts from palatial houses ringed by ornate Castilian balconies.

Juan Mari Bras, leader of the Pro-Independence Movement, says the operation has meant "low salaries, low rents but all kinds of incentives for the Americans."

Replying to those who say Puerto Rico, 1,000 miles southeast of Miami, would suffer a crippling economic blow if separated from the United States, Bras says independence would instead provide the island with greater economic freedom than ever before.

The Pro-Independence Movement, founded in 1959, is the newest and most vocal of several independence parties on the island.

ABSTAIN FROM VOTING

Although its strength is difficult to determine because it usually calls on its followers to abstain in elections, Bras claims his party now controls 13 per cent of the voting population.

How could the United States be forced to grant independence to the 3,423-square-mile island, about 1⅛ times as large as Prince Edward Island?

"We believe the combination of increasing international pressure against colonialism and the national mobilization of the people of Puerto Rico will force the United States to give us our independence," said the American-trained lawyer.

Puerto Rico "is not a commonwealth as Canadians know it, it's only a colony in full disguise."

Puerto Rican nationalists have often turned to world opinion to plead their case, most notably in 1950 when several attempted to assassinate President Truman in Washington and again in 1954 when others shot and wounded five congressmen on the floor of the House of Representatives.

UN WON'T HELP

The General Assembly of the United Nations, however, has said in a resolution the island is a self-governing political unit associated voluntarily with the United States and cannot be considered a colony.

Bras sees little likelihood of Puerto Rico becoming the 51st state within the U.S. and doubts the Americans themselves want it.

"The United States does not pretend to be a multi-national state and therefore could not accept us until they had destroyed our national character. And we won't let this happen."

Most objections to the spread of industrial development stem from concessions granted new firms. Industries can obtain tax holidays of up to 17 years while paying low wages to their Puerto Rican employees. Government officials say the island's unemployment rate is about 10 per cent but opponents claim it runs as high as 30 per cent.

Bras says independence from the United States would free Puerto Rico of economic dependence on the U.S.

LACK FEDERAL VOTE

"We would continue to trade with the United States and at the same time receive the benefit of being able to trade on a free basis with the rest of the world.

"As it now stands, if we wish to import from Canada, we have to pay the U.S. tariff.

"Puerto Rico is not free. We're subject not only to the economy of the United States, but also to the laws of the United States — including the draft — even though we have no voting representatives in Congress."

The island sends two observers to Washington but they have no voting rights.

The Pro-Independence Movement was founded by dissident members of the island's two traditional independence parties — the Nationalist Party and the Independence Party.

New Subdivision Proposed On Wallace Drive

Sixty-six acres of open land are involved in what could be a high-class residential subdivision with 1,000-foot frontage on Wallace Drive in Central Saanich.

Consultant engineer Russell E. Potter told Central Saanich council his clients have taken an option on the property, which is adjacent to the proposed Brentwood Bay sewer installation. Mr. Potter said his clients are studying the availability of sewer facilities before making a final decision.

In reply to a question from council, Mr. Potter said the development costs would be borne completely by the subdividers.

FULL COWICHAN RESULTS

'Riders Just Love' Cross-Country Runs

DUNCAN—A record number of 39 horses took part in the cross-country event at the hunter trials staged by Cowichan Riding Club Monday.

Entries were present from Campbell River to Victoria and the cross-country race took two hours to run off.

The tough slippery course was over one and a half miles of the Stevenson Farm on Genoa Bay Road.

Mrs. Marjorie Jaggers said: "Cowichan is about the only cross-country event left on the Island riding calendar and riders just love it.

"Next year we'll probably get 50 entries."

There was a large turnout of spectators despite inclement weather.

The days results were:

Cross-country—1. Robert Chappel on Aldebaran; 2. Wendy Lister on Golden Aura; 3. Mrs. N. W. Joyce on Scottish Soldier.

Western pleasure—1. Clint Willson on Bud Stewart; 2. R. E. Gook on Caesar; 3. Donna Smith on Choctaw Reed.

Trail horse—1. R. E. Gook on Caesar; 2. Richard Nichols on Painted Ocean; 3. Matt Nobles on Handicat Walker.

'Clean' Nuclear Bomb Designed by Swedes?

STOCKHOLM (UPI)—Swedish scientists recently claimed they have perfected a design for the world's first "practically clean" nuclear bomb.

The Swedish Defence Research Institute scientists told newsmen however they doubt Sweden will build a nuclear weapon.

One of them, Sten Andersson, said the bomb they designed would have far less radio-active fallout tnan current nuclear weapons.

"We have worked with this for four years now and as far as I know, no other scientists have developed a similar theory," he said.

The newspaper Dagens Nyheter earlier reported the Swedes had built a model of the weapon. Andersson denied it, saying the bomb "exists on paper only and in our brains. Sweden has not, and will not, I presmue, build a nuclear bomb."

Andersson said he and colleague Bo Holmberg have been working on problems about protecting the population from fallout following a nuclear explosion. "To know what we are trying to defend ourselves against, we must know what happens when a nuclear bomb explodes," he said.

He said he and Holmberg found it is possible to reduce condensation in a nuclear blast by chemical means. This results in radio-active particles being lighter and thus rising instead of falling immediately to earth with their lethal peril, he said.

Andersson said France and China, both developing nuclear arms despite the Anglo-American Soviet test ban treaty, could make use of the Swedish theory. It definitely will work, he said.

Dagens Nyheter said the scientists proved reduction of condensation after a blast is a practical possibility.

Pro Soccer Loops Must Sign Soon

NEW YORK (AP)—A merger between the two new professional soccer leagues appears a strong possibility, but negotiations will have to move pretty quickly if it is to be done before the season opens.

Officials of the rival leagues have been holding talks for the last three months, but Dick Walsh, commissioner of the United Soccer Association, said he doubts any merger will be possible this season.

Both the United League and the National Professional Soccer League are scheduled to open their season next month, the United in 12 cities and the National in 10.

The National League has a television contract with CBS while the United has been sanctioned by the world body governing soccer, so a merger would be advantageous to both.

'ASTOUNDING'

Child Death Rate Worst In Canada

OTTAWA (CP) — More children are killed per capita in Canada than in any other country in the world, a medical professor told delegates to the maternal and child health conference this week.

Dr. John Read of Queen's University said the accident death rate was 118 for every 100,000 children in the one-to-four age group.

This "astounding" record was the worst for any country in which reliable statistics were available. Czechoslovakia was second with a rate of 103, but these were the only two countries with a rate more than 100.

Dr. Helen Wallace of the University of California school of public health told doctors, nurses and social workers attending the conference more Canadian children died from accidents than any other cause.

This included traffic mishaps, falls, burns and poisonings. Oral contraceptives now were high on the list of accidental poisoning agents.

The injuring agent was usually something attractive to the child — such as a bright pill — and children were usually "acutely hungry" at the time they suffered injury.

The most dangerous times in the day were one-hour periods just before meal times, when the child was hungry, tired and hyperactive, and the mother preoccupied with food preparations.

Dr. Wallace said 95 per cent of accidents could be prevented by closer supervision. Safety regulations such as improved labelling of poisons are necessary.

She suggested a centre where both mother and children could receive medical care. With a pediatrician, an obstetrician and two public health nurses, it could offer pre-natal, post-natal, birth control and interconceptual clinics for mothers.

Historic Ranch Restored

Premier W. A. C. Bennett will officiate at the opening of the Historic O'Keefe Ranch near Vernon June 15—the precise anniversary of the founding of the ranch 100 years ago!

Cornelius O'Keefe was heading back to gold-crazed Barkerville with 180 head of Oregon steers when he found the lush grasslands at the head of Okanagan Lake and decided to lay over to fatten his cattle. I proved a fateful decision, for he never moved on. Eventually, he pre-empted 15,000 acres, to become one of the largest landholders in the B.C. interior.

Believed to be the only one of B.C.'s early cattle empires still held by the original family, the O'Keefe Ranch has been fully restored to its 19th century condition as a private centennial project of the present-day O'Keefe's.

In addition to an opulent ranch house (reverently called "the mansion") the historic ranch includes St. Ann's Roman Catholic Church — oldest in the interior—plus a general store and post office, a blacksmith shop, and the family's first home — a log structure that later served as a bunkhouse.

Although the restoration is only now being completed, the ranch received more than 10,000 visitors last year.

ASK ANDY

Is there something you want to know? Do you want to win a set of valuable books or other instructive prizes? Then ask Andy.

Andy will answer questions submitted by child readers and those who submit the questions he selects to answer will receive worthwhile prizes.

The youngster who asks the first question answered each day receives a 20-volume set of the World Book tion a Hammond Atlas or Globe. Encyclopedia and of the second ques-

Andy sends a complete, 20-volume set of the World Book Encyclopedia to Donna Wooding, age 10, of Sarasota, Florida, for her question:

Do frogs have lungs or gills?

A grown frog spends his time in and out of the water. He sits for hours beside his swimming pool, enjoying the warm sun and using the lungs in his chest to breathe in and breathe out. Suddenly he leaps up in a fancy high dive and plunges down into the pond. After a few splendid swimming strokes under water, he may decide to settle for a while on the bottom. And there he squats for five minutes, 10 minutes or even an hour. Surely he cannot be holding his breath all this time. No, he is not. He is getting a constant supply of oxygen from the water.

Lungs, of course, are made for taking oxygen from the air and under water they are useless. Fishes and many other animals have gills made specially to sift oxygen from the water. Perhaps the frog has a pair of gills tucked away somewhere. Maybe he uses his lungs in the air and his secret gills when he goes under water. Certainly he had a pair of fishy gills when he was a water-dwelling tadpole. In fact, at the time he had no lungs at all and could not breathe in the air.

But the answer is no. A grown frog has lungs, but no gills. When he exchanged his tadpole gills for a pair of lungs, he lost those gills forever. But he is an amphibian, a land and water animal. And Mother Nature was extra generous to the amphibians. She gave them special skins in place of their baby gills. The wondrous skin of the amphibian can absorb oxygen from the water.

Absorbs Oxygen

True, it is not a pretty, petal-smooth skin. It is a coarse, bumpy skin covered with pores and pimples. Fine blood vessels come close to the surface and the walls of the living cells in the skin are very thin. The blood cells can absorb molecules of oxygen right through the surface of the skin. A frog stops using his lungs when he stays below the water. But he continues to get the oxygen he needs by absorbing it right through his amphibian skin.

Water, of course, is made of hydrogen and oxygen. But fishes and frogs do not extract their oxygen from water molecules. Water tends to absorb the gases of the air. There is a lot of dissolved air in ponds and rivers, lakes and seas, especially near the surface. And a lot of it is dissolved oxygen. A salt water fish uses his gills to take these unattached molecules of oxygen from the sea. A frog lets his skin absorb this dissolved oxygen from his swimming pool and also from the dewy moisture on the ground.

Nature, it seems, makes us pay for her special gifts. The talented skin of the amphibian comes with a handicap. Dry air is disastrous to it and it must be kept damp. It has special built-in cells that ooze out slippery mucus. This is why a frog feels moist and clammy. In the shade, the skin provides enough sweaty moisture to keep itself damp, but not enough to stay moist in hot, dry air. A few hours in desert sunshine shrivels up the skin of a frog and proves fatal.

TOO SMALL FOR CAMPUS

Kim 4, a High School Freshman

VAN NUYS, Calif. (AP) — Kim Ung-yong, a tiny Korean genius who is the author of two books, has posed some big problems for Grant High School here by applying for admission. He is only four years old.

School officials say they are more concerned with his size than his mental prowess.

"He would be too small to turn loose on a campus of this size," says Henry O. Dyck, the school principal. The 33-acre campus has an enrolment of 3,500 students.

One suggestion was the possibility of establishing a student honor guard to escort Kim around the campus.

But Dyck says he is also worried about Kim being abducted, or whether he could adjust emotionally to the school, and whether he could be assimilated into the student body with such a great difference in age.

SPECIAL CASE

Dyck said it probably will take a special ruling by higher authorities to resolve the matter.

Ung-yong's father, Professor Kim Soo-sun, said in Seoul that he sent an application Feb. 27 to the school asking that his son be enrolled.

Asked why he chose the school, the father said he came to know about Grant through an exchange of letters with Joseph N. Feinstein, a teacher at the school.

Kim writes poems in Korean and Chinese and solves complicated differential calculus. His father says Kim has memorized about 2,000 English and German words each. The boy scored more than 200 on an IQ test normally given to 7-year-olds. He has published books of essays and poems.

With these credentials, who needs high school? Kim could always apply for college.

The Wonderful World of Animals

By DR. FRANK MILLER

DEAR DR. MILLER: Is there any special way to get a dog to take medicine in his food? I'm supposed to be giving our miniature poodle a daily pill but he usually finds it and spits it out.—L.O'L.

DEAR L. O'L.: Once the "victim" becomes suspicious and starts searching through his food to find a hidden pill, the jig is up and you may as well devise a different approach to the problem. At this juncture, the frontal attack is generally most effective. This consists of pushing the pill way back in the throat, quickly closing the mouth (preferably remove you hand first) and then rubbing the throat to stimulate swallowing. Generally the medication will slide down easier if it is greased first.

* * *

DEAR DR. MILLER: For two years now, I have been trying to keep a salt-water aquarium going. Many times, everything in it had died and I had to start all over. I think my trouble is getting the right water mixture. I've tried all sorts of brands and mixtures but they still don't work. My tank is big, it is especially made for salt water, so it should work. Can you give me a good recipe for making salt water that will be safe—L.P.

DEAR L.P.: There are a number of problems involved in successfully maintaining a salt-water aquarium, but the water itself in the most important consideration. Preparing an adequate formula from basic chemicals is expensive, time-consuming, and a small error can spell disaster. You'll do better with a commercial, packaged formula—provided it's the right one. I'll provide you with the trade name of a recommended formula if you'll write and ask for it.

* * *

DEAR DR. MILLER: Can you tell me, please, what siskin eggs look like?—W.D.

DEAR W.D.: This little finch lays pale blue eggs, marked with reddish spots. (Generally three to six per clutch).

* * *

DEAR DR. MILLER: Last year, our goose, Dolly, laid a clutch of 25 eggs! Diddle, her husband, was very proud, I think, but the fools didn't hatch a single egg! How come and what can I do to encourage a better performance this year? H.Y.

DEAR H.Y.: A better performance? Your goose goofed by turning in too good a performance last year. If Dolly had desisted after the first half dozen, she might have had enough energy left to brood and rear a batch. Hopefully, she's learned her lesson and won't spend all spring dawdling with Diddle.

* * *

DEAR DR. MILLER: Our long-haired Persian cat gets his hair all wadded up and it looks and feels terrible. We used to have to cut out these clumps of hair, but he didn't like it at all. Lately I've started putting just a drop of my hair goop on the hair. The stuff contains silicone and the hair pulls loose real easy. He likes it better than the cutting. And it's safer.—T.N.

DEAR T.N: Thanks for a slick suggestion. (Be sure any product used for this purpose doesn't contain ingredients toxic to cats.) It might be even easier to prevent matting in the first place with a daily combing.

Escapes Decline

BONN (AP)—Escape of civilians into West Germany across the Iron Curtain dropped below the 1,000-mark in 1966, border guards said in a report last week. Only 997 got across the barbed wire and minefields compared with 1,458 in 1965. Another 158 East Germans in uniform—policemen or soldiers—escaped compared with 199 in 1965.

TOWN STATUS REACHED SATURDAY

Tri-Celebration at Comox

COMOX—This quiet, green, up-Island village comes of age next month.

And not with a whimper but a bang.

Comox will have a triple celebration on April 15 to mark its change of status from village to town, its 21st birthday, and the honoring of Comox pioneers with Centennial pioneer medallions.

Celebration will centre on the Elk Hotel, a community landmark.

The village officially ceases to exist on April 1.

Growth at CFB Comox, influx of retired people, and natural growth has boosted the population over 2,500.

With the elevation to town from village the chairman of the municipal commission will become Mayor R. D. Ellis and commissioners will become aldermen.

PATIENT SHAKEN UP

Ambulance-Car Crash Sends 3 to Hospital

A small car crashed head-on into an ambulance on an emergency run over the Malahat Monday night.

Two ambulance attendants and the driver of the other car were sent to hospital, none of them critically injured. The ambulance's patient was not hurt in the crash.

Grant Bolton, 18, of Duncan, was being rushed to Royal Jubilee Hospital for possible emergency surgery. He completed the trip in the Langford fire department ambulance and is reported in "fairly good" condition today.

RCMP said the crash occurred on a gradual curve, about two miles south of Mill Bay. Debris was scattered for about 15 yards. The two vehicles came to rest about 300 feet apart.

BROKEN LEG

Henry Richard Williams of Duncan, driver of the northbound car, suffered a broken leg, back and chest injuries in the collision. He is in "fair condition at Royal Jubilee Hospital.

Atlin (Art) Conley of Wicks Road, Duncan, driver of the ambulance, and his assistant, Ralph MacKenzie of Duncan, are both in satisfactory condition at King's Daughters Hospital in Duncan.

A specialist was called in from Victoria to take a piece of glass from Mr. Conley's eye. Mr. MacKenzie suffered minor cuts.

Police said the crash took place in the southbound lane. Several thousand dollars damage was done to the six-month-old four-bed ambulance.

Phone Delay Hit In $10,000 Fire

COBBLE HILL — The B.C. Telephone Co. was under fire here today following a $10,000 blaze at Gravel Hill Supplies, Ltd., Cowichan Bay Road, on Monday morning.

Truck driver Eddy Smith in trying to raise the alarm said he was first connected to Mill Bay and subsequently Duncan Fire Department.

Duncan alerted Cowichan Bay volunteer firemen.

Gordon Price, Cowichan Bay fire chief, blamed the delay on the fact his department number is not listed in the telephone directory.

"The wrong number is in the book and it can't be changed until next year."

Jim Boyles, owner of Gravel Hill Supplies, said the telephone mixup meant a 15-minute delay in getting a fire department to the scene.

In the meantime fire gutted the workshops. When the Cowichan Bay firemen arrived they managed to save the offices and front end storage space despite trouble with their main pumper.

Lionel Huxtable of B.C. Telephone Company, Nanaimo, said the man who phoned in the alarm asked for Cobble Hill fire department.

MINUTE DELAY

Mr. Huxtable said: "There is no Cobble Hill fire department but the operator stuck with it until she tracked it down to Cowichan Bay. There was a loss of perhaps a minute.

"It's an awkward situation. There are six fire departments in the general area and I defy anyone to know where each one is.

"People should write the number of the fire department in their area down somewhere so it is right under their noses. People get excited in an emergency."

TANK EXPLODED

The fire started when Mr. Smith was working on a tractor.

The carburettor ignited and blew up the gas tank and flames quickly spread.

Smith raced for the phone as soon as he realized he couldn't control the fire himself.

Along with other employees he managed to drive other vehicles out of the workshops before the blaze took hold.

GIRL'S SKULL FRACTURED IN CAR CRASH

CHEMAINUS—Audrey Thomas, 6, is in "fairly good" condition at Royal Jubilee Hospital in Victoria after suffering a skull fracture in a Sunday night car crash.

She was a passenger with her father Gordon Thomas, Rose Street, Chemainus, when he crashed into Reg. Hankey's house on the Old Chemainus Highway.

The crash did $600 damage to the car and shifted the front porch of the house.

Thomas is out on bail after being charged with impaired driving.

ON TARGET. Gun used for planting conifer seedlings weighs only 17 pounds and is operated by no more pressure than is needed to drive a spade into the ground. Seedlings are loaded vertically into magazine and driven into ground by downward thrust. Inventor John Walters, director of UBC research farm at Haney, poses with gun he designed 17 years ago.

Industry Finally Fired Up Over Tree-Planting Gun

By TED GASKELL
Staff Reporter

HANEY — The forest industry has finally got around to trying out a planting technique which the commercial florist has been using for half a century.

The technique is the "container" planting of seedlings.

And the forest industry this year will try it out using a unique tree-planting gun invented by John Walters, director of the UBC's Research Forest at Haney.

This year 130,000 conifer seedlings will be planted on Vancouver Island.

Mr. Walters is pleased with the plans, not simply because his gun has finally been accepted by the industry, but because it marks a great step forward in planting methods.

●

"There has been no change in planting techniques for a hundred years," Mr. Walters said. "The mattock has been used for 50 or 60 years and it's quite probable that there's a picture of a peasant using a mattock on the walls of King Tut's tomb."

The mattock is a pick-like tool with a single flat blade which makes the hole for the seedlings to be dropped into, unprotected except for the soil clinging around the delicate roots.

The commercial florist is much more advanced. He sells his seedlings in pots or thin wooden, bottomless "bands" which can protect the roots during transplanting.

Mr. Walters goes one step further. With his system you needn't dig a hole. His gun shoots the seedling-loaded bullet into the ground.

"A man with a mattock can plant about 750 seedlings a day," Mr. Walters said. "With the gun the same man could plant between 7,000 and 8,000, almost as fast as he can walk."

●

The forest director, a former RAF pilot, came to Canada during the war as a flying instructor. Later he studied at UBC, was made acting director of the forest in October last year and this year was named director.

He got the idea for the gun as a student. He realized that some improvement must be made on the "arduous, back-breaking and archaic" mattock system.

His gun is a spring-loaded cylinder about three or four feet long and weighs 17 pounds.

The seedlings are in clips of 24 which are fed into the planting gun as bullets on a cartridge belt are fed into a machine gun.

The operator pushes down on the handle and drives the bullet into the earth. The spring recoil operates the loading mechanism and the next bullet drops in position, ready for the next planting thrust.

The bullets are plastic cups about three quarters of an inch across and two and a half inches long.

There's a split in the side and a hole at the base which weakens them and lets the growing roots shatter the plastic and spread out into the surrounding soil.

His gun, which resembles a compressed air jack hammer, wasn't accepted at first. He used it to plant seedlings in 1957 but the skeptics wouldn't believe that the roots of a seedling could break the plastic. Disappointed, Mr Walters threw the flourishing trees out.

His ideas are accepted now and it's high time, he feels.

"The area of forestry has been completely ignored," he said. "There has been no change in plant technology in 100 years and no change in nursery techniques in 50 years.

"Even farming has changed. The scythe, once the only tool for harvesting wheat, has disappeared."

Perhaps the mattock will disappear.

●

Proof of the gun planting method can be seen in the plantations at Haney were Mr. Walters method has produced trees which show six or eight inches annual growth in the early stages.

Mattock-planted trees alongside show about two inches of growth.

This year the Tahsis Company will use the gun to plant 10,000 seedling hemlocks on Vancouver Island.

The federal government will plant 120,000 on the Island and 40,000 will be added to the 80,000 already growing at Haney.

The Tennessee Valley Authority has ordered several guns and 10 will go to Mexico.

In 1965, Crown Zellerbach, MacMillan Bloedel and B.C. Forest Products experimented with the gun.

But it failed.

"They were planted in July in the middle of a six-week drought" said Mr. Walters, "and even the seedlings in the moist soil of the nursery couldn't survive that."

He said that B.C. plants about 10,000,000 seedlings a year "and that should be doubled." In North America there are about one and a half billion planted and this should be three or four times greater.

One might think this potential planting could make the inventor of the bullet and gun a rich man, but it won't.

Mr. Walters turned over his patents to UBC so they wouldn't be exploited to the detriment of the forest or agriculture industry.

●

A major modification might be forthcoming. Mr. Walters is now considering the possibility of developing a gun which could be operated automatically from a tractor or bulldozer so that seedlings could be planted as the vehicle moves.

Use of the gun isn't confined to the forest.

With a lighter plastic bullet, it could be used for planting vegetables. Even now in Haney experimental planting of blueberry cuttings is being carried out.

The 10,000-acre forest where Mr. Walters carries out his research was once part of Garibaldi Park.

Chief Don Williams directs work on reserve subdivision.

Revolution at Cole Bay!

By GLEN ALLEN

A North Saanich Indian chief has taken poverty, poor housing and a government by the tail and set a course for all of British Columbia's Indians.

Don Williams, chief and band manager of Cole Bay Reserve, is idea-man for a subdivision project which will rehouse all 122 residents of the reserve.

Complete with bay windows, indoor plumbing, furnace heating and a sewer system, it is the first self-help project of its kind in B.C.

The 12-home community is more than just "new houses for old".

★

"Not only are our houses bad," said Chief Williams, a burly 42-year-old who is also a well-known local sportsman, "but their arrangement isn't sensible either."

The chief said that with houses all over the 600-acre property, adequate fire protection, paved access roads, sewers and even good community relations aren't feasible.

The new development brings the band closer together.

Two of the houses in the development — he jokingly calls it "Bow 'n' Arrow Boulevard" — are already finished and a third is all but completed.

Foundations for three more will be dug next month.

The houses will lie along one paved street, each on a 100 by 100 foot lot. All are built to NHA standards. All will have at least two bedrooms and indoor plumbing (only two of the 16 homes on the reserve have bathrooms).

The houses and related services are being financed by band funds and an appropriation from the federal department of Indian Affairs.

Individual tenants can pay off their share on a band mortgage scheme, also a "first" for Indian reserves.

★

"This is the first development of its kind in B.C. as far as I know, "says Indian Affairs officer Noel Bayliss.

"Other bands up-island have similar ambitions but they haven't broken ground yet," he said.

Mr. Bayliss said the whole concept — the subdivision idea; the financing, and the internal impetus — is "revolutionary".

"Don deserves great credit for this," said Mr. Bayliss. "He came up with the facts and figures and justified the need to the authorities."

Chief Williams is thinking beyond the rehousing scheme to more fundamental problems of Cole Bay.

The Capital Region Planning Board has been called in as a consultant on other economic problems of the reserve.

And Chief Williams has turned consultant himself. He is investigating development possibilites at Hatch Point reserve near Mill Bay and at another reserve on the peninsula.

Construction at Cole Bay — Eddie Paul was successful bidder on the building contract — began last year.

"It should be done, asphalt road and all, in a year or so," says Chief Williams.

"And then you'll have some real 'before and after' pictures to

New Building Changes Old Village Vista

New construction in Oak Bay "village" shopping area alone could reach the quarter million mark this year.

Permits already have been taken out for $72,500 in construction and there's a possibility that another $175,000 permit will be sought this summer.

The addition of another 20 feet to the width of the Shop-Easy, next door to the municipal hall, involves a permit for $59,000 and alterations to a Hampshire Road house to convert it into a beauty parlor calls for a $13,500 permit.

Oak Bay Realty has purchased what is now the Greater Victoria Nursery School at the corner of Oak Bay Avenue and Yale. When the school is vacated in June, the realty firm will take possession and start work on plans for an office building.

"We are thinking about a medical-dental building," said Don Whyte, partner in the realty firm. "We haven't decided if it will be a one-storey building or three storeys with suites upstairs."

DECISION PENDING

If three storeys are built, said Mr. Whyte, then the cost could be as much as $175,000.

Shop-Easy not long ago purchased the Tyler property adjoining the store on Hampshire. The house has been demolished and the lot cleared.

Under present plans it will provide parking space, more than enough to compensate for that lost in the building's expansion. Work on enlarging the store should be completed next month.

Jerry Olynyk, a hairdresser who for the past two years has operated Jerome's Rentals in Victoria, is returning to his original calling.

He has purchased the Brimblecombe porperty on Hampshire, opposite the Shop-Easy lot and is now converting the house into a hairdressing salon.

Another piece of property in the village was destined for office space.

Arthur Haynes Ltd. found a client for the Hayward property at the corner of Yale and Oak Bay Avenue with the intention of erecting six or eight offices.

But Oak Bay building restriction made such a plan impossible and there is not sufficient land for an office building. The property is again for sale.

Oak Bay has setback regulations which have made several plans for apartments or commercial buildings impractical.

'Pure' LSD Defended By Doctor

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP)—The international association of psychodelytic therapy said Monday the hallucinatory drug LSD used in illicit experiments is a dangerous imitation of the drug used in medical research and therapy.

In a statement signed by Dr. J. R. MacLean, president and medical director of Hollywood Hospital here, the association said some well-intentioned persons were creating "near hysteria" by confusing the two.

Hollywood Hospital pioneered the use of LSD in treatment of psychiatric cases in Canada.

The association said the therapy drug Lysergic Acid Diethylamide 25 is neither addictive, physically harmful, nor does it cause brain damage or death.

"In the case of crude approximations of LSD, the hazards are innumerable and must not be minimized," said the statement.

Dr. A. M. Johnson, president of the British Columbia Medical Association, described illicit LSD as a "no-man's land."

"No one knows if the drug is pure or not," he said.

"The present legislative trend won't achieve its aim," he said. "But it will help some. People won't tamper with LSD when they know it is a criminal offence."

HORMONE STUDIES WORTH PRIZE

VANCOUVER (CP)—A 19-year-old Burns Lake girl whose mother lets her keep 30 mice in the basement in the name of science won the grand prize Monday at the ninth annual British Columbia Youth Science Fair.

Heather McCormick's exhibit, entitled The Effects of Estrogen on Mice, investigated the effects of the sex hormone, estrogen on mice over a six-week period. The hormone stimulates the development of secondary female sex characteristics.

The exhibit won Miss McCormick an all-expense paid trip to Laval University in Montreal for the National Science Fair in May.

Naked Ghost Obviously Female With Silly Little Hat Like That

By EDDY GILMORE

LONDON (AP) — Walking down the corridor of ancient Woburn Abbey, the pretty daughter-in-law of the Duchess of Bedford was sure she saw a ghost.

Except for a white hat with ears that stuck up like a rabbit's, the ghost was nude. It suddenly yelled: "Fire!"

Fernanda Milinaire, the 22-year-old wife of the duchess' son, screamed and fled in the opposite direction.

Hearing the commotion early Monday morning, the duchess jumped out of her bath, threw on a dressing gown and hurried out. The duke rushed from another direction.

They were just in time to glimpse the nude figure with the funny hat still yelling "fire!"

When everything got sorted out, the household found out what had happened.

Caroline de Cardenal, who works at the abbey, sighted a fire in the south stable block of the duke's ancestral home about 40 miles north of London. She grabbed the house telephone and in her excitement pushed the first convenient button.

Mrs. Marie Terese Gallot, 46, a French cousin of the duchess, took the call as she was in her bath.

"When I was told there was a fire I was terrified," she said. "My home burned down last year and I jumped out of the bath to warn the duke and duchess.

"I wrapped a towel around myself and rushed down the corridor. The towel dropped but I kept on running. I'm afraid that's the way poor Fernanda saw me. My funny hat was a plastic cap to keep one's hair dry when bathing.

"She was carrying some magazines and leading a dog. She let out the most terrifying scream I ever heard."

The fire, a small one, was extinguished.

BUT PAPAL ENCYCLICAL CAUTIOUS

By BENNETT BOLTON

VATICAN CITY (AP)—Pope Paul gave a carefully qualified endorsement today to government action to control population but did not indicate any relaxation in the Roman Catholic Church's opposition to artificial means of birth control.

In the fifth encyclical of his reign, the Pope made clear that the "rightful freedom" of married couples who are opposed to artificial means of contraception, for moral reasons or under the guidance of their bishops, must be respected.

Vatican sources said however, the new attitude was likely to clear the way for government laws to make birth control information available to the public in places where Catholic pressure has opposed this in the past.

Some sources said it might even end organized Catholic opposition to government laws permitting distribution of contraceptive pills in welfare and public aid programs.

CITES SOCIAL PROBLEMS

The encyclical deals with the world's social problems. In the section on population growth, the pontiff declared that "the temptation is great to check the demographic population increase by radical measures." He added:

"Public authorities can intervene, within the limit of their competence, by favoring the availability of appropriate information and by adopting suitable measures, provided that these be in conformity with the moral law and that they respect the rightful freedom of married couples."

The encyclical, which appealed for social and economic justice, also said that unlimited capitalism is a "woeful system." It endorsed the redistribution among the poor of large estates which are "unused or poorly 'used' and criticized wealthy tax dodgers who transfer income abroad to escape obligations to aid the welfare of their countries.

The encyclical was entitled Populorum Progresio — on the development of Peoples—from its first words. It dealt with material things of the world rather than with religious or spiritual themes. The document bore the date of last Sunday, Easter, March 26.

The section of demography conceded that "too frequently an accelerated demographic increase adds its own difficulties to the problems of development: The size of the population increases more rapidly than available resources, and things are found to have apparently reached an impasse." But the pope returned to the church's trditional stand on birth control, stating:

"Finally, it is for the parents to decide, with full knowledge of the matter, on the number of their children, taking into account their responsibilities toward God, themselves, the chil-

Thant Truce Plan Accepted by U.S.

Geneva Talks Sought

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The United States disclosed today it has accepted U Thant's latest Vietnam peace proposals calling for a general truce. It said it is prepared to begin discussions immediately to work out details.

The U.S. reply to the proposals of the United Nations Secretary - General was made public shortly after Thant unveiled his plan at a press conference.

The Thant plan envisages a ceasefire to be followed by preliminary talks aimed at convening a new Geneva peace conference.

Thant said he had sent his proposals March 14 to all the parties directly concerned and that some had replied. He said he does not consider any of the answers as a categorical rejection.

WANTS NEGOTIATIONS

The U.S. reply said:

"The United States accepts the three-point proposal in the aide-memoire of the secretary-general of 14 March 1967. . . .

"The United States believes it would be desirable and contributory to serious negotiations if an effective cessation of hostilities, as the first element in the three-point proposal, could be promptly negotiated.

"It would, therefore, be essential that the details of such a general cessation of hostilities be discussed directly by both sides or through the secretary-general, the Geneva conference co-chairmen or otherwise as may be agreed.

"The United States is prepared to enter into such discussions immediately and constructively."

INVOLVES VIETNAM

The U.S. note said it was assumed that the government of South Vietnam would be "appropriately involved throughout the entire process."

The secretary - general expressed concern over what he called the recent escalation of the fighting and expressed fears that the Vietnam conflict might spread unless checked.

Thant disclosed that he had presented his proposals orally to a North Vietnamese delegation on his recent visit to Burma and that he had later sent the plan in a memorandum to other interested countries.

Wrecked Tanker Bombed

RN, RAF Attempts Futile Against Oil

LAND'S END, England (AP) British bombers set the shattered tanker Torrey Canyon and the sea around it ablaze today in an effort to destroy spreading oil, but within two hours the fire went out.

More Royal Navy and RAF planes were immediately prepared for a fresh attempt to prevent the spread of oil from the giant freighter's cargo, which had already polluted 120 miles of England's southwest coastline.

First Royal Navy planes blasted the tanker with 1,000-pound bombs. Then RAF planes moved in with napalm in an attempt to keep the oil which seeped out of the bomb-shattered tanker burning.

Little of the tanker remained above water after the navy planes dropped their loads.

The decision to bomb what was left of the Torrey Canyon came on the same day that the Dutch salvage company, which had tried for days to liberate the ship from the rocks, announced its four tugs had been withdrawn.

How the bombing would help stop the seepage of oil toward the southwestern English coast was not made clear.

EXPERIMENT FAILS

The bombing followed a fruitless experiment designed to set the giant oil slick afire by shooting incendiary "bricks" into the area from an electric gun aboard a helicopter 50 feet up. The devices functioned but didn't ignite the oil.

Twin-jets Buccaneer aircraft, normally equipped with missiles and rockets, reverted to conventional bombs and moved on to the wrecked tanker, stuck on the Seven Stones Reef for the last 11 days, to complete the job the jagged rocks, the seas and storms had started.

They were ordered to deliver the coup de grace by the defence ministry after earlier attempts to set alight the giant oil slick from the Torrey Canyon appeared ineffective.

Moments after the Buccaneers dumped their loads on the Seven Stones — graveyard of every ship that ever got stuck on this reef — results were clearly apparent.

FLAMES SHOOT UP

The tanker, broken by the seas in three parts, burst into a mass of flames. Smoke rose 2,000 feet in the air.

Maritime experts predicted that the disaster, which threatens to pollute south Britain's holiday beaches for years to come, will force a drastic revision of British maritime law.

The dark scum coated 120 miles off England's most prosperous vacation coast, and the government set up emergency oil-fighting committees as the ooze spread up the Channel. But Navy Minister Maurice Foley, directing operations from Plymouth, said:

"Given the extra oil now flowinto off Cornwall, all the extra men and equipment in the world could not deal with this problem."

On shore, 1,500 troops and 1,000 firemen tried to remove oil advancing over the sands. Fire trucks hosed down the beaches after troops attacked the scum with scrapers and detergents.

SOCIAL CREDIT

Gaglardi Says Leadership Not for Him

Highways Minister P. A. Gaglardi denied today that he had ever expressed an interest in the leadership of the National Social Credit party.

He made the statement in answer to comments passed by Walter Bowden, director of the Manitoba Social Credit League in Winnipeg.

Mr. Bowden is quoted as saying that Mr. Gaglardi had informed him some time ago that he would be interested in the party leadership but not if it involved running against Robert Thompson.

Mr. Thompson resigned from the leadership two weeks ago.

Mr. Bowden said he was surprised that it was taking so long for Mr. Gaglardi to state his views.

MISQUOTED?

"I have not knowledge of ever making such a statement," Mr. Gaglardi said this morning. "And I have no further comment."

Earlier Mr. Gaglardi had expressed surprise that the Manitoba Social Crediters had gone on record as fully supporting him in any campaign for party leadership.

"I have been hearing noises about this for the last couple of months," he said. "They have come from various directions. I have no further knowledge of this and I have no further comment."

Asked whether he would consider the party leadership the usually vociferous minister again declined comment.

The Manitoba group is calling for a leadership convention in Winnipeg in October and has pledged its full support to Mr. Gaglardi if he decides to seek the office.

Governor-General's Naming 'Next Week'

OTTAWA (CP)—Prime Minister Pearson indicated today that it will be next week at the earliest before the name of Canada's new governor - general is announced.

He told a news conference he expects simultaneous announcements will be made in London and Ottawa of the successor to Gen. Georges P. Vanier who died three weeks ago.

Mr. Pearson sat reporters around the huge oval cabinet table following a cabinet executive meeting and said he will have announcements next week of significance. He declined to indicate their nature.

He was asked about possible cabinet changes and replied:

"I didn't mention cabinet changes."

He also said it would be "quite improper" at this time for him to discuss in public a successor to Governor - General Vanier.

The prime minister said he expects dates will be set soon for the visits of President Johnson and President de Gaulle to Expo 67. Normally they would first come to Ottawa before touring the world's fair site in Montreal.

With Parliament resuming April 3, he said, items that the government wants dealt with include the bill to unify the three armed forces into a single service, a report on Commons rules, and temporary spending authority for one month of the fiscal year which begins April 1.

Teachers to Walk Out Of Oversize Classes

British Columbia teachers voted Monday to walk out of any classroom in September which has more than 40 students.

There are 28 classes of 40 or more students in Greater Victoria at present.

More than 1,000 delegates to the B.C. Teachers' Federation convention in Vancouver unanimously approved the walkout action to culminate their campaign for smaller classes.

But Joseph Chell, Greater Victoria school superintendent, said class isze is, to some extent, a matter of school organization.

He said that in the area the ratio of teachers to students is approximately one to 35 in elementary schools and one to 24 in senior schools.

However, some principals group students into larger groups for certain kinds of instruction.

SITUATION IN DOUBT

Mr. Chell said there is no way of knowing now what the situation will be this fall. However, he added, "While it is up to principals to organize classes in their schools we will want to know the reason for any large classes."

Mr. Chell said he preferred not to comment on the teacher's decision to walk out of the larger classes.

The teachers' convention decided thatr esponsibility for the walkout should rest with the federation or the local teachers' association, not the individual teacher.

They also voted in favor of "moral and financial support

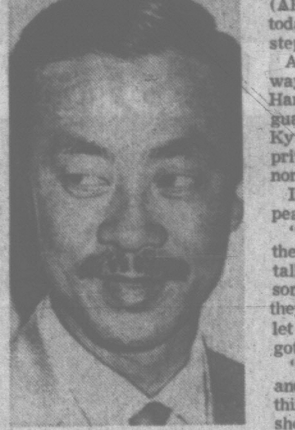
'Leave Talks to Us' Premier Ky Proposes



KY

GIO LINH, South Vietnam (AP)—Premier Nguyen Cao Ky today offered his own three-step plan for peace in Vietnam.

A complete ceasefire, two-way talks between Saigon and Hanoi and an international guarantee might achieve peace, Ky told reporters aboard his private plane on a flight to the northern sector.

In answer to questions about peace feelers, Ky said:

"We are always hearing that the United States is starting talks with Moscow or Hanoi or somebody. Why? Why don't they stay in the background and let us deal with Hanoi and negotiate when the time is right?

"Too many points of view and proposals are confusing things. South and North alone should talk on the thing they know best—Vietnam."

'All CCF Should Quit'

REGINA (CP)—Former CCF cabinet ministers and MLAs were accused in the legislature today of diverting $500,000 in public funds to their party through a party-owned publishing company.

In making the charge, A. R. Guy (L—Athabaska) called for resignation of the entire CCF opposition.

His statements and the following heated debate came after discussion of a motion for return by a Liberal member seeking value of contracts for printing, if any, let to Service Printing Co. of the CCF by the Queen's Printer during the last four years of CCF rule.

Greece Expels Russ Diplomats in Spy Hunt

ATHENS (AP) — Two Soviet diplomats have been ordered to leave Greece by Wednesday night, apparently because they were involved with an alleged Soviet ring spying on North Atlantic Treaty Organization bases in the Mediterranean area.

The foreign ministry issued expulsion orders for Albert Zaharov, second secretary in the Soviet embassy, and Igor Ochurkov, a member of the Soviet commercial delegation. The foreign ministry said incriminating evidence had been compiled against them concerning acitvities incompatible with their status.

Unofficial sources believe the pair was part of the spy ring disclosed last week with the arrest of three Italians. Since then, one Soviet diplomat has hurriedly left Italy, two Russians have been expelled from Cyprus, several civilians have been arrested in Cyprus, and Swiss police said arrests may be made there.

The three Italians, charged Wednesday in Turin with espionage for the Soviet Union, are Giorgio Rinaldi, 39, an exhibition parachutist; his wife, Angela Maria, 52, and their chauffeur, Armando Girard, 40.

Reports circulated in Turin Monday that the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency wanted to talk to six American parachutists who knew Rinaldi and participated with him and an Italian group of chutists in a mass jump at Stuttgart, West Germany, in September, 1962.

The Americans were not identified, but the CIA was said to be interested in the contacts they had with Rinaldi.

NEW YORK—Barry Goldwater says he favors Richard Nixon as the Republican presidential candidate in 1968 but believes Sen. Charles Percy (R.-Ill.) is the only potential candidate acceptable to a majority of the GOP.

"Everybody says Nixon is the best-trained man for the job," said Goldwater, the 1964 GOP presidential candidate. "And then everybody turns right around and says he can't be elected. I don't believe that's true, but I don't see how to tear that image down."

PERCY

As for Percy, Goldwater said he "might be the most dangerous against (President) Johnson, provided he could show he was really knowledgeable about foreign policy."

Goldwater said former Vice-President Nixon would go to the 1968 Republican convention with the most delegate strength but not a majority.

As for Gov. George Romney of Michigan, Goldwater said he was "handsome and a nice guy, but he just hasn't caught on."

LOS ANGELES — Film actress Jayne Mansfield, claiming her estranged husband Matt Cimber struck and bit her, filed a $345,000 assault and battery suit against him Monday.

The entertainer said Cimber, whose real name is Thomas Vitale Ottaviano, assaulted her four times last April, using his "fists and mouth."

She said she was unable to work after Cimber allegedly "kicked and stomped" and hit her "about the face and body in a fit of rage."

12 Firemen Limit for '67 Council Told

An extra 12 fire-fighters should be hired by Saanich this year, fire committee chairman Coun. Alan Newberry said today.

This would bring the department's strength to 68 men.

"I still think in one year to bring 12 men on is sufficient," he said.

Last year, an official of the provincial fire marshal's office recommended, after a survey, that 78 new men be hired — more than doubling the present 56-man staff.

This ran into a cool reception from council. One councillor said the report should be consigned to the waste basket.

Last September, fire chief Joseph Sutherland recommended 24 men be added to the department.

COMPROMISE

"It is the old story of compromise between the ideal and the practical," said Coun. Newberry.

"I will recommend 12."

He said a fire committee recommendation for hiring a training officer will come before council Monday night.

The proposal ran into opposition from three councillors earlier and was tabled.

Coun. Newberry said once that is decided, it "leaves us clear" to discuss manpower at Tuesday night's fire committee meeting.

Council will go through the provisional budget some time next month.

Last year, the fire department cost $443,755.

This year's provisional budget estimated the cost of fire protection at $588,455.

This allowed for the hiring of 24 new men for a full year, but it was emphasized at the time that no decision had been made by council and the addition was based on Chief Sutherland's report.

SHIP FIXES ENGINES; CITY TUG TURNS BACK

The Island Tug & Barge rescue tug Sudbury II turned for home again Monday when her mission was reported a false alarm.

The deep-sea tug was on her way to rescue a 10,000-ton Formosan freighter, Hai Ping, out of operation 2,500 miles in the Pacific with boiler trouble.

The freighter radioed she was under way again and the Sudbury was recalled.

She was to have reached the freighter, which was bound for Houston, by Sunday next.

Guerrilla War Opens In Bolivia Badlands

LA PAZ, Bolivia (AP)—President Rene Barrientos decreed a state of emergency Monday in the Bolivian southeast and announced the governments determination to crush a guerrilla movement.

He announced the air force was using napalm in attacks on the guerrillas.

Barrientos told reporters the Bolivian territory has been invaded by insurgents of various nationalities, mostly of Castro-Communist inspiration.

Barrientos said the air force is using napalm bombs and carried out raids Monday and Sunday. He added that 39 persons were jailed during the weekend and then sent into the interior of the country.

Gen. Jorge Belmonte Ardiles, temporary commander in chief of the armed forces, said he has information that Ernesto Che Guevara, Cuban Communist who dropped out of sight two years ago, has some connection with the Bolivian guerrilla movement.

Mines Must Increase Efficiency

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada's mining industry must strive for greater efficiency to maintain and increase its world-wide markets, the Canadian Institute of Mining and Metallurgy was told today.

Pierre Camu, president of the St. Lawrence Seaway Authority, said transportation "at the lowest possible cost" is critical in efficiency, especially for producers of raw materials.

"The saving of a few cents per ton can open new markets, revitalize industries and strengthen competitive positions of consumers dependent on the raw material involved," he told a luncheon at the institute's annual meeting.

Developments of Labrador's iron ore was a prime example. If the seaway had not opened in 1959 to provide low-cost water transportation, "it is doubtful that these ore bodies could have been developed to their scale."

But there also is a need for greater participation of Canadians in "financing and management of this country's mining operations" and "a greater degree of secondary and tertiary processing in Canada, with a consequent need for new export markets."

FUTURE SHOPPERS

Computer Will Pay Your Bill

WASHINGTON (AP)—In the not too distant future, you'll walk into a supermarket, buy the week's groceries and order a computer to pay the bill without one penny or even a cheque changing hands.

That's the forecast of George W. Mitchell, a member of the U.S. Federal Reserve Board, in what he and the banking community term a "chequeless society."

"It's coming very, very hard," Mitchell said in an interview.

"By the early 1970s, the system might be set up. When people find out it's easier and more convenient to do business this way they'll take to the change."

Mitchell said computers will make the new system possible but won't eliminate coins, dollar bills or some cheques. But he and others foresee the "cash card" as the main money instrument of the future.

Mitchell said it will have one excellent side effect—eliminating cheques which might bounce.

Who's Who, What's What In New Orleans Line-Up

NEW ORLEANS (UPI)—District Attorney Jim Garrison's investigation of the Kennedy assassination has bloomed into a national jungle of leads, charges, counter-charges and rumors.

One significant development has occurred since Garrison announced last month he had solved the assassination and would arrest everyone connected with it.

Three district judges, after a four-day hearing, decided the New Orleans prosecutor had enough evidence to hold businessman Clay L. Shaw, whom Garrison accuses of plotting the assassination.

Since Shw-s March 14-17 preliminary hearing, most of the debate has centred around the testimony of Garrison's star witness, Perry R. Russo.

Russo, a 25-year-old Baton Rouge, La., insurance man, testified that Shaw, presidential assassin Lee Harvey Oswald and pilot David W. Ferrie conspired to kill the president in September, 1963.

Subsequently:

—Raymon Cummings, a Dallas taxi driver, said he took Oswald, Ferrie and an "older man" to Jack Ruby's Dallas night club in 1963.

—Dean Andrews, an attorney who once gave Oswald legal advice in New Orleans, was indicted for perjury by a grand jury. Andrews said a man named Clay Bertrand—the name Garrison charges Shaw used as an alias—tried to get him to defend Oswald the day after the assassination.

—Gordon Novel, a witness subpoenaed by Garrision sold his New Orleans lounge, left town, and has not returned, despite a court order to come back as a "material witness" or be arrested. Novel showed up in various locations, announced Garrison's probe was a "fraud" and challenged the district attorney to take a lie detector test.

—Sandra Moffit, the girl Russo said he accompanied to a September, 1963, party in Ferrie's apartment at which the assassination was discussed, said in Omaha, Neb., she did not attend. She also said she never heard of Ferrie until 1965. Garrison obtained a court order for her arrest as a material witness.

—Layton Martens, a former roommate of Ferrie's, said Ferrie did not know either Oswald or Shaw. Martens has been subpoenaed to appear before the grand jury Wednesday.

A Boston dishwasher, Arthur E. Strout, said he was flying to New Orleans with important evidence to Garrison, reportedly a picture of the conspirators in Ruby's nightclub. Not much has been heard from Strout since then.

—David R. Kroman, an attorney on trial in a $3 million insurance fraud case, told a judge in Bismark, N.D., he was forced off a highway as he drove to Bismarck with documents proving Oswald did not kill Kennedy after all. The judge ordered a mental examination for him.

The Pope said speed is necessary to bring balance between the world's rich and poor, although he warned against revolution. Instead he proposed:

1. "A great world fund, to be made up of part of the money spent on arms, to relieve the most destitute of this world."

2. A careful study of reorganization of various aid programs to keep them from being "scattered or isolated."

3. Higher taxes on the rich to meet the cost of aid, and higher prices on imported goods.

4 A revision of interest rates and systems of loan repayment "so as not to be too great a burden on either party."

5. Establishment of price regulations, production guarantees, support for new industries and controls upon world trade "without abolishing the competitive market."

Les Issacson, principal of Macaulay elementary school in Esquimalt and chairman of a federation committee on effective teaching and learning conditions, said 411 of the 8,032 B.C. classes—five per cent—now have 40 or more students.

Mr. Isaacson said this was an improvement from last year when seven per cent, or 509 classes, were overpopulated. Meanwhile, he said, there were 5,222 clasees of 35 or fewer students this year, compared with 4,211 in 1966.

"The class size is steadily dropping," he said. "Our campaign is evidently bearing some fruit."

A motion from the floor proposing a limit of 30 pupils in "split classrooms" containing more than one grade, was defeated.

'TOO TRADITIONAL'

Robald Brown, principal of a West Vancouver elementary school, said this limit couldn't be reconciled with the trend toward gradeless schools.

James Balderson, a teacher from Alberni, said large classrooms were turning teachers into highly paid baby-sitters.

"I am a teacher," said Mr. Balderson. "I don't want to be a highly paid baby-sitter. Are qe going to be teachers or just tranquilizers for large classes of pupils in our care?"

Today's session of the three-day convention will debate resolutions from the Surrey and Abbotsford teachers' associations in support of strike action as "a means of implementing demands."

Attempts to burn the oil off the beaches failed.

The escaping crude dashed hopes of hotel - owners looking forward to a record tourist season and threatened to ruin fishing, Cornwall's other principal source of income.

The Torrey Canyon, owned by a subsidiary of Union Oil of California and flying the Liberian flag, broke up Sunday night as Dutch tugs were trying to pull her from the reef where she ran aground 11 days ago. The ship, insured for $16,500,000, was declared beyond salvage, making it the costliest marine wreck on record.

WEATHER SYNOPSIS

Skies over B.C. were generally cloudy early this morning with widely scattered showers along the coast and a few snow flurries in the Kootenay district. Minimum temperatures ranged from a chilly 13 at Smithers to 42 at Victoria.

Showers of rain or wet snow will persist in coastal areas today behind a Pacific disturbance which crossed the lower mainland early this morning. A clearing trend will develop along the coast this afternoon and evening, however, as a ridge of high pressure builds offshore. Mainly sunny weather is expected in most sections on Wednesday but temperatures will remain cool.

TODAY'S GRAIN PRICES

WINNIPEG (CP)—Most prices held to a narrow range and showed underlying firmness in light trade today on the Winnipeg Grain Exchange.

The Winnipeg market got some stimulation from the steady appearance in the Chicago market which is still being influenced by the dry conditions in U.S. winter wheat areas.

Oilseeds disclosed a modest overseas support but no immdeiate reports were received of export business. Flax reflected relative steady linseed oil prices on the continent.

Mdest trade proceeded in feed grains with oats being taken for domesic uses. About 500 tons of barley was reported sold to Britain.

Lakehead prices for Class Two, IWA and Domestic wheat were all up ⅛.

$16 Million Deal For New York Hotel

NEW YORK (AP)—The Carlyle Hotel, whose guests include presidents, prime ministers and princes, is being sold for a reported $16,000,000.

The 35-storey hotel at 76th Street and Madison Avenue is being sold by the City Investing Co. to Peter J. Sharp, a real estate executive.

Most of the hotel's more than 500 rooms now are occupied as residential apartments at rents ranging from $10,000 to $65,000 a year.

Company Drops Cash Dividend

TORONTO (CP) — Exquisite Form Brassiere Canada Ltd. has announced it is dropping its cash dividend on common shares to conserve funds for general corporate purposes.

The company paid 17½ cents quarterly in 1966.

In the first quarter of this year the company paid a special stock dividend equal to one common share for each 20 shares held.

MARKET SUMMARIES

Bank Issues Hold Gains

Bank stocks continued to hold gains on the Toronto stock market today, resulting from news that the aBnk of Montreal will cut its prime lending rate and increase its interest on savings accounts.

However, most of the other major banks said they are not going to follow the move because it was "not justified at this time."

Imperial Commerce was up 1 to 72, Monteral and Royal ½ each to 67¼ and 81½ and Toronto-Dominion ¼ to 68¼.

Among other industrials Moore Corp. rose 2 to a high of 103 and Trans-Canada Pipe Lines ⅝ to 28. Quebec Natural Gas was off ¼ to 10⅞.

Western oils continued to rise after being stalled in profit taking Monday.

Canadian superior added 1½ at 35½, Dome ¾ at 55¾ and Provo 20 cents at 5.85.

PCE Explorations gained 5 to 81 cents in speculative mines.

AT NEW YORK the market remained mostly higher in active trading.

Eastern Air Lines held a gain of three points or so while Pan American was the most heavily traded of the airlines, keeping a fractional gain.

Up a point or so were Outboard Marine, Federal Pacific Electric, Jones and Laughlin, International Nickel, Du Pont, Eastman Kodak and Xerox.

Down a point or so were Ford Motor, United Aircraft and General Foods.

AT MONTREAL the banking section, paced by the Bank of Montreal, posted its best gain in several weks.

Bank of Montreal rose one point to a new 1967 high of 67¾ as 1,788 shares changed hands.

Imperial Commerce was up 1¾ points at 72½ but only 584 shares were traded. Toronto-Dominion rose ⅞ to 68½, and Royal ¾ to 81½.

AT LONDON interest in equities was selective today. The over-all tone was steady, helped by sterling's firmness and cuts in U.S. prime rates.

Trans-Canada Pipe Lines was soft. Hudson's Bay Oil and Gas was a strong features. Others with useful gains included International Nickel, Consolidated Mining and Noranda. New York Central was 10 points lower, reflecting the fall in the shares in New York.

AT VANCOUVER Arctic gained .17 to 1.17 on the mining section shortly before non today.

Brenda put on .15 to 7.00 and Buttle Lake was up .04 to .48.

Consolidated Skeena lost .07 to .60 and Silver Titan went down the same amount to 1.38.

In the oils, Bata increased .01 to 2.75.

U.K. Holdings Reshuffled By Weston

LONDON (CP)—Canadian industrialist Garfield Weston appears to be engaged in a major reshuffle of his British holdings, giving his Canadian subsidiaries a bigger stake in his vast British investments.

In the latest move, Associated British Foods, of which the Toronto-born multi-millionaire is chairman, announced Monday night it would sell its northwestern grocery chain operated by Thomas Scott and Sons, bakers, to another Weston company, Fine Fare Holdings Ltd., for at least $9,000,000.

A spokesman said this operation will continue the process of separating Weston retailing companies from his manufacturing companies.

Fine Fare is controlled by Dicola Ltd., of Toronto.

Two other grocery chains, Cooper Stores and Hudson Brothers, also were recently transferred from Associated British Foods to Fine Fare for some $5,000,000.

The Scott company controls about 250 food branches, with 53 supermarkets, concentrated around Manchester, Liverpool and northwest Wales.

Record Earnings By Wespac

VANCOUVER (CP)—Western Pacific Products and Crude Oil Pipe Lines Ltd., has reported revenues and earnings for the 1966 fiscal year.

R. B. Stewart, Wespac president, said operating revenues increased 25.7 per cent to $8,587,946, while net earnings after full provision for income taxes rose to $2,782,917 or 41.5 cents per share. This, said Mr. Stewart, represented a 55 per cent increase over the $1,791,464 or 26 cents per share profit figure in 1965.

The company's volume of crude oil and natural gas delivered through its pipeline between Taylor and Kamloops averaged 41,636 barrels daily, a 27.4 per cent increase over 1965 volume.

Mr. Stewart said development programs in B.C. oilfields are expected to increase oil production by 10,000 barrels daily by the middle of this year.

Victoria Daily Times
VICTORIA, B.C., TUESDAY, MARCH 28, 1967—PAGE 17

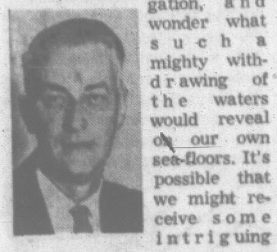
Earth's restless oceans never hold a point of balance for long. There is the ebb, which yesterday at St. Malo bared more of the Channel floor than French or English eyes have gazed on since the time of the first Napoleon. Next comes slack water, an uneasy truce that serves only to tantalize archaeologist, booty-hunter and casual viewer. Then the turn of the tide and the mounting flood, to send all scampering.



We can only hope the more interesting finds were buoyed for future underwater investigation, and wonder what such a mighty withdrawing of the waters would reveal on our own sea-floors. It's possible that we might receive some intriguing surprises.

While there's no record of early crossings by water from Asia, these shores may well have been visited. The Chinese had, and for that matter still have, sea-going junks capable of such a voyage.

Several of those ageless vessels have crossed the Pacific in recent years. Magnify the perfect little Maritime Museum model—apply a breath of imagination—and it's easy enough to visualize a junk of an earlier day staggering in to lay her bones on our watery doorstep.

For the rest, and not to speculate, there would be towboats and fishboats overwhelmed in half-forgotten gales, and up Salt Spring way, the torn iron of the barque, 'Panther.'

Over toward the American Islands, among the weedy rocks and sea-pools with their surprised fish, the searcher might even find our nearest approach to the wine-filled amphorae of ancient Mediterranean wrecks. During Prohibition years, many a hard-pressed rum-runner hove many a sack of good Canadian liquor overside to become a trove of doubtful virtue for the finder.

★

It is as well that we are dealing with improbables, since the sun-moon pendulum of the tide swings inward as well as outward, and we like to keep our basements dry.

Anyway, our West Coast tides can be spectacular enough, especially where their passage is blocked and confined.

Witness Seymour Narrows, a shipway that demands canny navigating even though its once-notorious Ripple Rock is no longer a menace. This is but one of many treacherous passes through which our North Pacific tides crowd their way.

Slingsby Channel, north up the coast, is a funnel mouth for one of the worst of these tidal rapids. It is called the Nakwakta, and many a tall tale centers upon it. The rock that rears from its mad flow is reputed to shake when the current is in full race. Its slack water period lasts only for about six minutes. Then the current, reversed, begins to gather its headlong strength again.

★

For my own purposes, I prefer gentler tides, the sort that go out and come in at a saunter rather than a gallop. We have bays in plenty where extensive flats are bared by such easy tides as these, and where anyone willing to tramp out from the foreshore can gather the makings of a seafood dinner.

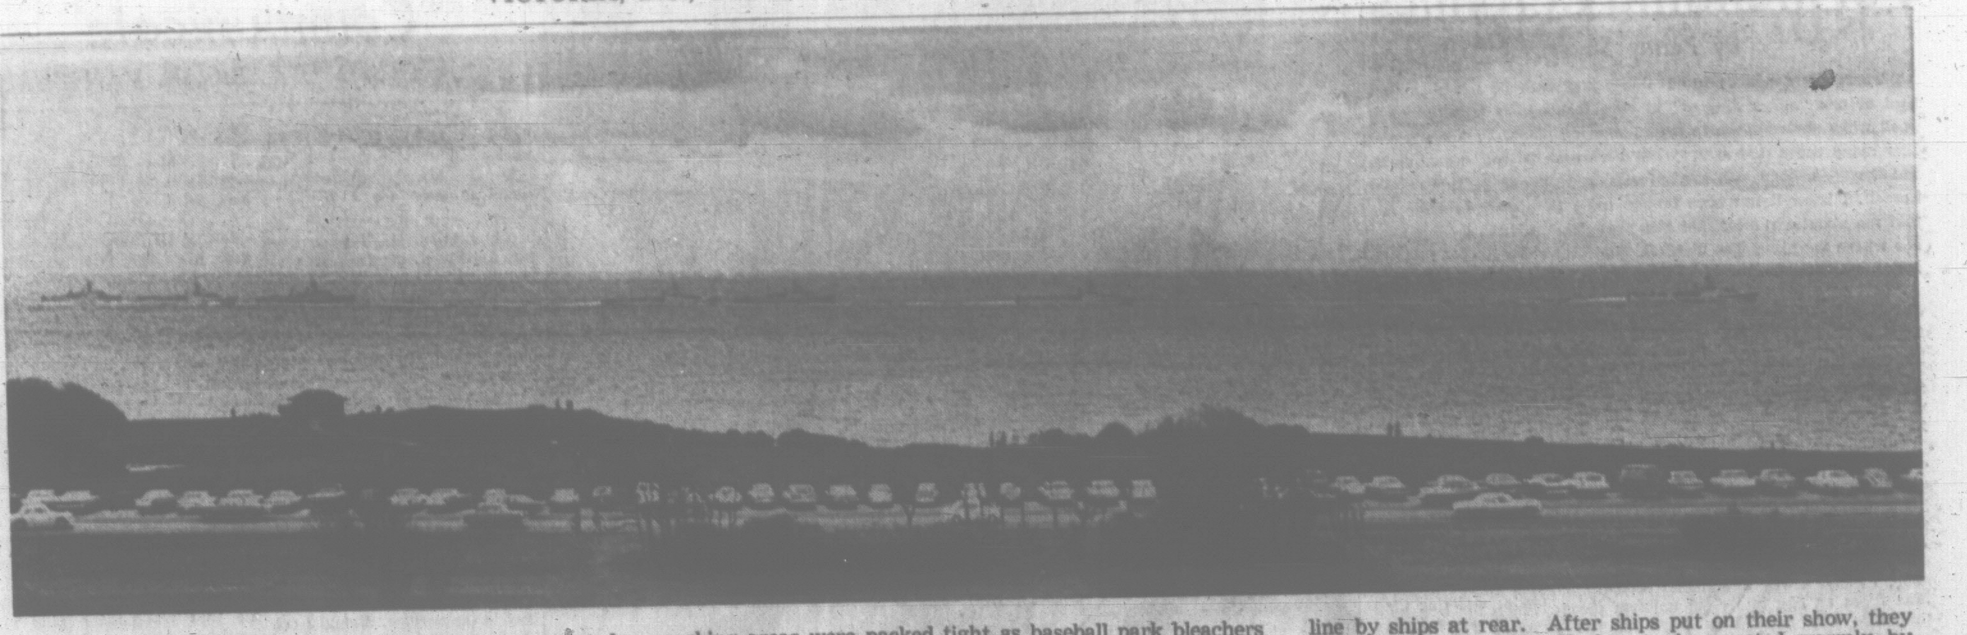
On rare occasions, when the ebb is extremely low, a goey-duck bar may be revealed.

The goey-duck is no tall tale, but a prehistoric-seeming clam of massive proportions. It has a neck like a section of garden hose, and its digging powers must be tested to be believed.

Give it a fair start—or even an unfair one—and the goey duck turns itself into a hydraulic dredge. It can delve so fast that the weak or languid spader has no chance to catch it, and it is as often lost as fetched from its watery shaft.

But the smaller, easier come by clams of the long grey flats suit my taste better. The tide has no tastier gift than these.

You dig or you gather until a lip of foam at the sea's edge gives warning. The tide has turned, and it's time to get out of there.



FORMATION FOXTROT was one of manoeuvres executed by seven Pacific Command destroyer-escorts off Victoria shoreline shortly after 10:30 this morning. Dallas Road parking areas were packed tight as baseball park bleachers for sail-past. "Foxtrot", most spectacular of several marine choreographic exercises, is replacement of ships at head of line by ships at rear. After ships put on their show, they headed into Esquimalt Harbor to be greeted warmly by families of crew members. (Times photo by Bill Halkett.)

Home Is Where The Sailor Is After War Games

By TED GASKELL

"All hands to stations for entering harbor."

A cheer from the men answered the message which came over the HMCS Saskatchewan's intercom at 10.40 a.m. today as the ship pointed her sleek bow to the dock at Esquimalt. Hundreds of wives children and sweethearts awaited the return of their menfolk after three months of war games.

LINE OF SEVEN

The ship led a line of seven into Esquimalt Harbor.

The Saskatchewan and Mackenzie were returning from nearly two months of exercises with ships, subs and planes of the Canadian and U.S. navies in the Carribean.

HMC ships Algonquin, Crescent and Columbia have been transferred from Halifax to the West Coast, and the Yukon and St. Croix steamed out of Esquimalt earlier this morning to meet the quintet and join them in taking the salute from Rear Admiral J. A. Charles, Maritime Commander (Pacific).

But the officials standing on the saluting base were far from uppermost in the minds of the men. They finally stopped their below-decks pacing and coffee drinking and went up on deck to pick out their own particular greeters among the hundreds who lined the jetty as the ship tied up shortly after 11 a.m.

Tiny tots, some of whom were really too young to know why they had been bundled up in their winter clothes and taken out of their cosy playpens clung to mothers and wondered what all the fuss was about.

And they obviously weren't much clearer when the gang-planks were finally lowered and they were taken aboard and grabbed by some man in blue who looked rather familiar. But it was cosy, being hugged and mummy seemed pleased so it must be all right and there was no need to cry.

For the older children it was different. Dad was back. Maybe, they thought after the initial greeting, that he'll have lots of interesting stories to tell, pictures to show and maybe even a huge straw sombrero or serape.

A lot would have been right.

Below decks all kinds of souvenirs were ready to be taken ashore. There were lots of at least two feet high and a bit wider bought for $1.50 Canadian — "probably about 40 cents before we arrived," said one sailor wise to the ways of the Latin American tourist trade."

There were statues of bulls, big and little, stuffed alligators and trinkets of all kinds, even machettes, a popular item for sailor's rumpus rooms.

There seemed to be no last minute packing. Everyone's gear was stowed and ready to go.

The younger men were more eager to get home. Some paced impatiently; others sat and discussed plans rof leave over coffee cups.

FISHING TRIP

One young lad shuffled a deck of cards and thought about a fishing trip he planned. Another was carefully checking the classified ads in the papers that had come aboard that morning with the mail. He was apartment-hunting.

Two stewards talked in the galleys. No leave for them, they were on call by the captain and commander.

Others stood in the darkened ops room below the bridge and bent over instruments, getting whatever homecoming excitement they could from seeing the B.C. Coast as a line on a radar screen.

Soon the would be on deck and actually see the Sooke Hills, the Victoria skyline and the familiar Dockyard wht ships of iall sizes.

The would be home.

New Empress Cafe Opens Wednesday

The first major stage of the renovation of the Empress Hotel has been completed and will be on public view Wednesday.

Manager Les Parkinson said today the Garden Cafe, a new dining area taking the place of the hotel's coffee shop, will be open for business Wednesday.

OVER BUDGET

Mr. Parkinson said the project had gone over its original $100,000 budget but declined to say by how much.

Another major job, the replacement of old DC current wiring, is almost completed. Mr. Parkinson said that AC wiring and TV cable is now 95 per cent installed and it shouldn't be too long before that phase of the renovation is finished.

Most of the work to date has been out of sight of the public as will the next stages of the $4 million face-lifting job.

"We shall be well into next year before you see any changes in the main lobby or the downstairs lobby," Mr. Parkinson said. "We are concentrating on the functional area of the hotel first and endeavoring to keep the hotel functioning smoothly while these major changes take place."

A meeting was held this morning to discuss the design and layout of the new Royal Suite.

Mr. Parkinson said the suite would have six rooms including a dining room, master bedrooms and a reception area plus various kitchen and pantry areas.

NO MALICE, 31 TELL UVIC HEAD

An open letter signed by 31 of the 300 faculty members at the University of Victoria today said that a recent statement by president Malcolm Taylor "is not an adequate response" to recent criticism.

Copies of the open letter to Dr. Taylor were being circulated this morning on campus to all faculty.

The signatories said they deeply regretted Dr. Taylor's statement that recent criticism is apparently the result of "a concerted attack" by a "certain element" that is trying to undermine the university.

●

The criticism has boiled up over the failure of the university to renew the contracts of three outspoken faculty members, Dr. Charles Tarlton, political science department, and J. S. (Jerry) Schwartz and Alan Mackenzie, both of the English department.

Three other faculty members resigned in protest and two of them circulated open letters criticizing the action and attitudes of the administration.

It was their criticism that provoked Dr. Taylor to make a statement last week.

●

The open letter of the 31 said Dr. Taylor's statement implied "a malicious intent which we do not believe exists" among the critics.

It said "the current dismissals and the related issue of academic freedom" concerns all faculty and is important for the future of the university.

It said Dr. Taylor implied that all critics of the university do not have its best interests at heart.

On the contrary, argues the letter, effective criticism is necessary in the university and it is wrong to attach "the stigma of disloyalty" to those who question administrative procedures.

●

The letter asks Dr. Taylor to give more information on the reasons why the three faculty members were let go and says he is now free to do this since their appeals have either been decided or dropped.

It also asked him to reconsider his "assessment of the present situation" so that healthy criticism will not carry "a moral stigma at this university."

The 31 who signed the letter do not include either the three who were dismissed or the three who have resigned in protest.

Police Uncover Cache Of Forgery Gear

By DON VIPOND

A city detective testified today he spotted a cheque-writing machine in the kitchen cupboard when he visited

Detective Tom Smith said he returned to the home the home of a man charged with shop-lifting last week. of Robert Bowen, at 512 Constance, armed with a search warrant the next day and found:

- Four unemployment insurance books in a china cabinet.
- Two social insurance cards and more insurance papers in a canister on top of a cupboard.
- More social insurance cards in a woman's handbag under a mattress.

Bowen pleaded guilty to possession of instruments to commit forgery when he appeared in central court this morning. He will be held in jail until he is sentenced April 7.

The 22-year-old told investigators after he was arrested Friday that he intended using the $50 cheque-stamping machine he bought and the variety of identification cards Ottawa sent him to commit forgery.

Bowen, who also uses the name Karry, admitted he had sent application forms off to Ottawa two at a time for the unemployment insurance books and papers he intended using for phoney identification. He had them returned to him addressed to general delivery in Victoria.

SHOPLIFTING

Police got on his trail Thursday after he tried shoplifting four records from Kelly's on Yates Ltd., 648 Yates. He was caught by an employee and turned over to police.

The accused told police he wanted any charges from other points in the country waived to the local court, said Detective Smith.

Among other things, he told detectives he still had a TV set he had rented in Edmonton.

MRS. BOBBIE ALLISON
. . . died in Ontario

Funeral Rites Held For Former Musician

Funeral services were held here this afternoon for a former Victorian, Mrs. Margaret (Bobbie) Macquelin Allison, who died Friday in Willowdale, Ont.

Born and raised in the city, Mrs. Allison, 33, was the daughter of well-known Victorians Mr. and Mrs. W. W. McGill, 3441 Mayfair Drive.

Besides her parents, she leaves her husband Robert and seven-year-old daughter Lynn, both of Willowdale, and two sisters, Mrs. Roger (Edith) Galloway of Oakland, Calif., and Mrs. James (Trudie) Duxbury of 3270 Woodburn, Victoria.

MUSIC, FLOWERS

Her two loves in her Victoria years were music and flowers, and she is well remembered for her part in Victoria musical activities.

Mrs. Allison began her music study at the age of nine, under local cellist Percy Humphrey, and played in a trio with her two older sisters. She was among the first members of the Victoria Junior Symphony Orchestra now disbanded which operated during the 1940s.

She also helped with musical arrangements and other work at the Children's Garden Library on Tattersall Drive, operated by her mother Mrs. Gertrude McGill.

WITH GISH

With her sisters, Mrs. Allison once appeared with actress Lillian Gish in the movie The Commandos Strike at Dawn, which was filmed here.

Mrs. Allison attended Cloverdale and Mount View High schools. After graduating, she took a business course in Victoria before going to Vancouver to work for Canadian Pacific Airlines.

Her husband, now a Toronto insurance executive, was at that time a CPA pilot.

Mrs. Allison also leaves six nieces and nephews, here and in California, and relatives in West Vancouver, Summerland, Seattle and Winnipeg, Man.

Services at McCall's floral chapel this afternoon were held with Rev. Norman Archer officiating, and were followed by interment at Royal Oak Burial Park.

CALLERS WELCOME

Boys Clubs Celebrate Their Week

Rounding the corner of their 60th year the Boys's Clubs of Canada are as youthful as ever.

The Boys' Club of Victoria is celebrating Boys' Club Week with a rock and roll dance, hobby show, father and son night, sports and a carnival.

The old fireball at 1240 Yates will swing with today's music Wednesday at 8 p.m.

Club members and other interested boys and girls will be welcome.

SPORTS, FILMS

Tonight is sports and film night, Thursday a hobby show and father and son night are arranged, Friday and Saturday are carnival nights.

Executive director of the local club Ron Havard said the club's purpose is not only to keep boys "off the streets" but to receive guidance in a wide variety of activity.

"Boys turn to delinquency and join gangs only as a last resort," he said.

The club here will be open to the public daily from 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. and 6:30 p.m. to 9 p.m.

$500,000 Shop Centre For Gold River

A $500,000 shopping centre for Gold River, one of Vancouver Island's "instant" towns, will be built by the end of the summer.

Contract for the construction has been let to A and B Construction of Nanaimo.

Completion of the centre, which will be located in the heart of the town, will include merchants, a bank and credit union, medical offices, beautician and real estate offices.

Gold River townsite was built to provide housing for employees in the $60 million pulp mill being built by the Tahsis Co. Ltd.

The mill is scheduled to go into production in July.

Uvic Library Gets $5,000

The Canada Council has given a $5,000 grant to the University of Victoria library to help build up a research collection.

In making the award, one of 27 which totalled $500,000, the Council announced that its assistance to all universities is less than one-quarter what they requested.

Uvic's library has been building up its collection particularly with a view to creating a research section for the use of students in the recently formed School of Graduate Studies.

Ask The Times

Q. Can you tell me something about Venus. How warm is it there? Has its surface been seen by astronomers? I.H.U.

A. The surface of Venus is thickly veiled in dense clouds. It has never been seen by telescope or the naked eye. Information gathered by Mariner II in 1962 led scientists to believe its surface temperature is about 800 degrees, probably because of the insulating blanket of cloud.

Q. Can you tell me who wrote the song:

Where e'er you walk
Cool breeze shall fan the glade
Trees where you sit
Shall crowd into a shade.

A. Music by Handel (1685-1759). Words by Congreve (1707).

Shelbourne Plan Goes Before Planners Tonight

A $2.5 million development proposal for the North Shelbourne area of Saanich will come before a municipal lands and planning committee meeting tonight.

The plan envisages a shopping centre covering just over six acres between Cedar Hill Road and Shelbourne, just north of Ruby, plus garden apartments limited to three storeys on five acres to the immediate north.

The shopping centre would include a Safeway store. The apartments would comprise 93 two-bedroom suites and 36 one-bedroom suites.

The twin proposals ran into stiff opposition at a public hearing when council voted to table the apartment plan and favored by a 5-to-3 vote the shopping centre.

Job Insurance Soon Extended To Farm Workers

Compulsory unemployment insurance is being extended to agriculture and horticulture this weekend.

These two occupations have operated outside unemployment insurance, but a federal cabinet order last fall brought them into the scheme effective April 1.

The change affects employers and employees on farms, ranches, nurseries, greenhouses and fruit, vegetable and flower growers.

Local farm groups have been contacted by the Unemployment Insurance Commission which is in the process of registering employers.

WOMEN GET ACTION ON PROTEST

Cannon Kick Sparks Second Look

Esquimalt council will take a second look at a proposal to place a First World War cannon in Memorial Park.

Reeve Ray Bryant said a letter has been received from the Victoria Voice of Women protesting the installation of the cannon as playthings for children.

Reeve Bryant said the letter was received too late to include in the agenda for tonight's council meeting.

"What we do in these cases is refer the letter to the council committee involved in the original decision," he said. "The objections will be studied and the committee will bring in a further recommendation."

It is intended to install the cannon in Memorial Park.

The council committee involved is the parks committee, chaired by Coun. Arthur Mebs.

VOTE PREDICTION:

Puerto Ricans Will Retain Special Status

By DAVE NICHOLSON

SAN JUAN (CP) — Puerto Ricans vote July 23 in a referendum aimed at determining the political future of the Caribbean island.

Observers see little chance of the vote producing startling results. They say it's already clear Puerto Ricans will choose to retain their special status as a commonwealth of the United States.

The referendum will offer three choices: continued commonwealth status, full statehood within the U.S. or total independence.

But if the vote is expected to produce no surprises, neither is it expected to provide a final answer to the island's future. Spokesmen for the statehood and independence parties say they will continue their struggle even if the referendum shows overwhelming support for commonwealth status.

Ironically, independence party leaders claim their following is growing at a time when the government of Roberto Sanchez Vilella, a staunch supporter of the commonwealth system, is bringing in new industry almost as fast as the island can find room for it.

150 NEW FIRMS

Under the government's Operation Bootstrap, 150 new industries moved into the island last year. Net income from the total of 2,300 plants operating on Puerto Rico grew by 10.7 per cent to $485,000,000.

But the government opponents say the industrial program is doing far more good for the American businessmen operating the plants than for the Puerto Rican peasants, many still trapped in grinding poverty.

Poverty is not hard to find on the island of 2,700,000. Much of the worst of it is concentrated in this capital of 700,000, where a matter of inches can separate squalid huts from palatial houses ringed by ornate Castilian balconies.

Juan Mari Bras, leader of the Pro-Independence Movement, says the operation has meant "low salaries, low rents but all kinds of incentives for the Americans."

Replying to those who say Puerto Rico, 1,000 miles southeast of Miami, would suffer a crippling economic blow if separated from the United States, Bras says independence would instead provide the island with greater economic freedom than ever before.

The Pro-Independence Movement, founded in 1959, is the newest and most vocal of several independence parties on the island.

ABSTAIN FROM VOTING

Although its strength is difficult to determine because it usually calls on its followers to abstain in elections, Bras claims his party now controls 13 per cent of the voting population.

How could the United States be forced to grant independence to the 3,423-square-mile island, about 1½ times as large as Prince Edward Island?

"We believe the combination of increasing international pressure against colonialism and the national mobilization of the people of Puerto Rico will force the United States to give us our independence," said the American-trained lawyer.

Puerto Rico "is not a commonwealth as Canadians know it, it's only a colony in full disguise."

Puerto Rican nationalists have often turned to world opinion to plead their case, most notably in 1950 when several attempted to assassinate President Truman in Washington and again in 1954 when others shot and wounded five congressmen on the floor of the House of Representatives.

UN WON'T HELP

The General Assembly of the United Nations, however, has said in a resolution the island is a self-governing political unit associated voluntarily with the United States and cannot be considered a colony.

Bras sees little likelihood of Puerto Rico becoming the 51st state within the U.S. and doubts the Americans themselves want it.

"The United States does not pretend to be a multi-national state and therefore could not accept us until they had destroyed our national character. And we won't let this happen."

Most objections to the spread of industrial development stem from concessions granted new firms. Industries can obtain tax holidays of up to 17 years while paying low wages to their Puerto Rican employees. Government officials say the island's unemployment rate is about 10 per cent but opponents claim it runs as high as 30 per cent.

Bras says independence from the United States would free Puerto Rico of economic dependence on the U.S.

LACK FEDERAL VOTE

"We would continue to trade with the United States and at the same time receive the benefit of being able to trade on a free basis with the rest of the world.

"As it now stands, if we wish to import from Canada, we have to pay the U.S. tariff.

"Puerto Rico is not free. We're subject not only to the economy of the United States, but also to the laws of the United States — including the draft — even though we have no voting representatives in Congress."

The island sends two observers to Washington but they have no voting rights.

The Pro-Independence Movement was founded by dissident members of the island's two traditional independence parties — the Nationalist Party and the Independence Party.

The party has been accused of being Marxist and pro-Communist, but Bras rejects the label.

"We could be described as socialist in some ways and we would want to re-establish normal relations with Cuba," he says. "But we wouldn't want Puerto Rico to be a satellite of any country — Russia or the United States."

FULL COWICHAN RESULTS

'Riders Just Love' Cross-Country Runs

DUNCAN—A record number of 39 horses took part in the cross-country event at the hunter trials staged by Cowichan Riding Club Monday.

Entries were present from Campbell River to Victoria and the cross-country race took two hours to run off.

The tough slippery course was over one and a half miles of the Stevenson Farm on Genoa Bay Road.

Mrs. Marjorie Jaggers said: "Cowichan is about the only cross-country event left on the Island riding calendar and riders just love it.

"Next year we'll probably get 50 entries."

There was a large turnout of spectators despite inclement weather.

The days results were:

Cross-country—1. Robert Chappel on Aldebaran; 2. Wendy Lister on Golden Aura; 3. Mrs. N. W. Joyce on Scottish Soldier.

Western pleasure—1. Clint Willson on Bud Stewart; 2. R. E. Gook on Caesar; 3. Donna Smith on Choctaw Reed.

New Subdivision Proposed On Wallace Drive

Sixty-six acres of open land are involved in what could be a high-class residential subdivision with 1,000-foot frontage on Wallace Drive in Central Saanich.

Consultant engineer Russell E. Potter told Central Saanich council his clients have taken an option on the property, which is adjacent to the proposed Brentwood Bay sewer installation. Mr. Potter said his clients are studying the availability of sewer facilities before making a final decision.

In reply to a question from council, Mr. Potter said the development costs would be borne completely by the subdividers.

'Clean' Nuclear Bomb Designed by Swedes?

STOCKHOLM (UPI)—Swedish scientists recently claimed they have perfected a design for the world's first "practically clean" nuclear bomb.

The Swedish Defence Research Institute scientists told newsmen however they doubt Sweden will build a nuclear weapon.

One of them, Sten Andersson, said the bomb they designed would have far less radio-active fallout than current nuclear weapons.

"We have worked with this for four years now and as far as I know, no other scientists have developed a similar theory," he said.

The newspaper Dagens Nyheter earlier reported the Swedes had built a model of the weapon. Andersson denied it, saying the bomb "exists on paper only and in our brains. Sweden has not, and will not, I presmue, build a nuclear bomb."

Andersson said he and colleague Bo Holmberg have been working on problems about protecting the population from fallout following a nuclear explosion. "To know what we are trying to defend ourselves against, we must know what happens when a nuclear bomb explodes," he said.

He said he and Holmberg found it is possible to reduce condensation in a nuclear blast by chemical means. This results in radio-active particles being lighter and thus rising instead of falling immediately to earth with their lethal peril, he said.

Andersson said France and China, both developing nuclear arms despite the Anglo-American Soviet test ban treaty, could make use of the Swedish theory. It definitely will work, he said.

Dagens Nyheter said the scientists proved reduction of condensation after a blast is a practical possibility.

Pro Soccer Loops Must Sign Soon

NEW YORK (AP)—A merger between the two new professional soccer leagues appears a strong possibility, but negotiations will have to move pretty quickly if it is to be done before the season opens.

Officials of the rival leagues have been holding talks for the last three months, but Dick Walsh, commissioner of the United Soccer Association, said he doubts any merger will be possible this season.

Both the United League and the National Professional Soccer League are scheduled to open their season next month, the United in 12 cities and the National in 10.

The National League has a television contract with CBS while the United has been sanctioned by the world body governing soccer, so a merger would be advantageous to both.

Chrysler Calls Off Boycott

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP)—A dispute in which Chrysler Corp. threatened to back a proposed boycott of next Sunday's Atlantic 500 race because of engine regulations has been settled, a spokesman for Atlanta International Raceway has announced.

The spokesman said Nelson Weaver, A.I.R. president, received a call from Chrysler vice-president Bob Rodgers informing him that all Chrysler-backed cars would compete in the Atlanta 500.

Californian Wins Battle of Errors

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP)—Billie Jean King of Long Beach, Calif., beat Maria Bueno of Brazil in three sets Monday to take the singles title of the South African tennis campionships.

In a match full of errors and lost services, the American won 7-5, 5-7, 6-2.

South Africa's likely Davis Cup pair, Bob Hewitt and Frew McMillan, trounced last year's Wimbledon finalists, Owen Davidson and Bill Bowrey of Australia 6-1, 6-4, 6-4, to capture the men's doubles title.

'ASTOUNDING'

Child Death Rate Worst In Canada

OTTAWA (CP) — More children are killed per capita in Canada than in any other country in the world, a medical professor told delegates to the maternal and child health conference this week.

Dr. John Read of Queen's University said the accident death rate was 118 for every 100,000 children in the one-to-four age group.

This "astounding" record was the worst for any country in which reliable statistics were available. Czechoslovakia was second with a rate of 103, but these were the only two countries with a rate more than 100.

Dr. Helen Wallace of the University of California school of public health told doctors, nurses and social workers attending the conference more Canadian children died from accidents than any other cause.

This included traffic mishaps, falls, burns and poisonings. Oral contraceptives now were high on the list of accidental poisoning agents.

The injuring agent was usually something attractive to the child — such as a bright pill — and children were usually "acutely hungry" at the time they suffered injury.

The most dangerous times in the day were one-hour periods just before meal times, when the child was hungry, tired and hyperactive, and the mother preoccupied with food preparations.

Dr. Wallace said 95 per cent of accidents could be prevented by closer supervision. Safety regulations such as improved labelling of poisons are necessary.

She suggested a centre where both mother and children could receive medical care. With a pediatrician, an obstetrician and two public health nurses, it could offer pre-natal, post-natal, birth control and interconceptual clinics for mothers.

Historic Ranch Restored

Premier W. A. C. Bennett will officiate at the opening of the Historic O'Keefe Ranch near Vernon June 15—the precise anniversary of the founding of the ranch 100 years ago!

Cornelius O'Keefe was heading back to gold-crazed Barkerville with 180 head of Oregon steers when he found the lush grasslands at the head of Okanagan Lake and decided to lay over to fatten his cattle. It proved a fateful decision, for he never moved on. Eventually, he pre-empted 15,000 acres, to become one of the largest landholders in the B.C. interior.

Believed to be the only one of B.C.'s early cattle empires still held by the original family, the O'Keefe Ranch has been fully restored to its 19th century condition as a private centennial project of the present-day O'Keefe's.

In addition to an opulent ranch house (reverently called 'the mansion') the historic ranch includes St. Ann's Roman Catholic Church — oldest in the interior—plus a general store and post office, a blacksmith shop, and the family's first home — a log structure that later served as a bunkhouse.

Although the restoration is only now being completed, the ranch received more than 20,000 visitors last year.

BUT PAPAL ENCYCLICAL CAUTIOUS

By BENNETT BOLTON

VATICAN CITY (AP)—Pope Paul gave a carefully qualified endorsement today to government action to control population but did not indicate any relaxation in the Roman Catholic Church's opposition to artificial means of birth control.

In the fifth encyclical of his reign, the Pope made clear that the "rightful freedom" of married couples who are opposed to artificial means of contraception, for moral reasons or under the guidance of their bishops, must be respected.

Vatican sources said however, the new attitude was likely to clear the way for government laws to make birth control information available to the public in places where Catholic pressure has opposed this in the past.

Some sources said it might even end organized Catholic opposition to government laws permitting distribution of contraceptive pills in welfare and public aid programs.

CITES SOCIAL PROBLEMS

The encyclical deals with the world's social problems. In the section on population growth, the pontiff declared that "the temptation is great to check the demographic population increase by radical measures." He added:

"Public authorities can intervene, within the limit of their competence, by favoring the availability of appropriate information and by adopting suitable measures, provided that these be in conformity with the moral law and that they respect the rightful freedom of married couples."

The encyclical, which appealed for social and economic justice, also said that unlimited capitalism is a "woeful system." It endorsed the redistribution among the poor of large estates which are "unused or poorly 'used' and criticized wealthy tax dodgers who transfer income abroad to escape obligations to aid the welfare of their countries.

The encyclical was entitled Populorum Progresio — on the development of Peoples—from its first words. It dealt with material things of the world rather than with religious or spiritual themes. The document bore the date of last Sunday, Easter, March 26.

The section of demography conceded that "too frequently an accelerated demographic increase adds its own difficulties to the problems of development: The size of the population increases more rapidly than available resources, and things are found to have apparently reached an impasse."

But the pope returned to the church's traditional stand on birth control, stating:

"Finally, it is for the parents to decide, with full knowledge of the matter, on the number of their children, taking into account their responsibilities toward God, themselves, the chil-

Wrecked Tanker Bombed

RN, RAF Attempts Futile Against Oil

LAND'S END, England (AP) British bombers set the shattered tanker Torrey Canyon and the sea around it ablaze today in an effort to destroy spreading oil, but within two hours the fire went out.

More Royal Navy and RAF planes were immediately prepared for a fresh attempt to prevent the spread of oil from the giant freighter's cargo, which had already polluted 120 miles of England's southwest coastline.

First Royal Navy planes blasted the tanker with 1,000-pound bombs. Then RAF planes moved in with napalm in an attempt to keep the oil which seeped out of the bomb-shattered tanker burning.

Little of the tanker remained above water after the navy planes dropped their loads.

The decision to bomb what was left of the Torrey Canyon came on the same day that the Dutch salvage company, which had tried for days to liberate the ship from the rocks, announced its four tugs had been withdrawn.

How the bombing would help stop the seepage of oil toward the southwestern English coast was not made clear.

EXPERIMENT FAILS

The bombing followed a fruitless experiment designed to set the giant oil slick afire by shooting incendiary "bricks" into the area from an electric gun aboard a helicopter 50 feet up. The devices functioned but didn't ignite the oil.

Twin-jets Buccaneer aircraft, normally equipped with missiles and rockets, reverted to conventional bombs and moved on to the wrecked tanker, stuck on the Seven Stones Reef for the last 11 days, to complete the job the jagged rocks, the seas and storms had started.

They were ordered to deliver the coup de grace by the defence ministry after earlier attempts to set alight the giant oil slick from the Torrey Canyon appeared ineffective.

Moments after the Buccaneers dumped their loads on the Seven Stones — graveyard of every ship that ever got stuck on this reef — results were clearly apparent.

FLAMES SHOOT UP

The tanker, broken by the seas in three parts, burst into a mass of flames. Smoke rose 2,000 feet in the air.

Maritime experts predicted that the disaster, which threatens to pollute south Britain's holiday beaches for years to come, will force a drastic revision of British maritime law.

The dark scum coated 120 miles off England's most prosperous vacation coast, and the government set up emergency oil-fighting committees as the ooze spread up the Channel. But Navy Minister Maurice Foley, directing operations from Plymouth, said:

"Given the extra oil now flowinto off Cornwall, all the extra men and equipment in the world could not deal with this problem."

On shore, 1,500 troops and 1,000 firemen tried to remove oil advancing over the sands. Fire trucks hosed down the beaches after troops attacked the scum with scrapers and detergents.

SOCIAL CREDIT

Gaglardi Denies Statement On Leadership

Highways Minister P. A. Gaglardi denied today that he had ever expressed an interest in the leadership of the National Social Credit party.

He made the statement in answer to comments passed by Walter Bowden, director of the Manitoba Social Credit League in Winnipeg.

Mr. Bowden is quoted as saying that Mr. Gaglardi had informed him some time ago that he would be interested in the party leadership but not if it involved running against Robert Thompson.

Mr. Thompson resigned from the leadership two weeks ago.

Mr. Bowden said he was surprised that it was taking so long for Mr. Gaglardi to state his views.

MISQUOTED?

"I have not knowledge of ever making such a statement," Mr. Gaglardi said this morning. "And I have no further comment."

Earlier Mr. Gaglardi had expressed surprise that the Manitoba Social Crediters had gone on record as fully supporting him in any campaign for party leadership.

"I have been hearing noises about this for the last couple of months," he said. "They have come from various directions. I have no further knowledge of this and I have no further comment."

Asked whether he would consider the party leadership the usually vociferous minister again declined comment.

The Manitoba group is calling for a leadership convention in Winnipeg in October and has pledged its full support to Mr. Gaglardi if he decides to seek the office

Geneva Talks Sought

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The United States disclosed today it has accepted U Thant's latest Vietnam peace proposals calling for a general truce. It said it is prepared to begin discussions immediately to work out details.

The U.S. reply to the proposals of the United Nations Secretary - General was made public shortly after Thant unveiled his plan at a press conference.

The Thant plan envisages a ceasefire to be followed by preliminary talks aimed at convening a new Geneva peace conference.

Thant said he had sent his proposals March 14 to all the parties directly concerned and that some had replied. He said he does not consider any of the answers as a categorical rejection.

WANTS NEGOTIATIONS

The U.S. reply said:

"The United States accepts the three-point proposal in the aide-memoire of the secretary-general of 14 March 1967. . . .

"The United States believes it would be desirable and contributory to serious negotiations if an effective cessation of hostilities, as the first element in the three-point proposal, could be promptly negotiated.

"It would, therefore, be essential that the details of such a general cessation of hostilities be discussed directly by both sides or through the secretary-general, the Geneva conference co-chairmen or otherwise as may be agreed.

"The United States is prepared to enter into such discussions immediately and constructively."

INVOLVES VIETNAM

The U.S. note said it was assumed that the government of South Vietnam would be "appropriately involved throughout the entire process."

The secretary - general expressed concern over what he called the recent escalation of the fighting and expressed fears that the Vietnam conflict might spread unless checked.

Thant disclosed that he had presented his proposals orally to a North Vietnamese delegation on his recent visit to Burma and that he had later sent the plan in a memorandum to other interested countries.

Governor-General's Naming 'Next Week'

OTTAWA (CP)—Prime Minister Pearson indicated today that it will be next week at the earliest before the name of Canada's new governor - general is announced.

He told a news conference he expects simultaneous announcement: will be made in London and Ottawa of the successor to Gen. Georges P. Vanier who died three weeks ago.

Mr. Pearson sat reporters around the huge oval cabinet table following a cabinet executive meeting and said he will have announcements next week of significance. He declined to indicate their nature.

He was asked about possible cabinet changes and replied:

"I didn't mention cabinet changes."

He also said it would be "quite improper" at this time for him to discuss in public a successor to Governor - General Vanier.

The prime minister said he expects dates will be set soon for the visits of President Johnson and President de Gaulle to Expo 67. Normally they would first come to Ottawa before touring the world's fair site in Montreal.

With Parliament resuming April 3, he said, items that the government wants dealt with include the bill to unify the three armed forces into a single service, a report on Commons rules, and temporary spending authority for one month of the fiscal year which begins April 1.

NEW YORK (UPI) — Local newsmen and staff announcers of radio and television stations in the U.S. have announced they may walk out after midnight tonight if bargaining in their pay dispute is not resumed.

28 EXCEED LIMIT HERE

Teachers to Walk Out Of Oversize Classes

British Columbia teachers voted Monday to walk out of any classroom in September which has more than 40 students.

There are 28 classes of 40 or more students in Greater Victoria at present.

More than 1,000 delegates to the B.C. Teachers' Federation convention in Vancouver unanimously approved the walkout action to culminate their campaign for smaller classes.

But Joseph Chell, Greater Victoria school superintendent, said class size is, to some extent, a matter of school organization.

He said that in the area the ratio of teachers to students is approximately one to 35 in elementary schools and one to 24 in senior schools.

However, some principals group students into larger groups for certain kinds of instruction.

SITUATION IN DOUBT

Mr. Chell said there is no way of knowing now what the situation will be this fall. However, he added, "While it is up to principals to organize classes in their schools we will want to know the reason for any large classes."

Mr. Chell said he preferred not to comment on the teacher's decision to walk out of the larger classes.

The teachers' convention decided that responsibility for the walkout should rest with the federation or the local teachers' association, not the individual teacher.

They also voted in favor of "moral and financial support

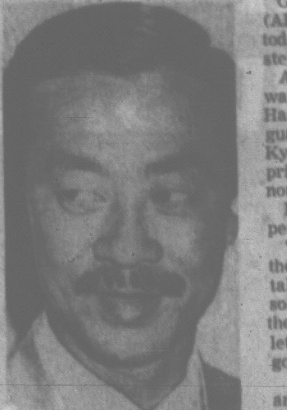
'Leave Talks to Us' Premier Ky Proposes



KY

GIO LINH, South Vietnam (AP)—Premier Nguyen Cao Ky today offered his own three-step plan for peace in Vietnam.

A complete ceasefire, two-way talks between Saigon and Hanoi and an international guarantee might achieve peace, Ky told reporters aboard his private plane on a flight to the northern sector.

In answer to questions about peace feelers, Ky said:

"We are always hearing that the United States is starting talks with Moscow or Hanoi or somebody. Why? Why don't they stay in the background and let us deal with Hanoi and negotiate when the time is right?

"Too many points of view and proposals are confusing things. South and North alone should talk on the thing they know best—Vietnam."

'All CCF Should Quit'

REGINA (CP)—Former CCF cabinet ministers and MLAs were accused in the legislature today of diverting $500,000 in public funds to their party through a party-owned publishing company.

In making the charge, A. R. Guy (L—Athabaska) called for resignation of the entire CCF opposition.

His statements and the following heated debate came after discussion of a motion for return by a Liberal member seeking value of contracts for printing, if any, let to Service Printing Co. of the CCF by the Queen's Printer during the last four years of CCF rule.

Greece Expels Russ Diplomats in Spy Hunt

ATHENS (AP) — Two Soviet diplomats have been ordered to leave Greece by Wednesday night, apparently because they were involved with an alleged Soviet ring spying on North Atlantic Treaty Organization bases in the Mediterranean area.

The foreign ministry issued expulsion orders for Albert Zaharov, second secretary in the Soviet embassy, and Igor Ochurkov, a member of the Soviet commercial delegation. The foreign ministry said incriminating evidence had been compiled against them concerning activities incompatible with their status.

Unofficial sources believe the pair was part of the spy ring disclosed last week with the arrest of three Italians. Since then, one Soviet diplomat has hurriedly left Italy, two Russians have been expelled from Cyprus, several civilians have been arrested in Cyprus, and Swiss police said arrests may be made there.

The three Italians, charged Wednesday in Turin with espionage for the Soviet Union, are Giorgio Rinaldi, 39, an exhibition parachutist; his wife, Angela Maria, 52, and their chauffeur, Armando Girard, 40.

Reports circulated in Turin Monday that the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency wanted to talk to six American parachutists who knew Rinaldi and participated with him and an Italian group of chutists in a mass jump at Stuttgart, West Germany, in September, 1962.

The Americans were not identified, but the CIA was said to be interested in the contacts they had with Rinaldi.

CHALLENGE RULED OUT

Kennedy Plans Campaign In Support of Johnson

By JACK BELL

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senator Robert F. Kennedy's announced intention to campaign for President Johnson in 1968 is beginning to shape up as a major test of political skill for the senator.

Kennedy confirmed Monday what he has been saying for a long time—he will not challenge Johnson for the Democratic presidential nomination next year.

The senator made it known through an aide that he would file the necessary sworn disclaimer of presidential intentions in Oregon, Nebraska or any other state wheer his name might be entered in a presidential primary.

This could change, of course, if something took Johnson out as a candidate for re-election.

But the action points Kennedy toward the necessity of campaigning vigorously to elect an individual with whom he has personal and political differences not likely to be reconciled in the months that lie ahead.

Kennedy obviously wants to carve out a position within the party that will set him apart from the Johnson administration—but not too far apart.

KENNEDY
. . . little choice

Some of his friends think Kennedy may have gone a little too far in this direction with his February White House spat with the president and his subsequent reiterated criticism of Johnson for not stopping the bombing of North Vietnam in the absence of any sign this would bring peace talks.

An embarrassment of publicity riches had put the senator from New York in a position where anti-Johnson Democrats, primarily the party's liberals and youthful Vietnam protesters, have embraced him as their leader.

To hold this following intact as a nucleus for a probable bid for the 1972 presidential nomination, Kennedy cannot afford to compromise with Johnson or even soften his war position materially.

He must be for Johnson as "an outstanding president," as Kennedy himself has classified him, but against some of his most important policies.

This will present a king-size dilemma for the senator if he campaigns side by side with Johnson through New York or undertakes individial speeches for the 1968 ticket in other states.

Politicians agree, however, that Kennedy will have to dig in vigorously for Johnson. Otherwise, if the president were defeated the senator would be blamed for the loss and if Johnson won without his help Kennedy's political standing would slump.

FORMER fighter pilot and psychology teacher at the U.S. Air Force Academy at Denver, Colo., Capt. Dale E. Noyd, 34, of Wenatchee, Wash., has asked the courts to classify him as a conscientious objector to the war in Vietnam. "The war in Vietnam is unjust and immoral," Noyd said. (AP Wirephoto.)

OIL DEPOT, MISSILE SITE BLASTED

U.S. Steps Up Bomb Strikes

SAIGON (AP) — American pilots bombed the outskirts of Haiphong Monday and pounded other targets in Noorth Vietnam with the heaviest raids in two weeks.

A slight break in the weather over the North enabled U.S. planes to fly 107 missions, a spokesman said. This was the largest number since March 14 when American pilots flew 116.

The targets included an oil storage depot six miles northwest of Haiphong and a surface-to-air missile site five miles from the port. It was the closest penetration to North Vietnam's major port since the same fuel depot was attacked March 6.

The stepped-up strikes indicated the U.S. was prepared to seize any break in the weather to increase pressure on North Vietnam. The seasonal monsoon winds are due to change any day providing good bombing weather for the next few months.

The spokesman also announced the loss of an air force F-4C Phantom jet over the North Sunday, with the two crew members listed as missing in action. The plane was the second downed by enemy ground fire Sunday, but the announcement of the second loss was delayed while search planes looked for the crew.

The United States now has announced 498 planes lost over the North.

Though the tempo of the air was increased, ground action was generally light, with only scattered action reported. Viet Cong activity included terrorist bombing of three civilian buses north of Da Nang in which five civilians were killed and eight injured.

U.S. Put on 'Red Alert' When Kennedy Killed

By RELMAN MORIN

NEW YORK (AP)—Fears of an international plot to overthrow the United States government prompted Defence Secretary Robert S. McNamara to alert every American military base around the world the minute he heard that President Kennedy had been shot in Dallas, William Manchester says.

"By every readable signal the situation was very red," Manchester writes in his book, The Death of a President.

The much-disputed book contains 350,000 words of text, plus diagrams, appendices and a list of sources. The price is $10 a copy.

McNamara "kept his head and made all the right moves" even before he learned that Kennedy was dead, Manchester says. The world-wide warning told American military commanders: "This is the time to be especially alert."

Lyndon B. Johnson, who succeeded Kennedy as president, is quoted in the book as saying "there might be war" if Americans become aroused by suspicions that Soviet Premier Khrushchev and Cuban Premier Castro had conspired to kill Kennedy.

It was the "wild rumors" about a conspiracy that brought the Warren commission into existence, Manchester says. The commission, after a long investigation, concluded that Lee Harvey Oswald — and Oswald alone — assassinated President Kennedy.

Johnson, as president, had difficulty persuading Chief Justice Earl Warren to head the inquiry, Manchester says, because Warren opposed "extra-curricular activity" by Supreme Court justices.

Manchester quotes Warren as saying: "The president told me how serious the situation was. He said there had been wild rumors and there was the international situation to think of. He said he had just talked to State Secretary Dean Rusk, who was concerned. . . . He said that if the public became aroused against Castro and Khrushchev there might be war."

Harper and Row said the first printing of the book runs to 600,000 copies. There are indications that a second printing will appear almost immediately.

Six per cent of the net re- advance orders. ceipts on the first 100,000 sales will be retained by the publishers, they said.

An undisclosed part of the earnings accruing to both Manchester and the publishers has been earmarked for the Kennedy Library.

Literary agents estimate the book may earn around $3,000,000.

Troubled Ferry Gets Home

PORT AUX BASQUES, Nfld. (CP)—The CNR ferry William Carson docked here late Monday night after taking three days for the crossing from North Sydney, N.S., that normally takes six hours.

The ferry carrying 58 passengers and 400 tons of cargo left North Sydney Saturday night, but was trapped in ice in the harbor approaches to the Nova Scotia terminal.

She finally worked herself free Monday with the aid of the transport department icebreaker John A. Macdonald.

Captain Paul Fournier of the John A. Macdonald said in a ship - to - shore telephone interview earlier Monday that ice was piled around the vessel 20 feet thick.

IMMIGRANTS

Africa Wants Whites

By DENIS LEE ROYLE

JOHANNESBURG (AP) — The South African government believes a steady flow of white immigrants is essential if white domination is to survive in the republic where blacks outnumber whites four to one.

But some Afrikaners warn that the white immigrants themselves threaten the Afrikaans language, the culture, the way of life and the rigid policy of racial segregation.

Last year, South Africa opened its doors to about 48,000 immigrants — whites urgently needed to keep the country's booming economy humming at top speed.

Official statistics show Britain supplied 17,406 immigrants, Portugal 5,524, West Germany 3,596, Greece 2,075, Italy 1,545, Holland 1,404 and more than 8,000 came from neighboring Rhodesia and Zambia.

Afrikaners, who say the whites are needed, nevertheless urge the government to be more selective in its choice of white immigrants. And they want the government to give money to white families as an inducement to have children.

The country's largest Afrikaner cultural organization has told Prime Minister Vorster that a number of English - speaking immigrants tend to snub Afrikaner society.

FEW BECOME CITIZENS

Only one of every 10 newcomers has applied for South African citizenship since 1949.

A former school teacher and supporter of the ruling Nationalist party, S. van Geldenbuys, wants immigrant children indoctrinated. "We want to indoctrinate them to become good Afrikaner citizens," he said.

The Johannesburg Afrikaans language newspaper Die Transvaler, which supports the Nationalist government, says white immigrants are a must if white civilization is to survive in South Africa.

But it warns that too many of the newcomers are from Mediterranean countries with little or no technical skills.

Money Pours In To Redeem Girl

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP)—A Nashville mother, who sent her young daughter to a loan company which had garnisheed her wages, says she has received enough financial help since then to allow her to manage her debts.

Right now, Wanda Lee Thompson said, her chief concern is regaining custody of her daughter, Teresa Lynn, 5, who was turned over to juvenile authorities when Mrs. Thompson, 27, took her unusual action.

The little blonde girl arrived by taxi alone last Thursday at the downtown office of Century Finance Co., with this note pinned to her dress:

"Here is my baby. Since you took my cheque, you can take care of her 'till I'm able to."

Bill McMaster, manager of the loan office, called police, who turned the little girl over to juvenile authorities. They, in turn, let the girl live with Mrs. Thompson's aunt pending an April 11 hearing on a neglect charge filed against the mother.

RECEIVED HELP

Mrs. Thompson, who said "things just seemed to be mounting up," received financial help from as far away as Oregon with encouraging telephone calls from all parts of the U.S.

The result, she said, will be that her next two pay cheques from Werthan Bag Co., where she works, will be garnisheed—but she hopes to pay off the balance of her loan at the rate of $11 a month. She said she owed the finance company $108 at the time the cheque was garnisheed.

State law exempts $17.50 a week, plus $2.50 for each dependent—$20 in Mrs. Thompson's case—from garnishment.

Mrs. Thompson said she feels now that sending the girl to the loan company was a mistake, and said she will "do everything in my power to get my baby back."

MAN RETURNS $1,000 LEFT IN PHONE BOOTH

VANCOUVER (CP)—Rita Doak was in tears Monday as she told police she had left her wallet containing $1,000 in a phone booth.

The elderly man walked up to the counter beside her and was about to wait his turn to report his find to the clerk, when he heard the nature of the woman's complaint.

"I think I've got something here, I found it in a phone booth," said 72-year-old Phillip Schweitzer, a retired truck farmer from Saskatchewan.

Mrs. Doak shouted her joy and threw her arms around him, giving him $20 of her $1,000 as a reward.

Shirley Edwards left her husband this morning.

Then she really started something.

Shirley hasn't had a decent holiday since her honeymoon. So this morning she sprinted into Canada Trust and started something with one of our tellers. A Canada Trust Target Savings Plan.

Our teller showed Shirley just how simple and straightforward Target Saving can be. With the help of Canada Trust.

Told her about Canada Trust higher interest. One third more than Shirley and her husband have been getting. (And interest is calculated every month on Target Savings so they'll grow fast.) Then our teller gave Shirley a Target Savings Plan book that holds her savings record and deposit reminder, and tells her when she's reached her goal.

The Edwards are on target for a great vacation right now.

If you're aiming for a holiday, a house or extra retirement income, an emergency nest egg or the money to educate your children, come to Canada Trust. We'll help you get on target.

The Jousters

THE RIVALRY BETWEEN President Johnson and Senator Robert Kennedy—and perhaps feud would be a more descriptive term for their current relationship—continues on an unofficial basis. Both men, according to the polls, have felt the attrition of winter on their popularity, and the fate of both is, in large measure, dependent on the outcome in Vietnam.

It is Vietnam that could restore or destroy President Johnson; it is the same phenomenon that could put the late president's brother in line for the Democratic nomination, or so disqualify the Democratic Party in the American public's mind as to wreck any presidential hopes that Mr. Kennedy might entertain.

In any case, the prospect is that a Kennedy bid, if any, for the presidential nomination would not be made before 1972. Failure to nominate Mr. Johnson in 1968 would indicate so great a split among the Democrats that their eventual candidate would have great difficulty in beating the Republican choice. And if a successful completion of the war can be achieved before the 1968 political action begins in earnest, Mr. Johnson obviously will be the beneficiary of the public's relief.

Another consideration, however, is noted by some foreign observers such as the Economist of London. Mr. Kennedy's youth—he is 41—will count with the 23 million Americans who will reach voting age within the next five years, and he already has staked a claim to their allegiance by his call for negotiation to end the widely unpopular war.

If Mr. Kennedy does indeed aspire to his country's highest office he has a difficult task ahead of him. He must remain prominently before the public without permitting his acclaim to wear thin; he must pick his issues carefully, not opposing Mr. Johnson to the point of alienating too many Democrats, but becoming associated with stands which will serve, during the five-year wait, to establish him as a man of judgment and dependability. He would do this from the vantage point of a seat in the Senate, a powerful machine in New York state, a still young appearance, and a name that arouses affection and loyalty among millions of American voters.

These are assets that would be hard to beat in any political situation. But an incumbent president who could offer early peace with the prestige of a military victory to boot, and then swing with massive resources into a domestic social program, would have an appeal for voters that would probably prove irresistible.

The Kennedy-Johnson drama should prove one of the most fascinating contests in modern United States history—and one which Canadians should watch closely for they cannot fail to be vitally affected by the outcome.

Time To Draw the Lines

CONVICTION OF TWO RUSSIAN skippers this month for intruding within the fisheries limits set by the United States off Alaska draws attention to the absence of similar incidents within Canadian waters. It also recalls frequent efforts in the House of Commons to establish the baselines from which Canada's limits will be measured.

There have been occasions since Canada proclaimed its 12-mile fisheries limits when foreign fishing vessels have crossed into waters claimed by this country. In certain instances last year, their skippers were notified of their intrusions and asked to withdraw. They complied with the request.

But at this date the outer limits of Canadian fisheries jurisdiction still appear nebulous. The government should act now to set the geographic co-ordinates on which the baselines would be drawn, and to give formal notice that they must be respected.

The delay, as the minister of fisheries and the minister of external affairs have pointed out in Commons debate, is due to discussions being conducted with the United States. It would be preferable, of course, to have agreement between the two nations on the lines setting the limits. But there should be a deadline for such talks.

Failing such action the government will be subjected to repetitions of the question from opposition sources asking who is fixing Canadian fisheries limits, Canada or the United States.

In the most recent case involving the intrusion of a Russian ship into waters over which the United States claims fisheries jurisdiction, the convicted captain declared Russian respect for the offshore sovereignty of the United States. It seems reasonable to expect similar respect for final lines drawn by Canada off our coast.

There should be no further delay in drawing the official limits, particularly in view of Canada's acceptance of the theory of historic rights which permits foreign fishermen to continue fishing on grounds where they customarily fished before the Canadian limits were extended 12 miles from shore.

The Ugly Despoiler

THE THICK, STICKY OOZE that was the cargo of the giant United States oil tanker Torrey Canyon, which broke in two on the rocks off Cornwall, has been spreading inexorably to England's south coast beaches — a tragic tide that will spoil the recreational value of the areas and inflict a disheartening toll on bird and marine life.

This is pollution in concentrated, ugly form. Its costs in money are high, in despoliation perhaps higher. And it is sudden and obvious.

Less spectacular has been the pollution that inflicts many parts of this continent. Here discharges of waste have seeped, a relatively little at a time, into water courses. Air has been fouled by fumes from industrial and other sources. Once fair countryside has been destroyed by the refuse of civilization, the marks of man on the land he is supposed to cherish.

The example in the English Channel is dramatic. The influence of pollution in this country is frequently gradual—a little bit today, a little bit tomorrow and the next day. The results, however, can become equally harmful.

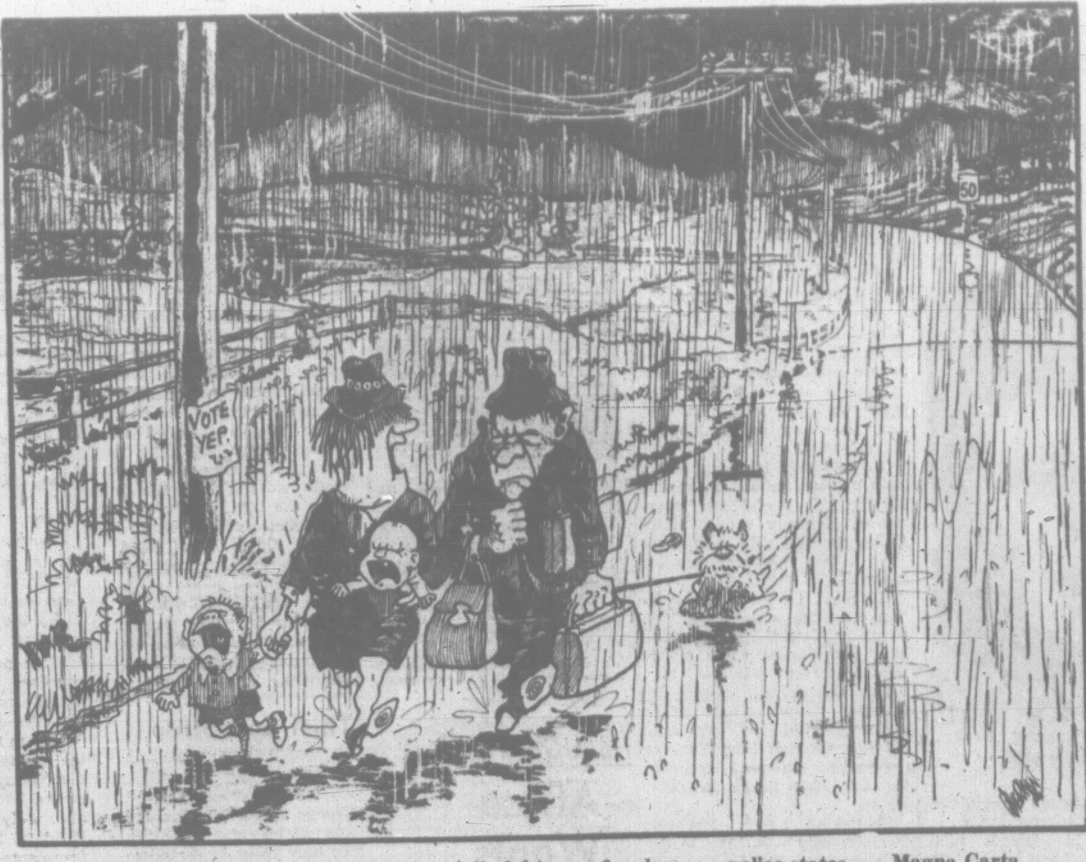
The sympathy of Canadians for Britain's afflicted seaside is abundant. Later perhaps we may look homeward with a little greater concern to see what we are doing to our own country.

A Modest Trail Proposal

THE PROVINCIAL GOVERNMENT has received the constructive suggestion that it augment with a little money its moral support of the senior Boy Scouts plan to rehabilitate the West Coast trail between Bamfield and Port Renfrew.

The request, advanced by Mr. Alan Macfarlane, MLA, is modest; the funds involved would be small. But the encouragement their contribution would be to those contemplating this project—impressive as a centennial gesture from a group of young men—would be substantial.

Here, surely, is an opportunity for the department of highways to show its concern for a highly commendable effort by a group of young citizens to re-establish a trail of outstanding beauty, and attraction to hikers, as well as a route invaluable in case of shipwreck in the area.



"As much as I appreciate your stand on civil rights . . . freedom . . . police states . . . Magna Carta . . . I still wish you had blown into that silly breathalyzer . . . !"

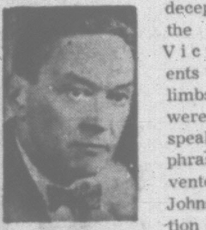
Evidence of the 'Credibility Gap'



Lippmann

IN order to avoid the embarrassment of calling a spade a spade, newspapermen have tacitly agreed to talk about "the credibility gap." This is a polite euphemism for deception, rather like the habit of our Victoria grandparents who spoke of limbs when they were too shy to speak of legs. The phrase has been invented during the Johnson administration and it is quite significant that nothing like it seems to have been needed before. In its exact meaning the "gap" is as Mr. Henry L. Trewhitt of the Baltimore Sun has put it: "The degree of refusal by the public to accept at face value what the government says and does."

It goes without saying that if this gap is wide, the country is in the perilous position of not believing that it can trust its government.

Every experienced newspaperman knows quite well — as James Reston points out in his penetrating book "The Artillery of Peace" — that there is an inherent conflict between public officials and reporters. But, so far as I know, there has never been a time when the president and the working press distrusted each other so much as they do today. The current conflict has become abnormally acute, and the relations between the Johnson administration and the press are unique, differing not only in degree but in kind from the normal tensions between responsible officials and free journalists.

Manipulated News

The conflict today has degenerated to the point where there is no longer much pretence that the news is not being manipulated in order to make the congress, the newspapers, the networks, and the public at large support the president. The only question is supposed to be whether the manipulation works, how successfully the president and his officials and his press officers can operate.

The credibility gap today is not the result of honest misunderstanding between the president and the press in this complicated world. It is the result of a deliberate policy of artificial manipulation of official news. The purpose of this manipulation is to create a consensus for the president, to stifle debate about his aims and his policies, to thwart deep probing into what has already happened, what is actually happening, what is going to happen.

In its press relations the administration does not hold with the fundamental American principle that true opinion arises from honest inquiry and open debate and that true opinion is necessary to free government. For this administration, the right opinions are those which lead to consensus with the leader, and to create such true opinion it is legitimate to wipe out the distinction between patriotism and patrioteering and to act on the assumption that the end justifies the means.

First Fissure

The credibility gap opened in the first weeks of President Johnson's tenure. It was early December, 1963, and the first big official business before him was the completion of next year's budget, which had been begun by President Kennedy. At his first press conference on December 7, 1963, "reporters came away with the impression" says Mr. James Deakin of the St. Louis Post Dispatch that "the new budget would be between 102 billion and 103 billion."

But at Mr. Johnson's second press conference, eleven days later, the president said that the expenditures would be "substantially 99 billions" which was the amount of the Kennedy budget. A few days later, says Mr. Deakin, "the news spread that the new budget would be 100 billion dollars, give or take 2 per cent either way." But when the 1965 budget was actually submitted to congress, it was down to 97.7 billion — which was under the Kennedy budget. By this technique, which used to be known in psychological warfare as razzle-dazzle, the President projected an image of himself as a thrifty man, who turned out lights in the White House and who spent less than President Kennedy.

Thus the credibility gap opened before the President (in February, 1965) announced the first publicly visible actions reversing his campaign pledges and making the war in Vietnam an American war. This reversal has greatly widened the credibility gap. Being unwilling to admit that he had changed his policy, Mr. Johnson has persistently manipulated the official news of war and peace. When he was escalating the war he has covered it with gestures about peace. In the process there has been deep damage to the credibility of the Pentagon about the size of the American commitment, the size of the military and civilian casualties, and about the costs of the war.

There has been damaged also the credibility of the state department on the conduct of the war. Thus in August, 1964, Hanoi sent word to the United Nations that their representatives would meet with the Americans in Rangoon. The administration ignored the offer. In September, Secretary Rusk replied to a question about whether it was possible to have a negotiated settlement of the war. He said, "let me first say that I don't know of any negotiations now going on anywhere, overt or covert, about a settlement in South Vietnam." He made no reference to the North Vietnamese offer. Until U Thant, in the following February, revealed what had happened, the state department kept up the fiction that no offer to talk had been made by Hanoi.

Dr. Tarlton's Views

I would like to respond to your editorial "The Real Job," which appeared in the Times on March 23. The length and the tone of the editorial strongly suggest that the Times has now assumed a "position" with respect to the current situation at the University. In the light of this consideration and in the interests of truly presenting both sides, I hope that you will print this letter.

The editorial is partly correct, I think, in its assessment of the phase of development through which the University is now proceeding. The University has, indeed, got off to a commendable start. The editorial is dead wrong, however, when it argues that at this juncture what is needed is stability and co-operation. The policies and the habits of academic life that are developed now are the ones which will characterize the University in the future. If these are to be complacency, submission to whatever the administration decides is to be policy, and the acceptance of efforts to forge a faculty within which there are none but the co-operative, then this is surely a tragedy.

With respect to the question of tenure (a problem not really involved in the current discussion at the university), the editorial is right in its general description of what tenure means. It is, again, wrong in its implied assessment of the importance of tenure. The crux of the error is reflected in the statement: "The reasons need not be made public."

* * *

Essential to the definition of tyranny is the idea of authority exercised in an irresponsible way. What could be less responsible that a process whereby decisions are made affecting the lives and careers of professional scholars on the basis of other than professional criteria none of which need ever be disclosed? The question of "publicity" regarding these reasons is not really pertinent. The administration has not disclosed the reasons even to the people directly involved. This is in clear violation of the stated principles of the Canadian Association of University Teachers.

Consider the results of this policy and the circumstances in which, as a consequence, those of us whose contracts have not been renewed are now living.

A decision has been made which crucially affects my professional career; that decision was made, as President Taylor admitted publicly, on grounds other than teaching or scholarship; these grounds have never been divulged; instead, President Taylor made the public statement that they might, if divulged, prove "damaging."

So long as the reasons are not disclosed, the impression is left that some hideous problems are involved, a suggestion that I am not even allowed, then, to counter. Personal knowledge of what my own behavior has been leads me to conclude that the motive in not disclosing reasons must be lack of confidence on the part of the University administration in the adequacy of those reasons and their ability to withstand the scrutiny of the academic world. — Charles D. Tarlton, University of Victoria.

FROM PARIS

BY ANDREW MULLIGAN

A Blow to de Gaulle From Djibouti

PRESIDENT DE GAULLE, of all people, is tussling with a neo-colonial problem in Africa which could shatter overnight his image as father-protector of the Third World.

For the second time since the Algerian war ended in 1962, paratroops of France's special "force of intervention" on permanent standby for use in Africa were despatched last week to Djibouti, in French Somaliland, to put down riots and restore order after the preceding Sunday's independence referendum.

The referendum was called after violent independence demonstrations during General de Gaulle's visit to Djibouti last summer. According to the Ministry of Overseas Territories, 22,253—about 60 per cent—voted for continuing ties with France while 14,734 or about 40 per cent voted against it.

The Somalis, who are in the majority in the capital and principal port of Djibouti itself, came out solidly in favor of independence. But the up-country tribesmen, mainly Afars, voted in favor of continued relations with France. Hence the rift between the port and the bush was further aggravated by racial strife.

The nationalists claimed that the French authorities rigged the elections. They threatened to turn the Djibouti situation into another Algeria. They claimed that Somalis were denied votes and many eligible voters were expelled to Somalia while voting rolls were padded with Afar tribesmen who predictably voted against independence.

Tension in French Somaliland has divided French opinion at home, which is politically sensitive after the recent shock election results. The opposition are bound to make capital out of the Djibouti affair and the Gaullists, with only a small majority in the National Assembly, have little room for manoeuvre.

Figaro, in a leader on March 21, said thst it was regrettable that the referendum had not been a victory for independence, because France knows from recent experience how military operations to maintain law and order can be misinterpreted. The situation would now be widely criticized and exploited in Africa.

L'Humanite, the Communist daily, called the referendum a "monstrous falsification." Only 39,000 out of a total population of 125,000 were eligible to vote. Only voters already registered on the electoral roll and with a backlog of three years' residence were allowed to vote.

Valuable Port

Djibouti, sandwiched between Somalia and Ethiopia, is a valuable and increasingly prosperous Red Sea port. It is the principal port for Ethiopia.

France's investment in port and service facilities for the year ended 1966 was some £4 million. France established and runs the vital rail link between Addis Ababa and Djibouti. It is therefore in French interests to protect these investments, although it is by no means clear as to whether the profitable commerce of Djibouti offsets the high costs and dubious honor of administering and protecting the territory. Few doubt that there would be an inevitable clash between Ethiopia and Somalia, which would both lay claim to Djibouti in the event of a French pull-out.

It now seems likely that President de Gaulle, forming a new government, will play for time. In spite of referendum results, rigged or not, he is hardly likely to risk ridicule and further jeopardize his hard-won reputation in the Third World by pursuing a strong-arm policy with dissident nationalist elements.

Although French officials here refuse to comment, it seems unlikely that the General will be prepared to negotiate a compromise solution with the Somali nationalists, as was suggested last summer.

University 'Freedom'

Vancouver Sun

Nobody wishes to restrict legitimate self-expression by any member of a university, whether faculty, staff or student. But the public does not establish and maintain its institutions of higher learning as forums for the inflation of individual egos. Nor does the public sympathize in the slightest degree with the notion that these expensive enterprises can be shut down to gratify the artificially-induced indignation of some of the beneficiaries.

Citizens who pay the bills are gaining an impression that too much of their money is being wasted on persons for whom the pursuit of knowledge is secondary to the joys of troublemaking for its own sake. This is most unfortunate in any society. It is doubly so in British Columbia, where the true friends of universities are struggling so hard to overcome the latent hostility toward higher education of those in command of the essential financing. The affair at SFU plays directly into the hands of political groups with an anti-intellectual bias.

It is a great pity that those responsible for organizing these picayune revolts are too stupid or immature to understand the consequences of their own folly.

RUNS FROM CELL

'You're Free' Russian Told

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (CP)—A Russian trawler captain convicted of violating U.S. fishing waters was released from jail Monday after the Soviet government paid his $10,000 fine.

Leonid Kushenko, 29, of Vladivostok, spend two days in an Alaska jail after he was found unable to pay the fine.

A cashier's cheque for $10,000 was deposited with the court clerk shortly before noon. The Soviet embassy in Washington arranged for the cheque.

U.S. marshal George Bayer went to Kushenko's cell and then realized he didn't know how to tell the Russian he was free.

Bayer then got a Russian dictionary and pointed to the word "free." Kushenko's face lit up, he jumped gleefully into the air and then ran from the cell.

Kushenko was flown to Kodiak. From there the U.S. Coast Guard took him to his 178-foot shrimp trawler, the SRTM 8-457, which was escorted from Kodiak to international waters by the Coast Guard Sunday afternoon.

The Coast Guard seized the trawler last Wednesday five miles off Alaska's Shumagin Islands in the first arrest for a violation of the newly enforced U.S. 12-mile fisheries zone.

Another Soviet trawler was seized by the same cutter March 2 only 1½ miles off the Alaska coast for violating the three-mile territorial limit. Skipper Nicolai Zernov was fined $5,000.

IT WON'T WORK, said Tory leadership candidate George Hees Monday in a discussion of services unification. Time will be lost in retraining men moved between branches of the service and morale will suffer," he stated.

FIRST THROUGH THE ROCKIES?

1912 Joys of Motoring Lost In Memories of Tire-Patching

By GLEN ALLEN

Don't put Charlie Robinson in the driver's seat.

Being a passenger is bad enough.

At least it was back in 1912 when he was a young and road-sick passenger in the first automobile to cross the prairies and mountains to Victoria.

It took the Robinson family well over a month to drive, navigate and even push a 1910 Buick here from a little town on the Manitoba border.

As Mr. Robinson, now retired and living in Vancouver puts it: "We never had a car before and none of us could drive, so we naturally decided to go to the coast."

12 New Tires

Mr. Robinson Sr. started out in Tantallon, Saskatchewan, on July 14, 1912, with three passengers, 12 new tire tubes, cans of rubber repair cement, extra gasoline and a very long way to go.

"We didn't know we were breaking any records," says Mr. Robinson.

"It was more like a big long picnic than anything else."

But some ingredients of the Family Robinson's picnic included: plagues of flying ants, loneliness (they didn't see another car in five days on the road), injuries (the crank-starter sprained at least one arm) and no roads at all. (They had to push the car along a pack trail near Fernie).

Their big complaint was tires.

"In those days," says Mr. Robinson, "there was no such thing as a kit to fix tires with. All you could get was rubber cement and an old inner tube.

20 Miles Daily

"We started with 12 tubes and by the time we went 60 miles — it took three days — they were all used up.

"Speeding" and going downhill, the car could be pushed to 35 miles per hour.

Any repairs to be done were often makeshift, effected by tradesmen who had rarely seen a car.

"Our biggest thrill almost made up for the hardships," says Mr. Robinson.

"We finally crossed the mountains and got to Elko, B.C.

"The people had heard us coming and the streets were lined with men, women and children.

Keys to City

"The mayor gave us the freedom of the town.

"They wouldn't let us pay for anything and we were guests at the local hotel.

"They told us we were the first ever to come from the east and that no other car had ever left there to go east.

Mr. Robinson said the rest of the trip to Victoria was uneventful except that the tires were "smooth as ice."

A WOMAN'S VIEWPOINT

By Pat Dufour

The dying days of March are hard on a sun-lover like me. Looking out of the office window, the branches of a chestnut tree seem reluctant to break into foliage.

The sticky buds show just enough promise to make me long for the chance to sit at one of the garden cafes I knew in Europe or the West Indies, acquiring freckles with the zeal of a fanatic.

The elusive sun is a problem I can't solve but I can indulge in a garden cafe . . . as of Wednesday afternoon, courtesy of the Empress Hotel.

I know what you're thinking. The winds that whip along the Causeway on occasion seem conducive only to chilblains and chattering teeth if you're crazy enough to sip your tea with alternate gulps of fresh air.

Hotel manager Les Parkinson is aware of this so he's come up with a new type of "garden" . . . one that brings the outdoors within reach of heat registers and other amenities.

It's located where the old coffee shop used to be but any similarity to the original eating place has been completely . . . and artistically . . . eradicated.

Graceful "garden gates" of wrought iron separate the new creation from the rest of the hotel, blending with the Italian-inspired columns that add the feel of a well-loved formal garden.

The "lawns" are green carpet and the "walks" have to be examined at ant's height to give up their secret. Actually made of vinyl, they look so much like brick paths you almost feel tempted to peer down to see if there are any upstart blades of grass breaking through!

Naturally, nothing but garden furniture would do in such a setting and this is delightfully represented in the black wrought iron chairs that offer luxury with their green upholstered seats. These were designed by Rudy Kovach of Vancouver and made in Los Angeles. The garden is the dream child of Rudy and created by Marwell Construction Ltd. of Vancouver.

Garden Blooms All Year 'Round

Planters, filled with blooms from the hotel's greenhouses, will make this one garden that will never be defeated by an off season.

Just in case you're wondering if the trappings may outshine the culinary fruits of this weedless garden, one look at the elaborate menu is enough to ensure that more than your aesthetic senses will be well satisfied.

There are dishes for every taste, whether it's a knickerbocker glory at the milk bar, a hearty breakfast, luncheon or dinner or a quick snack between shopping sorties.

I could feel my digestive juices gurgitating in anticipation as I tried to decide what I'd have at my first indoor-outdoor feast.

At this moment I'm gravitating between a crackleburger (love that name!), a hamburger with a 'topper' of egg on its round steak base, salmon, shrimp or crab.

Traditionalist that I am most of the time, I'll probably end up having some of the pork sausages that the hotel staff makes in its own kitchens or a sandwich made of the corned beef that usually woos me away from more frivolous concoctions.

Whatever it is, I'm sure the garden atmosphere will add zest and enjoyment to the eating. What's more, my goose pimples will be grateful for the rest period!

This uniquely carved Indian spoon, fashioned from a single piece of wood and stained with special Indian dyes, is one of several pieces Miss Violet Hendry brought with her from Bella Bella. This one was carved by Johnny Humchitt, "an excellent carver and dancer in the village". She'd also brought a small unfinished totem pole, made by Johnny's grandson, Robert. Miss Hendry was in Victoria to speak to the Indian Arts and Welfare Council.

First 'Community Centre' in Indian Village

LIBRARY IS A DREAM COME TRUE

By DINA SUDLOW

For the last six months, Violet Hendry has been watching a dream unfold and take form before her eyes. She has been watching a village and its people take their first steps toward a community life by its own efforts.

It was last September when Miss Hendry arrived in Bella Bella, a small village on the coast of mainland British Columbia, armed with 19 cartons of books and a dream. The books came from the Vancouver Public Library, Crofton House School in Vancouver where she had been a librarian, and her church, St. John's United, Vancouver. They provided moral support for the dream of establishing a community library in an Indian village.

Bella Bella had been recommended to her mainly because of the great interest and enthusiasm which the school principal Rev. John A. MacLeod had for such a project.

COMPLETE CO-OPERATION

"He arranged for me to take over the school library," recalls Miss Hendry. "From there I worked with the children and, through them, reached the parents. Throughout the project I've had the complete co-operation of the school staff.

"Now I'm watching the library grow from a reading centre to the beginning of a community centre. Progress is slow and gradual, but it is coming."

The first off-shoot from the reading centre was the organization of a square-dance club, which is now being managed by Mrs. MacLeod, wife of the school principal. "It meets every two weeks and is making healthy progress," reports Miss Hendry with obvious pride.

One thing led to another. A senior citizen group was formed with several of the elderly village women as the nucleus. "They meet the same night as the square-dancers and enjoy a social evening as they watch the dancers."

At this time, too, teacher Mrs. Edith Spencer began the Grade 7 girls' hobby club. The youngsters learn to sew, knit, crochet — even hook rugs.

"They are even planning a bazaar for early April," says Miss Hendry.

BOYS' CLUB

When the boys heard about the girls' club, they wanted to start their own. "Now every week they all gather in the school basement to watch Johnny Humchitt carve and learn the craft themselves."

Miss Hendry tells with delight of some events coming up on the village agenda. "They are planning to have a centennial pageant in the near future illustrating the history of Bella Bella from 100 years ago to today.

"Also, the youngsters have a project all their own. They are preparing a children's centennial book, which will be inscribed with all their names and which will contain stories of the people themselves.

"Right now, all the children are busily interviewing the older people in the village to get all the old stories!"

She speaks with pride about the village's main centennial project — restoring "Old Town," the original site of the village and a former Hudson's Bay Company fort, as an historic park with camping and picnic grounds.

She remembers with a laugh the "unofficial" opening of the park, when she and several teachers and a large number of children "opened the project with a wiener roast!"

SELF-HELP PROJECT

All the work of clearing, building roads and setting up campsites is being done by the people themselves.

The library at Bella Bella is now run on the same rules as any other public library and Miss Hendry has found that the people are becoming increasingly interested in books as time goes on. "Many of the men pick up books on home building and repair and are using the knowledge they've read."

Miss Hendry is delighted with the co-operation and help given her by the village people, particularly a leading woman in the community, Mrs. Margaret Reid, who heads a committee to assist with the library.

"It's not only the women who are pitching in," says Miss Hendry. "Several men have volunteered, too, and one is starting repair work on the books."

Miss Hendry has an interesting and rather strange story to tell about the people of Bella Bella, whose population mainly relies on fishing. "When Namu the killer whale was captured, the people said again and again that it should never have happened, and predicted disaster. Oddly enough, the next season was extremely bad for fishing."

Miss Hendry is going back to Bella Bella with another hope — not only that the people will manage their own library, but will build their own community centre, with facilities for meetings, dances and all phases of community life.

Make New Home in Chilliwack Following Vows in View Royal

Mr. and Mrs. Philip Arthur Cornforth, whose recent marriage took place in All Saint's Church, will make their new home in Chilliwack.

Rev. J. Vickers officiated at the evening service which saw Valerie Joyce Butler, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. V. E. Butler, 302 Bessborough Road, become the bride of the son of Mr. and Mrs. A. Bernard, 2951 Craigowan Road. Baskets of spring flowers were at the chancel steps.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore an empire-line gown of peau de soie that was topped with a lace jacket with belled sleeves and enhanced with a lace train cascading from the shoulders. Her veil was in chapel length. She carried a cascade bouquet of red American Beauty roses and carnations and wore a single strand of pearls and matching earrings, gift of the groom.

"I'll Walk with God" was sung by soloist N. Sandford.

Maid of honor Miss Lynda Keys chose a floor-length empire-line gown of pink brocade and flowered headpiece to match. Similar gowns and headdresses in blue brocade were worn by bridesmaids, the Misses Sherill Brown, Stella Cornforth, sister of the groom; Luara Butler, the bride's sister, and flower girl Bonnie Browett, niece of the bride. All carried toning colonial bouquets.

Jim Forde was best man and ushering guests were K. Widdifield and J. Blogg.

Harry Downard proposed the toast to the bride's happiness at the reception which followed at the Royal Colwood Golf and Country Club. The head table was centred with a three-tier wedding cake.

As her going-away outfit, the bride chose a deep coral-toned suit, teamed with beige hat and accessories.

Baby-Sitters Take Course

Sixty girls will gather at St. Aidan's United Church next Tuesday for the first lecture in baby-sitting of a four-week course, organized by the Victoria Jaycee-Ettes. The students are all members of the church's Canadian Girls In Training group which is headed by Mrs. E. D. Horne. Three more lectures will be given on the next three Tuesday evenings.

Lecturers for the new course are volunteers from the Naval Fire Service, FO1 Doug Smith and Fire Fighter Bob Noble. They will teach first aid and fire safety in the home, instruct on how to react in emergencies, give baby care and demonstrate procedures to be taken in situations involving prowlers and peeping Toms.

The enthusiastic response to the new course, says a Jaycee-Ette official, will probably result in it becoming a permanent project of the sponsors and the Naval Fire Service.

OKANAGAN HONEYMOON

Stagg-Belanger Wedding In Metropolitan United

A floor-length gown of pale yellow chiffon over taffeta was worn by Darlene Marie Belanger when she became the bride of Gary Elwood Stagg recently. Her watteau train, enhanced with lace appliques, extended back from a bridal bow at the waist. White self-fabric roses held her shoulder-length, tiered veil of pale yellow tulle. She carried a cascade bouquet of white gladioli and trailing shamrocks. Only jewelry was a pearl pendant and matching earrings, the groom's gift.

Rev. A. E. King heard vows exchanged between the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. V. Challenger of Port Coquitlam, who travelled to Victoria for the wedding, and the son of Mr. E. C. Stagg of Calgary. The double-ring ceremony took place in the parlor of Metropolitan United Church.

Mrs. Mary Crichton was the bride's only attendant. She was wearing a sheath dress of chiffon over taffeta in turquoise tone. Her bow headpiece with matching net veiling was in the same shade. She carried yellow marguerites and fern in her bouquet.

George Kazakoff was best man.

A reception followed in the Falmouth Road home of Mrs. Crichton.

For travelling on honeymoon to the Okanagan, the new Mrs. Stagg chose a suit in mint green tone, complemented with brown accessories and a muskrat jacket, a gift from her mother. Her corsage was of yellow roses.

Surpass Goal For Centennial

OTTAWA (CP)—The Federated Women's Institutes of Canada have surpassed their initial goal of raising $20,000 for a centennial fund for adult education among women of northern Canada.

The fund, begun three years ago, has already paid for a convention of the 11 Women's Institutes in the Mackenzie district of the Northwest Territories.

Contributions are still coming in, and further plans for using the money will be made at the annual meeting in Guelph, Ont., in June.

BELONGED TO BRIDE'S GREAT-GRANDMOTHER

Heirloom Locket for Talisman

A gold locket which belonged to her great-grandmother fulfilled the tradition of "something old" for Edna Grace Graham when she became the bride of Colin Taylor de Macedo. The locket was the only jewelry accent to her floor-length gown of white satin. The bodice of the gown was styled with sleeves ending in lily points. Her train of Chantilly lace extended to floor-length from the shoulders. A white rose held her tiered veil of lace, and she carried a bouquet of red roses with white stephanotis.

Rev. S. J. Parsons officiated at the ceremony uniting the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. Graham, 1015 Tolmie Avenue, and the son of Mr. and Mrs. C. J. de Macedo, 1875 Ventura Way. Centennial United Church was decorated with arrangements of iris and daffodils for the occasion. Mr. Graham gave his daughter in marriage.

During the signing of the register, W. Alexander sang "Because."

The bride's duo of attendants were matron of honor, her sister Mrs. R. Henson, and bridesmaid Miss Gail Crother. They were dressed alike in gowns of satin in aqua tones with matching headpieces of lace and net. They carried bouquets of white and aqua colored carnations.

R. Smith was best man and ushering guests were G. Uttke and B. Kirkby.

A three-tier wedding cake with pink and white decorations, made and decorated by Ed Fry, centred the head table at the reception following in Holyrood House. W. Alexander proposed the toast to his niece's happiness.

For travelling on honeymoon to the southern United States, the new Mrs. de Macedo chose a coffee-brown toned suit with black accessories and a corsage of yellow roses.

The newlyweds are now living at 516 Dallas Road.

TOWN STATUS REACHED SATURDAY

Tri-Celebration at Comox

COMOX—This quiet, green, up-Island village comes of age next month.

And not with a whimper but a bang.

Comox will have a triple celebration on April 15 to mark its change of status from village to town, its 21st birthday, and the honoring of Comox pioneers with Centennial pioneer medallions.

Celebration will centre on the Elk Hotel, a community landmark.

The village officially ceases to exist on April 1.

Growth at CFB Comox, influx of retired people, and natural growth has boosted the population over 2,500.

With the elevation to town from village the chairman of the municipal commission will become Mayor R. D. Ellis and commissioners will become aldermen.

PATIENT SHAKEN UP

Ambulance-Car Crash Sends 3 to Hospital

A small car crashed head-on into an ambulance on an emergency run over the Malahat Monday night.

Two ambulance attendants and the driver of the other car were sent to hospital, none of them critically injured. The ambulance's patient was not hurt in the crash.

Grant Bolton, 18, of Duncan, was being rushed to Royal Jubilee Hospital for possible emergency surgery. He completed the trip in the Langford fire department ambulance and is reported in "fairly good" condition today.

RCMP said the crash occurred on a gradual curve, about two miles south of Mill Bay. Debris was scattered for about 15 yards. The two vehicles came to rest about 300 feet apart.

BROKEN LEG

Henry Richard Williams of Duncan, driver of the northbound car, suffered a broken leg, back and chest injuries in the collision. He is in "fair condition at Royal Jubilee Hospital.

Atlin (Art) Conley of Wicks Road, Duncan, driver of the ambulance, and his assistant, Ralph MacKenzie of Duncan, are both in satisfactory condition at King's Daughters Hospital in Duncan.

A specialist was called in from Victoria to take a piece of glass from Mr. Conley's eye. Mr. MacKenzie suffered minor cuts.

Police said the crash took place in the southbound lane. Several thousand dollars damage was done to the six-month-old four-bed ambulance.

Phone Delay Hit In $10,000 Fire

COBBLE HILL — The B.C. Telephone Co. was under fire here today following a $10,000 blaze at Gravel Hill Supplies, Ltd., Cowichan Bay Road, on Monday morning.

Truck driver Eddy Smith in trying to raise the alarm said he was first connected to Mill Bay and subsequently Duncan Fire Department.

Duncan alerted Cowichan Bay volunteer firemen.

Gordon Price, Cowichan Bay fire chief, blamed the delay on the fact his department number is not listed in the telephone directory.

"The wrong number is in the book and it can't be changed until next year."

Jim Boyles, owner of Gravel Hill Supplies, said the telephone mixup meant a 15-minute delay in getting a fire department to the scene.

In the meantime fire gutted the workshops. When the Cowichan Bay firemen arrived they managed to save the offices and front end storage space despite trouble with their main pumper.

Lionel Huxtable of B.C. Telephone Company, Nanaimo, said the man who phoned in the alarm asked for Cobble Hill fire department.

MINUTE DELAY

Mr. Huxtable said: "There is no Cobble Hill fire department but the operator stuck with it until she tracked it down to Cowichan Bay. There was a loss of perhaps a minute.

"It's an awkward situation. There are six fire departments in the general area and I defy anyone to know where each one is.

"People should write the number of the fire department in their area down somewhere so it is right under their noses. People get excited in an emergency."

TANK EXPLODED

The fire started when Mr. Smith was working on a tractor.

The carburettor ignited and blew up the gas tank and flames quickly spread.

Smith raced for the phone as soon as he realized he couldn't control the fire himself.

Along with other employees he managed to drive other vehicles out of the workshops before the blaze took hold.

GIRL'S SKULL FRACTURED IN CAR CRASH

CHEMAINUS—Audrey Thomas, 6, is in "fairly good" condition at Royal Jubilee Hospital in Victoria after suffering a skull fracture in a Sunday night car crash.

She was a passenger with her father Gordon Thomas, Rose Street, Chemainus, when he crashed into Reg. Hankey's house on the Old Chemainus Highway.

The crash did $600 damage to the car and shifted the front porch of the house.

Thomas is out on bail after being charged with impaired driving.

ON TARGET. Gun used for planting conifer seedlings weighs only 17 pounds and is operated by no more pressure than is needed to drive a spade into the ground. Seedlings are loaded vertically into magazine and driven into ground by downward thrust. Inventor John Walters, director of UBC research farm at Haney, poses with gun he designed 17 years ago.

Industry Finally Fired Up Over Tree-Planting Gun

By TED GASKELL
Staff Reporter

HANEY — The forest industry has finally got around to trying out a planting technique which the commercial florist has been using for half a century.

The technique is the "container" planting of seedlings.

And the forest industry this year will try it out using a unique tree-planting gun invented by John Walters, director of the UBC's Research Forest at Haney.

This year 130,000 conifer seedlings will be planted on Vancouver Island.

Mr. Walters is pleased with the plans, not simply because his gun has finally been accepted by the industry, but because it marks a great step forward in planting methods.

●

"There has been no change in planting techniques for a hundred years," Mr. Walters said. "The mattock has been used for 50 or 60 years and it's quite probable that there's a picture of a peasant using a mattock on the walls of King Tut's tomb."

The mattock is a pick-like tool with a single flat blade which makes the hole for the seedlings to be dropped into, unprotected except for the soil clinging around the delicate roots.

The commercial florist is much more advanced. He sells his seedlings in pots or thin wooden, bottomless "bands" which can protect the roots during transplanting.

Mr. Walters goes one step further. With his system you needn't dig a hole. His gun shoots the seedling-loaded bullet into the ground.

"A man with a mattock can plant about 750 seedlings a day," Mr. Walters said. "With the gun the same man could plant between 7,000 and 8,000, almost as fast as he can walk."

●

The forest director, a former RAF pilot, came to Canada during the war as a flying instructor. Later he studied at UBC, was made acting director of the forest in October last year and this year was named director.

He got the idea for the gun as a student. He realized that some improvement must be made on the "arduous, back-breaking and archaic" mattock system.

His gun is a spring-loaded cylinder about three or four feet long and weighs 17 pounds.

The seedlings are in clips of 24 which are fed into the planting gun as bullets on a cartridge belt are fed into a machine gun.

The operator pushes down on the handle and drives the bullet into the earth. The spring recoil operates the loading mechanism and the next bullet drops in position, ready for the next planting thrust.

The bullets are plastic cups about three quarters of an inch across and two and a half inches long.

There's a split in the side and a hole at the base which weakens them and lets the growing roots shatter the plastic and spread out into the surrounding soil.

His gun, which resembles a compressed air jack hammer, wasn't accepted at first. He used it to plant seedlings in 1957 but the skeptics wouldn't believe that the roots of a seedling could break the plastic. Disappointed, Mr Walters threw the flourishing trees out.

His ideas are accepted now and it's high time, he feels.

"The area of forestry has been completely ignored," he said. "There has been no change in plant technology in 100 years and no change in nursery techniques in 50 years.

"Even farming has changed. The scythe, once the only tool for harvesting wheat, has disappeared."

Perhaps the mattock will disappear.

●

Proof of the gun planting method can be seen in the plantations at Haney were Mr. Walters method has produced trees which show six or eight inches annual growth in the early stages.

Mattock-planted trees alongside show about two inches of growth.

This year the Tahsis Company will use the gun to plant 10,000 seedling hemlocks on Vancouver Island.

The federal government will plant 120,000 on the Island and 40,000 will be added to the 80,000 already growing at Haney.

The Tennessee Valley Authority has ordered several guns and 10 will go to Mexico.

In 1965, Crown Zellerbach, MacMillan Bloedel and B.C. Forest Products experimented with the gun.

But it failed.

"They were planted in July in the middle of a six-week drought" said Mr. Walters, "and even the seedlings in the moist soil of the nursery couldn't survive that."

He said that B.C. plants about 10,000,000 seedlings a year "and that should be doubled." In North America there are about one and a half billion planted and this should be three or four times greater.

One might think this potential planting could make the inventor of the bullet and gun a rich man, but it won't.

Mr. Walters turned over his patents to UBC so they wouldn't be exploited to the detriment of the forest or agriculture industry.

●

A major modification might be forthcoming. Mr. Walters is now considering the possibility of developing a gun which could be operated automatically from a tractor or bulldozer so that seedlings could be planted as the vehicle moves.

Use of the gun isn't confined to the forest.

With a lighter plastic bullet, it could be used for planting vegetables. Even now in Haney experimental planting of blueberry cuttings is being carried out.

The 10,000-acre forest where Mr. Walters carries out his research was once part of Garibaldi Park.

Chief Don Williams directs work on reserve subdivision.

Revolution at Cole Bay!

By GLEN ALLEN

A North Saanich Indian chief has taken poverty, poor housing and a government by the tail and set a course for all of British Columbia's Indians.

Don Williams, chief and band manager of Cole Bay Reserve, is idea-man for a subdivision project which will rehouse all 122 residents of the reserve.

Complete with bay windows, indoor plumbing, furnace heating and a sewer system, it is the first self-help project of its kind in B.C.

The 12-home community is more than just "new houses for old".

★

"Not only are our houses bad," said Chief Williams, a burly 42-year-old who is also a well-known local sportsman, "but their arrangement isn't sensible either."

The chief said that with houses all over the 600-acre property, adequate fire protection, paved access roads, sewers and even good community relations aren't feasible.

The new development brings the band closer together.

Two of the houses in the development — he jokingly calls it "Bow 'n' Arrow Boulevard" — are already finished and a third is all but completed.

★

Foundations for three more will be dug next month.

The houses will lie along one paved street, each on a 100 by 100 foot lot. All are built to NHA standards. All will have at least two bedrooms and indoor plumbing (only two of the 16 homes on the reserve have bathrooms).

The houses and related services are being financed by band funds and an appropriation from the federal department of Indian Affairs.

Individual tenants can pay off their share on a band mortgage scheme, also a "first" for Indian reserves.

★

"This is the first development of its kind in B.C. as far as I know, "says Indian Affairs officer Noel Bayliss.

"Other bands up-island have similar ambitions but they haven't broken ground yet," he said.

Mr. Bayliss said the whole concept — the subdivision idea, the financing, and the internal impetus — is "revolutionary".

"Don deserves great credit for this," said Mr. Bayliss. "He came up with the facts and figures and justified the need to the authorities."

Thant Truce Plan Accepted by U.S.

UNITED NATIONS (AP)—The United States disclosed today it has accepted U Thant's latest Vietnam peace proposals calling for a general truce. It said it is prepared to begin discussions immediately to work out details.

The U.S. reply to the proposals of the United Nations Secretary - General was made public shortly after Thant unveiled his plan at a press conference.

The Thant plan envisages a ceasefire to be followed by preliminary talks aimed at convening a new Geneva peace conference.

Thant said he had sent his proposals March 14 to all the parties directly concerned and that some had replied. He said he does not consider any of the answers as a categorical rejection.

WANTS NEGOTIATIONS

The U.S. reply said:

"The United States accepts the three-point proposal in the aide-memoire of the secretary-general of 14 March 1967. . . .

"The United States believes it would be desirable and contributory to serious negotiations if an effective cessation of hostilities, as the first element in the three-point proposal, could be promptly negotiated.

"It would, therefore, be essential that the details of such a general cessation of hostilities be discussed directly by both sides or through the secretary-general, the Geneva conference co-chairmen or otherwise as may be agreed.

"The United States is prepared to enter into such discussions immediately and constructively."

INVOLVES VIETNAM

The U.S. note said it was assumed that the government of South Vietnam would be "appropriately involved throughout the entire process."

The secretary - general expressed concern over what he called the recent escalation of the fighting and expressed fears that the Vietnam conflict might spread unless checked.

Thant disclosed that he had presented his proposals orally to a North Vietnamese delegation on his recent visit to Burma and that he had later sent the plan in a memorandum to other interested countries.

Teachers Want Class Size Cut

British Columbia teachers voted Monday to walk out of any classroom in September which has more than 40 students.

There are 28 classes of 40 or more students in Greater Victoria at present.

More than 1,000 delegates to the B.C. Teachers' Federation convention in Vancouver unanimously approved the walkout action to culminate their campaign for smaller classes.

But Joseph Chell, Greater Victoria school superintendent, said class size is, to some extent, a matter of school organization.

He said that in the area the ratio of teachers to students is approximately one to 35 in elementary schools and one to 24 in senior schools.

However, some principals group students into larger groups for certain kinds of instruction.

Mr. Chell said there is no way of knowing now what the situation will be this fall. However, he added, "While it is up to principals to organize classes in their schools we will want to know the reason for any large classes."

Mr. Chell said he preferred not to comment on the teacher's decision to walk out of the larger classes.

The teachers' convention decided that responsibility for the walkout should rest with the federation or the local teachers' association, not the individual teacher.

They also voted in favor of "moral and financial support

NATO Bases in Mediterranean

Greece Expels Soviets

ATHENS (AP) — Two Soviet diplomats have been ordered to leave Greece by Wednesday night, apparently because they were involved with an alleged Soviet ring spying on North Atlantic Treaty Organization bases in the Mediterranean area.

The foreign ministry issued expulsion orders for Albert Zaharov, second secretary in the Soviet embassy, and Igor Ochurkov, a member of the Soviet commercial delegation. The foreign ministry said incriminating evidence had been compiled against them concerning activities incompatible with their status.

Unofficial sources believe the pair was part of the spy ring disclosed last week with the arrest of three Italians. Since then, one Soviet diplomat has hurriedly left Italy, two Russians have been expelled from Cyprus, several civilians have been arrested in Cyprus, and Swiss police said arrests may be made there.

The three Italians, charged Wednesday in Turin with espionage for the Soviet Union, are Giorgio Rinaldi, 39, an exhibition parachutist; his wife, Angela Maria, 52, and their chauffeur, Armando Girard, 40.

Reports circulated in Turin Monday that the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency wanted to talk to six American parachutists who knew Rinaldi and participated with him and an Italian group of chutists in a mass jump at Stuttgart, West Germany, in September, 1962.

The Americans were not identified, but the CIA was said to be interested in the contacts they had with Rinaldi.

Wrecked Tanker Bombed

RN, RAF Attempts Futile Against Oil

LAND'S END, England (AP) British bombers set the shattered tanker Torrey Canyon and the sea around it ablaze today in an effort to destroy spreading oil, but within two hours the fire went out.

More Royal Navy and RAF planes were immediately prepared for a fresh attempt to prevent the spread of oil from the giant freighter's cargo, which had already polluted 120 miles of England's southwest coastline.

First Royal Navy planes blasted the tanker with 1,000-pound bombs. Then RAF planes moved in with napalm in an attempt to keep the oil which seeped out of the bomb-shattered tanker burning.

Little of the tanker remained above water after the navy planes dropped their loads.

The decision to bomb what was left of the Torrey Canyon came on the same day that the Dutch salvage company, which had tried for days to liberate the ship from the rocks, announced its four tugs had been withdrawn.

How the bombing would help stop the seepage of oil toward the southwestern English coast was not made clear.

EXPERIMENT FAILS

The bombing followed a fruitless experiment designed to set the giant oil slick afire by shooting incendiary "bricks" into the area from an electric gun aboard a helicopter 50 feet up. The devices functioned but didn't ignite the oil.

Twin-jets Buccaneer aircraft, normally equipped with missiles and rockets, reverted to conventional bombs and moved on to the wrecked tanker, stuck on the Seven Stones Reef for the last 11 days, to complete the job the jagged rocks, the seas and storms had started.

They were ordered to deliver the coup de grace by the defence ministry after earlier attempts to set alight the giant oil slick from the Torrey Canyon appeared ineffective.

Moments after the Buccaneers dumped their loads on the Seven Stones — graveyard of every ship that ever got stuck on this reef — results were clearly apparent.

FLAMES SHOOT UP

The tanker, broken by the seas in three parts, burst into a mass of flames. Smoke rose 2,000 feet in the air.

Maritime experts predicted that the disaster, which threatens to pollute south Britain's holiday beaches for years to come, will force a drastic revision of British maritime law.

The dark scum coated 120 miles off England's most prosperous vacation coast, and the government set up emergency oil-fighting committees as the ooze spread up the Channel. But Navy Minister Maurice Foley, directing operations from Plymouth, said:

"Given the extra oil now flowinto off Cornwall, all the extra men and equipment in the world could not deal with this problem."

On shore, 1,500 troops and 1,000 firemen tried to remove

BUT PAPAL ENCYCLICAL CAUTIOUS

Population Control Backed

By BENNETT BOLTON

VATICAN CITY (AP)—Pope Paul gave a carefully qualified endorsement today to government action to control population but did not indicate any relaxation in the Roman Catholic Church's opposition to artificial means of birth control.

In the fifth encyclical of his reign, the Pope made clear that the "rightful freedom" of married couples who are opposed to artificial means of contraception, for moral reasons or under the guidance of their bishops, must be respected.

Vatican sources said however, the new attitude was likely to clear the way for government laws to make birth control information available to the public in places where Catholic pressure has opposed this in the past.

Some sources said it might even end organized Catholic opposition to government laws permitting distribution of contraceptive pills in welfare and public aid programs.

CITES SOCIAL PROBLEMS

The encyclical deals with the world's social problems. In the section on population growth, the pontiff declared that "the temptation is great to check the demographic population increase by radical measures." He added:

"Public authorities can intervene, within the limit of their competence, by favoring the availability of appropriate information and by adopting suitable measures, provided that these be in conformity with the moral law and that they respect the rightful freedom of married couples."

The encyclical, which appealed for social and economic justice, also said that unlimited capitalism is a "woeful system." It endorsed the redistribution among the poor of large estates which are "unused or poorly 'used' and criticized wealthy tax dodgers who transfer income abroad to escape obligations to aid the welfare of their countries.

The encyclical was entitled Populorum Progresio — on the development of Peoples—from its first words. It dealt with material things of the world rather than with religious or spiritual themes. The document bore the date of last Sunday, Easter, March 26.

The section of demography conceded that "too frequently an accelerated demographic increase adds its own difficulties to the problems of development: The size of the population increases more rapidly than available resources, and things are found to have apparently reached an impasse." But the pope returned to the church's traditional stand on birth control, stating:

"Finally, it is for the parents to decide, with full knowledge

'Leave Talks To Us,' Says Premier Ky

GIO LINH, South Vietnam (AP)—Premier Nguyen Cao Ky today offered his own three-step plan for peace in Vietnam.

A complete ceasefire, two-way talks between Saigon and Hanoi and an international guarantee might achieve peace, Ky told reporters aboard his private plane on a flight to the northern sector.

In answer to questions about peace feelers, Ky said:

"We are always hearing that the United States is starting talks with Moscow or Hanoi or somebody. Why? Why don't they stay in the background and let us deal with Hanoi and negotiate when the time is right?

"Too many points of view and proposals are confusing things. South and North alone should talk on the thing they know best—Vietnam."

Student Boycott Averted

President Malcolm Taylor this morning referred the controversy over the firing of three University of Victoria professors to the Uvic Joint Faculties.

His last minute decision averted a likely student boycott of classes Wednesday. (See earlier Page 17.)

The president has twice before refused to refer the issue to Joint Faculties.

But he changed his mind this morning after meeting with Prof. Tony Emery and Dr. Peter Smith, two middle of the road faculty, and Paul Williamson and Stephen Bigsby, both former presidents of the Students Council.

Mr. Williamson told a mass rally of 1,500 students at lunchtime that the president has promised to give faculty all the information relevant to the firings.

PERSONAL REPORT

President Taylor has also promised to report personally to students next week about the discussion in joint faculties.

Joint Faculties will meet next Tuesday and the president will report to students the following day.

Today's meeting of the students passed a resolution affirming support for the president in his action.

The matter of the firings will now be considered by faculty, one of the key demands that has caused the controversy for the last few weeks.

Mr. Bigsby told today's rally of students "I don't know to what extent the moderate element in the faculty will stand up and be counted. This decision the faculty will have to make themselves."

Mr. Bigsby also said that in supporting the president he is not sure that students are "throwing our support behind a pure knight in shining armor. But we are giving him the chance to do battle."

Mr. Bigsby said there are two camps in the university and he thinks that Dr. Taylor really sides with the liberals.

SOCIAL CREDIT

Gaglardi Denies Statement On Leadership

Highways Minister P. A. Gaglardi denied today that he had ever expressed an interest in the leadership of the National Social Credit party.

He made the statement in answer to comments passed by Walter Bowden, director of the Manitoba Social Credit League in Winnipeg.

Mr. Bowden is quoted as saying that Mr. Gaglardi had informed him some time ago that he would be interested in the party leadership but not if it involved running against Robert Thompson.

Mr. Thompson resigned from the leadership two weeks ago.

Mr. Bowden said he was surprised that it was taking so long for Mr. Gaglardi to state his views.

"I have not knowledge of ever making such a statement," Mr. Gaglardi said this morning. "And I have no further comment."

Earlier Mr. Gaglardi had expressed surprise that the Manitoba Social Crediters had gone on record as fully supporting him in any campaign for party leadership.

"I have been hearing noises about this for the last couple of months," he said. "They have come from various directions. I have no further knowledge of this and I have no further comment."

Asked whether he would consider the party leadership the usually vociferous minister again declined comment.

The Manitoba group is calling for a leadership convention in Winnipeg in October and has pledged its full support to Mr. Gaglardi if he decides to seek the office

Gov.-Gen. Naming Next Week

OTTAWA (CP)—Prime Minister Pearson indicated today that it will be next week at the earliest before the name of Canada's new governor - general is announced.

He told a news conference he expects simultaneous announcement; will be made in London and Ottawa of the successor to Gen. Georges P. Vanier who died three weeks ago.

Mr. Pearson sat reporters around the huge oval cabinet table following a cabinet executive meeting and said he will have announcements next week of significance. He declined to indicate their nature.

He was asked about possible cabinet changes and replied:

"I didn't mention cabinet changes."

He also said it would be "quite improper" at this time for him to discuss in public a successor to Governor - General Vanier.

The prime minister said he expects dates will be set soon for the visits of President Johnson and President de Gaulle to Expo 67. Normally they would first come to Ottawa before touring the world's fair site in Montreal.

With Parliament resuming April 3, he said, items that the government wants dealt with include the bill to unify the three armed forces into a single service, a report on Commons rules, and temporary spending authority for one month of the fiscal year which begins April 1.

NEW YORK—Barry Goldwater says he favors Richard Nixon as the Republican presidential candidate in 1968 but believes Sen. Charles Percy (R.-Ill.) is the only potential candidate acceptable to a majority of the GOP.

"Everybody says Nixon is the best-trained man for the job," said Goldwater, the 1964 GOP presidential candidate. "And then everybody turns right around and says he can't be elected. I don't believe that's true, but I don't see how to tear that image down."

As for Percy, Goldwater said he "might be the most dangerous against (President) Johnson, provided he could show he was really knowledgeable about foreign policy."

Goldwater said former Vice-President Nixon would go to the 1968 Republican convention with the most delegate strength but not a majority.

As for Gov. George Romney of Michigan, Goldwater said he was "handsome and a nice guy, but he just hasn't caught on."

The entertainer said Cimber, whose real name is Thomas Vitale Ottaviano, assaulted her four times last April, using his "fists and mouth."

She said she was unable to work after Cimber allegedly "kicked and stomped" and hit her "about the face and body in a fit of rage."

12 Firemen Limit for '67 Council Told

An extra 12 fire-fighters should be hired by Saanich this year, fire committee chairman Coun. Alan Newberry said today.

This would bring the department's strength to 68 men.

"I still think in one year to bring 12 men on is sufficient," he said.

Last year, an official of the provincial fire marshal's office recommended, after a survey, that 78 new men be hired — more than doubling the present 56-man staff.

This ran into a cool reception from council. One councillor said the report should be consigned to the waste basket.

Last September, fire chief Joseph Sutherland recommended 24 men be added to the department.

COMPROMISE

"It is the old story of compromise between the ideal and the practical," said Coun. Newberry.

"I will recommend 12."

He said a fire committee recommendation for hiring a training officer will come before council Monday night.

The proposal ran into opposition from three councillors earlier and was tabled.

Coun. Newberry said once that is decided, it "leaves us clear" to discuss manpower at Tuesday night's fire committee meeting.

Council will go through the provisional budget some time next month.

Last year, the fire department cost $443,755.

This year's provisional budget estimated the cost of fire protection at $588,455.

This allowed for the hiring of 24 new men for a full year, but it was emphasized at the time that no decision had been made by council and the addition was based on Chief Sutherland's report.

SHIP FIXES ENGINES; CITY TUG TURNS BACK

The Island Tug & Barge rescue tug Sudbury II turned for home again Monday when her mission was reported a false alarm.

The deep-sea tug was on her way to rescue a 10,000-ton Formosan freighter, Hai Ping, out of operation 2,500 miles in the Pacific with boiler trouble.

The freighter radioed she was under way again and the Sudbury was recalled.

She was to have reached the freighter, which was bound for Houston, by Sunday next.

Guerrilla War Opens In Bolivia Badlands

LA PAZ, Bolivia (AP)—President Rene Barrientos decreed a state of emergency Monday in the Bolivian southeast and announced the governments determination to crush a guerrilla movement.

He announced the air force was using napalm in attacks on the guerrillas.

Barrientos told reporters the Bolivian territory has been invaded by insurgents of various nationalities, mostly of Castro-Communist inspiration.

Barrientos said the air force is using napalm bombs and carried out raids Monday and Sunday. He added that 39 persons were jailed during the weekend and then sent into the interior of the country.

Gen. Jorge Belmonte Ardiles, temporary commander in chief of the armed forces, said he has information that Ernesto Che Guevara, Cuban Communist who dropped out of sight two years ago, has some connection with the Bolivian guerrilla movement.

Mines Must Increase Efficiency

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada's mining industry must strive for greater efficiency to maintain and increase its world wide markets, the Canadian Institute of Mining and Metallurgy was told today.

Pierre Camu, president of the St. Lawrence Seaway Authority, said transportation "at the lowest possible cost" is critical in efficiency, especially for producers of raw materials.

"The saving of a few cents per ton can open new markets, revitalize industries and strengthen competitive positions of consumers dependent on the raw material involved," he told a luncheon at the institute's annual meeting.

Developments of Labrador's iron ore was a prime example. If the seaway had not opened in 1959 to provide low-cost water transportation, "it is doubtful that these ore bodies could have been developed to their scale."

But there also is a need for greater participation of Canadians in "financing and management of this country's mining operations" and "a greater degree of secondary and tertiary processing in Canada, with a consequent need for new export markets."

FUTURE SHOPPERS

Computer Will Pay Your Bill

WASHINGTON (AP)—In the not too distant future, you'll walk into a supermarket, buy the week's groceries and order a computer to pay the bill without one penny or even a cheque changing hands.

That's the forecast of George W. Mitchell, a member of the U.S. Federal Reserve Board, in what he and the banking community term a "chequeless society."

"It's coming very, very hard," Mitchell said in an interview.

"By the early 1970s, the system might be set up. When people find out it's easier and more convenient to do business this way they'll take to the change."

Mitchell said computers will make the new system possible but won't eliminate coins, dollar bills or some cheques. But he and others foresee the "cash card" as the main money instrument of the future.

Who's Who, What's What In New Orleans Line-Up

NEW ORLEANS (UPI)—District Attorney Jim Garrison's investigation of the Kennedy assassination has bloomed into a national jungle of leads, charges, counter-charges and rumors.

One significant development has occurred since Garrison announced last month he had solved the assassination and would arrest everyone connected with it.

Three district judges, after a four-day hearing, decided the New Orleans prosecutor had enough evidence to hold businessman Clay L. Shaw, whom Garrison accuses of plotting the assassination.

Since Shw-s March 14-17 preliminary hearing, most of the debate has centred around the testimony of Garrison's star witness, Perry R. Russo.

Russo, a 25-year-old Baton Rouge, La., insurance man, testified that Shaw, presidential assassin Lee Harvey Oswald and pilot David W. Ferrie conspired to kill the president in September, 1963.

Subsequently:

—Raymon Cummings, a Dallas taxi driver, said he took Oswald, Ferrie and an "older man" to Jack Ruby's Dallas night club in 1963.

—Dean Andrews, an attorney who once gave Oswald legal advice in New Orleans, was indicted for perjury by a grand jury. Andrews said a man named Clay Bertrand—the name Garrison charges Shaw used as an alias—tried to get him to defend Oswald the day after the assassination.

—Gordon Novel, a witness subpoenaed by Garrision sold his New Orleans lounge, left town, and has not returned, despite a court order to come back as a "material witness" or be arrested. Novel showed up in various locations, announced Garrison's probe was a "fraud" and challenged the district attorney to take a lie detector test.

—Sandra Moffit, the girl Russo said he accompanied to a September, 1963, party in Ferrie's apartment at which the assassination was discussed, said in Omaha, Neb., she did not attend. She also said she never heard of Ferrie until 1965. Garrison obtained a court order for her arrest as a material witness.

—Layton Martens, a former roommate of Ferrie's, said Ferrie did not know either Oswald or Shaw. Martens has been subpoenaed to appear before the grand jury Wednesday.

A Boston dishwasher, Arthur E. Strout, said he was flying to New Orleans with important evidence to Garrison, reportedly a picture of the conspirators in Ruby's nightclub. Not much has been heard from Strout since then.

—David R. Kroman, an attorney on trial in a $3 million insurance fraud case, told a judge in Bismark, N.D., he was forced off a highway as he drove to Bismarck with documents proving Oswald did not kill Kennedy after all. The judge ordered a mental examination for him.

of the matter, on the number of their children, taking into account their responsibilities toward God, themselves, the children they have already brought into the world, and the community to which they belong.

"In all this they must follow the demands of their own conscience enlightened by God's law authentically interpreted, and sustained by confidence in Him."

This gave no indication of any change in the church's position that the rhythm method is the only permissible form of birth control.

The Pope said speed is necessary to bring balance between the world's rich and poor, although he warned against revolution. Instead he proposed:

1. "A great world fund, to be made up of part of the money spent on arms, to relieve the most destitute of this world."

2. A careful study of reorganization of various aid programs to keep them from being "scattered or isolated."

3. Higher taxes on the rich to meet the cost of aid, and higher prices on imported goods.

4 A revision of interest rates and systems of loan repayment "so as not to be too great a burden on either party."

5. Establishment of price regulations, production guarantees, support for new industries and controls upon world trade "without abolishing the competitive market."

Poster Contest Winners Named

Judging has been completed and winners named in the Bastion Theatre sponsored World Theatre Day Poster contest for children.

Group 1 (pre-school) first prize winner is Rosanne Farnden, 1064 Gosper Crescent, aged four; second, Erich Billung-Mayer, 2554 Arbutus Road, aged four; third, Jeremy Oldham, 511 Victoria Avenue, aged five.

Group 2 (Grades I to III), first, Christopher Sequeira, 3175 Alder Street (Grade II); second, Gary Farnden, 1064 Gosper Crescent (Grade III); third, Darlene Sagmoen, 3740 Carey Road (Grade II).

Group 3 (Grades IV to VII), first, Teresa Low, 2516 Blanshard (Grade VII); second, Jesse White, 784 Hillside (Grade VII); third, Adele Morris, Box 69, Sooke P.O. (Grade IV).

The prizes—$10 for the first, a book for second and a children's record for third, each with two passes to Bastion Theatre's holiday musical treat, The Enchanted Princess, are being presented on stage this week following performances which begin at 2 at McPherson Playhouse.

for any teacher who refused to teach a regular class of 40 or more pupils."

Les Isaacson, principal of Macaulay elementary school in Esquimalt and chairman of a federation committee on effective teaching and learning conditions, said 411 of the 8,032 B.C. classes—five per cent—now have 40 or more students.

Mr. Isaacson said this was an improvement from last year when seven per cent, or 509 classes, were overpopulated.

Meanwhile, he said, there were 5,222 classes of 35 or fewer students this year, compared with 4,211 in 1966.

"The class size is steadily dropping," he said. "Our campaign is evidently bearing some fruit."

A motion from the floor proposing a limit of 30 pupils in "split classrooms" containing more than one grade, was defeated.

'TOO TRADITIONAL'

Robald Brown, principal of a West Vancouver elementary school, said this limit couldn't be reconciled with the trend toward gradeless schools.

James Balderson, a teacher from Alberni, said large classrooms were turning teachers into highly paid baby sitters.

"I am a teacher," said Mr. Balderson. "I don't want to be a highly paid baby sitter. Are we going to be teachers or just tranquilizers for large classes of pupils in our care?"

Today's session of the three-day convention will debate resolutions from the Surrey and Abbotsford teachers' associations in support of strike action as "a means of implementing demands."

Gore Park Bylaw To Get Approval On Monday Night

A bylaw dedicating Gore Park in Central Saanich for the enjoyment of the public in perpetuity will be given its final hearing at Monday night's meeting of the municipal council.

The 16.75-acre park is on Greig Avenue in the Brentwood area and remains in its natural state. At last week's council meeting, Harold Andrew was authorized to restore a notice prohibiting the picking of the wild flowers that abound in the park.

The escaping crude dashed hopes of hotel - owners looking forward to a record tourist season and threatened to ruin fishing, Cornwall's other principal source of income.

The Torrey Canyon, owned by a subsidiary of Union Oil of California and flying the Liberian flag, broke up Sunday night as Dutch tugs were trying to pull her from the reef where she ran aground 11 days ago. The ship, insured for $16,500,000, was declared beyond salvage, making it the costliest marine wreck on record.

WEATHER SYNOPSIS

Skies over B.C. were generally cloudy early this morning with widely scattered showers along the coast and a few snow flurries in the Kootenay district. Minimum temperatures ranged from a chilly 13 at Smithers to 42 at Victoria.

Showers of rain or wet snow will persist in coastal areas today behind a Pacific disturbance which crossed the lower mainland early this morning. A clearing trend will develop along the coast this afternoon and evening, however, as a ridge of high pressure builds offshore. Mainly sunny weather is expected in most sections on Wednesday but temperatures will remain cool.

MONTREAL (CP)—The United States dollar in terms of Canadian funds was up 1/32 at $1.08⅛. Pound sterling was up 5/16 at $3.02 11/16.

NEW YORK (CP)—Canadian dollar up 1/32 at 92½ in terms of U.S. funds, pound sterling up 5/64 at $2.79 55/64.

MARKET SUMMARIES

Bank Issues Hold Gains

Bank stocks continued to hold gains on the Toronto stock market today, resulting from news that the Bank of Montreal will cut its prime lending rate and increase its interest on savings accounts.

However, most of the other major banks said they are not going to follow the move because it was "not justified at this time."

Imperial Commerce was up 1 to 72, Montreal and Royal ½ each to 67¼ and 81½ and Toronto-Dominion ¼ to 68¼.

AT TORONTO among other industrials Moore Corp. rose 2 to a high of 103 and Trans-Canada Pipe Lines ⅜ to 28. Quebec Natural Gas was off ¼ to 10⅞.

Western oils continued to rise after being stalled in profit taking Monday.

Canadian Superior added 1½ at 35⅛, Dome ⅜ at 55⅛ and Provo 20 cents at 5.85.

PCE Explorations gained 3 to 82 cents in speculative mines.

AT NEW YORK the market remained mostly higher in active trading.

Eastern Air Lines held a gain of three points or so while Pan American was the most heavily traded of the airlines, keeping a fractional gain.

Up a point or so were Outboard Marine, Federal Pacific Electric, Jones and Laughlin, International Nickel, Du Pont, Eastman Kodak and Xerox.

Down a point or so were Ford Motor, United Aircraft and General Foods.

AT MONTREAL the banking section, paced by the Bank of Montreal, posted its best gain in several weks.

Bank of Montreal rose one point to a new 1967 high of 67¾ as 1,788 shares changed hands.

Imperial Commerce was up 1¾ points at 72½ but only 584 shares were traded. Toronto-Dominion rose ⅞ to 68½, and Royal ¾ to 81½.

AT LONDON interest in equities was selective today. The over-all tone was steady, helped by sterling's firmness and cuts in U.S. prime rates.

Trans-Canada Pipe Lines was soft. Hudson's Bay Oil and Gas was a strong feature. Others with useful gains included International Nickel, Consolidated Mining and Noranda. New York Central was 10 points lower, reflecting the fall in the shares in New York.

AT VANCOUVER Arctic gained .17 to 1.17 on the mining section shortly before noon today.

Brenda put on .15 to 7.00 and Buttle Lake was up .04 to .48.

Consolidated Skeena lost .07 to .60 and Silver Titan went down the same amount to 1.38.

In the oils, Bata increased .01 to 2.75.

U.K. Holdings Reshuffled By Weston

LONDON (CP)—Canadian industrialist Garfield Weston appears to be engaged in a major reshuffle of his British holdings, giving his Canadian subsidiaries a bigger stake in his vast British investments.

In the latest move, Associated British Foods, of which the Toronto-born multi-millionaire is chairman, announced Monday night it would sell its northwestern grocery chain operated by Thomas Scott and Sons, bakers, to another Weston company, Fine Fare Holdings Ltd., for at least $9,000,000.

A spokesman said this operation will continue the process of separating Weston retailing companies from his manufacturing companies.

Fine Fare is controlled by Dicola Ltd., of Toronto.

Two other grocery chains, Cooper Stores and Hudson Brothers, also were recently transferred from Associated British Foods to Fine Fare for some $5,000,000.

The Scott company controls about 250 food branches, with 53 supermarkets, concentrated around Manchester, Liverpool and northwest Wales.
